SUMMARY.

There is intense irritation in France respecting Germany's latest demand concerning the affray at Casablanca.

The newspapers unanimously support the refusal of the French Government to apologise to Germany.

The report of the French Commissary of Police at Casablanca fully justifies the action of the French officers.

The French Minister for Foreign Affairs states that pourparlers continue with a view to arriving at an agreement.

M. Delcasse, on appearing in the lobby of the Chamber of Deputies, received an ovation.

Several German newspapers are menacing in their language.

A semi-official communique at Berlin states that Germany must unconditionally insist on its demand.

It is reported that Germany is willing to arrange a settlement on the basis of mutual regrets for what occurred at Casablanca.

There is considerable feeling in St. Petersburg at Germany's demand from France before arbitration is entered upon.

Fears are expressed that Germany is seeking diversion abroad from the difficulties of her internal situation.

Sixteen thousand Servian troops occupy the heights around Belgrade. The troops on the frontier near Bosnia have been reinforced.

A great demonstration is being organised in Belgrade in honour of King Edward's birthday.

Austrian troops are digging trenches along the Servian border.

Bulgaria complains of the exaggerated pretensions of Turkey in the negotiations between the two States.

Madame Melba has warmly espoused the women's suffrage movement.

There are indications of an early settlement of the Lancashire cotton trade dispute.

A bill has been submitted to the Duma enabling Russian peasants to own land apart from ownership as a member of the Commune.

The suppressed Calcutta newspaper "Yugantar" has reappeared at Chandernagore, and urges Bengalis to exterminate Europeans.

The South African Convention considering national union has adjourned from Durban to Capetown owing to the excessive heat of Durban.

The Australian Rugby League's team of footballers defeated Yorkshire County.

The Yass-Canberra district has now been selected by both Houses of the Federal Parliament as the capital site.

A ballot was taken in the Senate yesterday. The voting was equal for Yass-Canberra and Tumut, each site securing 18 votes.

A fresh ballot was taken after a long dispute, the result being:—Yass-Canberra, 19; Tumut, 17.

Great excitement prevailed at Yass when the news of the final selection was made known.

Flags were hoisted on the principal buildings, and bands played in the streets.

In the House of Representatives the alliance between the Labour party and the Deakin Government was declared at an end.

Mr. Fisher announced that the Labour party could no longer support the Ministry.

The Prime Minister said there had never been any secret treaty, article, or agreement between them.

The House adjourned on Mr. Deakin's motion to the usual hour on Tuesday.

The industrial position at Broken Hill is much more hopeful.

The delegates of the combined unions finally adopted the draft agreement to be presented to the managers on Wednesday.

The agreement is on the lines previously indicated, but a 44 hours week is claimed.

The president and secretary of the A.M.A. had a conference with the president of the Mining Managers' Association.

They stated subsequently that the position was very hopeful.

Ministerialists express the opinion that the Premier acted correctly in regard to Mr. M'Gowen's censure motion.

On the other hand Labourites and their sympathisers emphatically support Mr. M'Gowen's view of the matter.

The public meeting convened by the Labour party at the Protestant Hall last night was attended by about 2000 people.

Mr. M'Gowen sought to justify the withdrawal of his party from the Assembly.

He said that rather than tolerate the indignities heaped upon them they would go back to their trades.

A motion was carried declaring that the Premier's action was a deadly blow to Parliamentary Government and an insult to the workers.

Additional members of the Rockchoppers' Union were proceeded against in the Industrial Court yesterday.

The further hearing of the cases was adjourned until Wednesday, as there was a prospect of a settlement of the strike.

The Federal Government's proposals for new works and buildings were passed in the Senate.

The first appeal against the Government valuation under the Closer Settlement Act is that of the Peel River Estate.

A tribunal has been appointed to take evidence and determine the value.

About 500 acres of the resumed portion of the Peel River Estate are to be set apart for working-men's blocks.

The Premier yesterday signed the Murray Waters Agreement on behalf of New South Wales.

The works provided for by the agreement will be put in hand as soon as the necessary legislation has been passed in each State.

Mr. F. J. Stephen, a Glasgow shipbuilder, visiting Sydney, says he has never known such severe depression in the shipbuilding industry.

England, he remarks, is not experiencing the depression more than any other country.

Mr. Stephen thinks, however, that signs of renewed prosperity are already appearing.

He said the State's financial outlook was not promising, and he feared it would become imperative to adopt direct taxation.

A secret committee at Atherton (Q.) organised a torchlight procession to Chinatown.

They threatened to destroy the Chinese quarter unless it was vacated within 24 hours.

On Thursday white men evicted Chinese from their farms, and burnt 18 of their houses.

FARMER'S CLOSE ON MONDAY, IN HONOUR OF THE KING.

COOL, YOU CONQUER,

FLUSTERED AND FLURRIED,

YOU FAIL AND FALL.

Did it ever occur to you that it is always the Cool man who conquers, while the man who gets flustered and flurried fails and falls? Napoleon, cool, ourageous, and calculating, conquers again and again, and his vanquisher (at last), Wellington also conquered by courage and coolness; and instances might be multiplied.

Again, has it ever occurred to you that bodily and physical comfort conduces to coolness mentally, and even morally. Just think over it a moment, and you will find there is much in our contention. So we advise you to be

WHAT HIDDEN VIRTUE IS THERE IN THIS GLOVE?

"Hark you, mistress, what hidden virtue is there in this glove, that you would have me wear it? Is't good against sore eyes, or will it charm the toothache. . . . Or has it so concealed a providence to keep my hands from bands?"—Scornful Ladie (Beaumont and Fletcher).

Now, the "virtues" of Farmer's Gloves are not "hidden." They are apparent to the purchaser, and the longer they are worn the more apparent they become. "Farmer's Gloves"—why, the mention of them suggests quality. Note the following:—

EXTRACTS FROM THE MELBOURNE PRESS.
THE PRINCE CHAP.
The ARGUS says:—"A frank, wholesome, and pretty comedy-drama, containing a great deal of engaging domesticity, and at times brief moments of dramatic intensity, feelingly and modestly acted by a thoroughly equipped all-round capable company, that never missed a point or failed to press home a legitimate situation. Such are the merits of the quaintly-titled 'Prince Chap' that found instant favour from an overflowing audience on its first production last Saturday night at the Princess's Theatre."
The AGE says:—"'The Prince Chap,' staged at the Princess's Theatre on Saturday night, is a decided variation on the reigning mode. It has something of the quality of modern robust drama, with the moral tone of a fairy story. It is a play that advertises the better side of human nature, particularly on the masculine side. It is strong in what is called sympathetic interest. For these reasons it should interest the great army of conservative theatregoers who hold to the opinion that, as a stage attraction, the 'raptures and roses' of vice are in some danger of being overdone. Moreover, it may be said of 'The Prince Chap' that it is daintily, even charmingly, presented."

EXCELLENT PIANOS
FOR MODERATE INCOMES.
There are times when the cost of a piano stands in the way of a family enjoying all the musical opportunities that a really good instrument affords. This is a fact that we long ago took into serious consideration, with a view of providing instruments to meet a very moderate expenditure, at the same time to incorporate as far as possible the leading features of those much higher priced. Our is Overstrung—Iron-framed—Trichord—with a scale of seven octaves, which constitutes an instrument capable of withstanding the severest climate, while the tone is sweet and pure, adapted for either singing or playing, to a degree that will be fully appreciated by all lovers of music. The case is an elegant Walnut, and modelled in various artistic designs.
Each instrument carries a ten years' guarantee, though with ordinary care will last a lifetime. Our is a somewhat cheaper model, and especially commended for the heavy wear of schools and young pupils.
Either of these instruments may be purchased on our extended payment plan, so that the cost is very lightly felt.
Our aim has been to give the very fullest value possible, and we feel justified in saying that these two instruments in that respect cannot possibly be approached by any others in Australia.
EASY EXTENDED PAYMENTS ARRANGED.

CATHERINE'S CHILD.

BY MRS. HENRY DE LA PASTURE.

[ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.]

Miss Dulcinea did not know whether to laugh or to cry. She watched the insulted Clara drive away, and when she was quite out of sight ventured to the north door of the dairy, and uttered a timid call or two upon her own account.

"Here I am, auntie," said Lily, and she slid down the great oak at the back of the cottage with a suddenness which caused Miss Dulcinea to scream aloud. "I thought of King Charles, you know, and climbed up in a minute, and Sally ran just underneath me to the farmyard. It was so funny!"

"Promise me never to do so again. You might have broken your neck, my darling. And oh, what a scene poor Lydia will make! Oh dear, oh dear, that there should be so much trouble and unpleasantness in this world on such a beautiful evening as this!" said poor Miss Dulcinea, bursting into tears.

"Was Aunt Clara so very horrid?" said Lily, putting her arms round the old lady's neck protectingly. "Never mind, auntie, all you have to do now is to write a telegram to papa, and ask him to say I may stop with you till Cousin Catherine comes home."

"The sense of the child!" said poor Miss Dulcinea; "why didn't I think of it before?" and she sat down and wrote out with trembling fingers a message to her nephew, and desired Johnny Roper to convey it to the post-office immediately.

The single clue supplied by the policeman at the corner of Belgrave Square had multiplied into a thousand others, bewildering by very reason of their number and variety, before the day fixed for the funeral of Sir Cecil Adelstane, which was the fifth after Philippa's disappearance.

It would seem that tall schoolgirls, in blue serge dresses and black straw hats, abounded in every quarter of London and the suburbs; and that they all answered minutely to the description of Philippa, and had been observed at one hour or another of that fateful Saturday travelling by rail or by road in every possible direction.

Paragraphs with sensational headings—"Abduction of an Heiress," "Mysterious Disappearance of Sir Cecil Adelstane's Niece on the Day of his Death," "Supposed Elopement of the Greatest Heiress in England"—appeared in the daily papers, after the insertion of the advertisements and the offers of large rewards for any information leading to her discovery. Explanations of similar mysterious disappearances of young girls were recalled, and related at length in the newspapers, and David Moore spent the most anxious days and nights of his life in the Ralts' automobile, following up every suggestion with the energy of despair, and interviewing hundreds of persons who were anxious to obtain any portion of the proposed rewards, though they had nothing to offer in exchange.

Catherine became but the ghost of herself in those five days. The look in her great eyes, wild with misery, and unnaturally bright with sleeplessness, haunted David's thoughts, and drove him to make incredible exertions, but all to no purpose.

He refused to leave London to attend the funeral at Welwysbere, and no one proposed that Catherine should do so. Her days and nights were possessed with the thought of her child, and she showed not the slightest interest in the information that Sir Cecil had appointed her executrix of his will and trustee of Philippa's inheritance, jointly with George Chilcott. All the necessary business was left to George, who was surprised and touched by this mark of the esteem in which poor Sir Cecil had held him, and who was perforce obliged to leave the search for the missing heiress to others, while he attended first the inquest and then the funeral of his friend and neighbour, and listened to the explanations of Mr. Ash.

The yacht was left to Augusta, but the Abbey was not, as she expected, to be hers for life, but was willed direct to Philippa, to be maintained or let, until her coming of age or marriage, according to the discretion of the trustees; while the Adelstane jewels, and every farthing Sir Cecil possessed outside his marriage settlements went with the estate.

Augusta in the midst of her grief, and the shock of seeing herself for the first time in widow's weeds, found time to be astonished and offended at the provisions of he late husband's testament.

Of course I bought the house in Belgrave Square and my river bungalow with my own money; and my own diamonds are finer than anything the Adelstanes ever owned, though they may not be so old," she said to Lady Grace; "but really one might say I owe nothing to poor Cecil, at this rate, except the yacht, which, of course, I shall sell. How can a woman go yachting by herself? And if she took anyone with her there would only be a talk. But I did think I should have had the Abbey for my life."

"Perhaps it was not in his power."

"That is all nonsense. I am sure it must have been."

"You know you always hated the place, Augusta."

"I shall hate it more than ever now that it is left away from me so oddly," said Augusta, weeping. "Oh, Grace, how little did we think when we left this house only a few weeks ago—you and me—that when we came back I should be—a widow!"

"Poor Augusta!"

"Just fancy, Grace, if only poor Cecil had come up to town with us instead of bothering himself over this stupid business with the agent, he would have been alive now."

With such reflections, oft repeated, did Augusta beguile the hours that elapsed between the funeral, and reading of her late husband's will, and her departure from the Abbey, and her bosom friend found her trite ejaculations excessively wearisome, as she sat patiently by the side of Lady Adelstane's couch, in her carefully darkened boudoir.

"I suppose I look too dreadful," wailed Augusta. "I can't sleep at night, thinking what has become of Philippa, and now this dreadful blow! I feel all this trouble must have made its mark on me, and I hardly dare look at my own face in the glass, feeling as I do!"

"Black is very becoming to you," said Lady Grace; "but, of course, crying is not becoming to anyone. If I were you I should try not to cry any more. What good does it do?"

"That is what Blanche says. She is so unsympathetic," sobbed Augusta resentfully. "Yet if I show the slightest interest in anything practical, she is ready to hint that I never cared for poor Cecil at all. One's relatives are very poor comfort in time of trouble, I must say."

"They are very poor comfort at any time, so far as I have ever been able to make out," said Lady Grace. "Try not to talk about it, Gussie, and you will grow calmer."

But Augusta had no idea of growing calmer until the first days of mourning should be over, and gave full vent to her emotions upon every opportunity.

"How her ladyship do take on," said the west-country servants admiringly. But Pilkington contented himself with a dark reminder that shallow water made most noise.

George Chilcott proposed to escort Augusta back to town on the morning after the funeral; when, as Philippa's trustee, he felt doubly bound to devote himself to the search. He had replied to Miss Dulcinea's telegram with a peremptory request that she should keep Lily at Shepherd's Rest, and as he wrote a line to the same effect to Clara, the effort to reclaim the child had been abandoned by his mother and sister, and George did not, in the midst of his new cares, give much thought to his little daughter, of whose happiness he felt assured, and whom he had not time to visit.

But as he stood upon the platform at Tiverton, watching the arrival of the Welwysbere carriage, and the almost reverential reception of the new-made widow, whose face was hidden by an opaque crape veil, and who leant the weight of her affliction heavily upon the arm of her good-natured brother-in-law, followed by Blanche Ralt and Grace Trumoin, George was startled by a sudden timid touch upon his arm.

There stood little Lily, looking up at him with great frightened eyes, though a furtive smile hovered about her face, which was something plumper and rosier than when he had seen it last.

"Why, my little Lily," he said, surprised and startled at this unexpected apparition. He lifted her from the ground to brush her forehead with his moustache. "Has Aunt Dulcinea brought you down to see your dad off? That is very good of her."

"Don't be angry, papa," faltered Lily.

"You came alone?" George looked vexed and a worried pucker rose between his brows. "That was not right, Lily."

"No, no, Sally came. I go for walks with Sally," and she indicated a cheerful ruddy countenance in the background of Augusta's solemn train of black-clad retainers. "Aunt Dulcinea said I might come—she did not like to intrude——" said Lily, in an awe-struck whisper, with another quick glance towards the black-clad group. "But she said no one would mind me, as I am so little. She did not know why I wanted so much to come."

"No to see me?" said George, relieved of his fears lest Lily should have relapsed into evil ways under the feeble rule of poor Miss Dulcinea.

"I wanted to see you, daddy," said Lily, with the coaxing accent which Clara deprecated, and she laid her face against the big hand. Then she looked up imploringly and cried: "Oh, daddy, take me with you!"

"Why, I thought you wanted so much to stay at Shepherd's Rest? Wasn't that what you wanted?"

"Yes, yes, I like being there," said Lily almost feverishly. "But it's not that, it's not that! Oh, daddy, daddy, I want to go to Cousin Catherine."

"My dear," said George gently, "don't you know Cousin Catherine is in very great trouble now? She couldn't think of you or of anything else."

"I know, I know, but I don't want her to think of me. I want to comfort her," said Lily, clasping her little thin hands with a gesture so like Delia's, that George almost started. "I daresay you think it would be impossible, a little girl like me; but, oh, you don't know how Cousin Catherine cried at night when Philippa went to London, and she said it comforted her then to have me with her, and I am sure it would comfort her again now. Oh, do take me, I could comfort her at night," said the child almost passionately, "and everyone says it will kill her if Philippa is never found any more."

George Chilcott pulled his moustache irresolutely. His heart inclined him to take Lily to London.

"If I thought it would comfort Catherine," he said, and looked appealingly at Lady Grace and Mrs. Ralt, who had greeted him in silence, and now stood looking down at the little anxious questioner, too much absorbed in her request to have even noted their proximity. "But I couldn't take you in any case to-day; there would have to be all sorts of arrangements made. I'll think about it, Lily, and perhaps send for you later."

"But there need be no arrangements, for I have made them all," said the little creature, trembling with hope. She was holding a tightly-packed brown-paper parcel under her left arm, which she now produced and exhibited. "I have brought my nightgown and my toothbrush, and a pair of shoes, and three clean pockethandkerchiefs, in case you should say yes. And I have my Sunday frock on. I am all ready for London, papa, I am, indeed!"

"Poor little thing!" said Lady Grace.

"Such forethought ought to be rewarded," said Mrs. Ralt, her hearty tones somewhat subdued to attune with her mourning garb. "I believe it might do Catherine good, if anything would," she said. "Let's take her along, Mr. Chilcott Grace, and I will look after her, and if Catherine doesn't want her, why, there's no harm done, for I'll take her to my hotel, and welcome."

"It's most awfully kind of you," said George; "but there's Miss Dulcinea to be thought of."

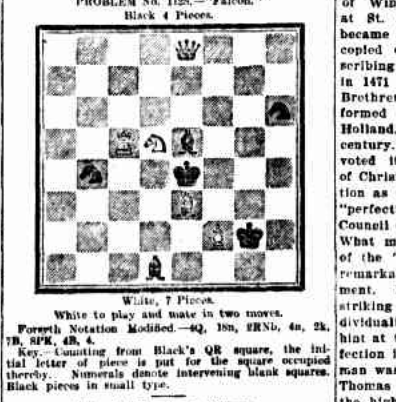

"I have written a letter for Sally to take back; she has it in her pocket. I tried to think of everything," said Lily's small treble. "I didn't want nobody to be anxious about me."

THE CHAMPIONSHIP OF THE WORLD.

Ruy Lopez.

White—Tarrasch.			Black—Lasker.
1. PK4	PK4	17. KtxB(d)	PxKt
2. KtKB3	KtQB3	18. PQB4(e)	QB3(f)
3. BKt5	KtKB3	19. QRQ	KtK
4. Castles	KtxP	20. QKt4(g)	BB3(h)
5. PQ4	BK2	21. RK2	PK3
6. QK2	KtQ3	22. QKt3	QK2(i)
7. BxKt	KtPxB	23. PKR3	PQ
8. PxP	KtKt2	24. KRQ2	BK4
9. RK	Castles	25. BR6(j)	QKt3(k)
10. KtB3	KtB4	26. BB4	BK3
11. KtQ4	KtK3	27. BxP	QB4(l)
12. BK3	KtxKt	28. QKt4	QxQ
13. BxKt	PQB4(a)	29. PxQ	RK5
14. BK3	PQ4	30. BxP	RxR
15. PxP e.p.	BxP	31. RxR	PKR4
16. KtK4(b)	BK2(c)	32. RQ6	Resigns.

Notes by Mr. J. H. Blackburne.

(a) This move was introduced by Teichmann soon after his return from South America, and it has been named the Rio de Janeiro defence. Lasker thinks it the best.

(b) Up to this point the moves are identically the same as in the eighth game, and this move is certainly an improvement upon QR5, as played on that occasion.

(c) The plausible looking move is PxBch, but it would not have turned out satisfactorily, for suppose BxPch, 17. KxB, QR5ch, 18. KKt, QxKt. 19. BxP, QxQ, 20. RxQ, BR3, 21. RK7, KEB, 22. PR4, intending RQ or R5, according to Black's play.

(d) White must have seen that he could have taken the BP, but probably dismissed it as not being decisive enough. Something like the following might have happened: 17. BxP (not KtxP, for in that case BxKt followed by QKt4 would win a piece)—BxB, 18. KtxP, BxP, 19. QRQ, QKt4, 20. QK3, QKt3, 21. QKKt3, and White has a slight advantage, but perhaps not sufficient to win. Black could also, in reply to BxP, play RK, then follows 18. BxB, RxKt, 19. QKt5 RKt, 20. BKt3, with the better game.

(e) Black QP is now very weak.

(f) One the same lines as in the eighth game, but in this position it does not turn out so well; if Black had played RK, and then to K3, supporting the weak QP, and at the same time threatening RKt3, it would have been more to the purpose.

(g) Taking immediate advantage of Black's weak play.

(h) Of course, he cannot allow White to play QQ7.

(i) If, instead of this, Black had played RxP, then White would have obtained the better position, as follows:—22. RxP, 23. RxP RQ, 24. RxRch, QxR, 25. PQR3, PKR3, 26. RQ2, and ought to win.

(j) This is all very pretty, and must have somewhat startled the onlookers, for if QxB, then QxR. BB4 would have been equally effective, but Tarrasch, no doubt, considered that it would be better first to force the queen off the king's file by the threatened mate.

(k) He could also have played PKt3.

(l) It appears Lasker was short of time, which probably accounts for his not seeing that PKR4 would still have given drawing chances.—"Times."

CURRENT LITERATURE.

THOMAS A KEMPIS.

Most famous of all books of devotion is the "Imitatio Christi" of Thomas a Kempis. Printed and reprinted in many languages, and in innumerable forms, it is as popular with the reader of quiet mind to-day as it was in the fifteenth century. It first appeared in Latin of a singular sweetness in 1486, and the first English version was dated 1503. Whytford's version, chosen as the basis for yet another reprint by Chatto and Windus, first appeared in 1556, and has been constantly reprinted. The scholar will regret that it has been thought necessary to partially modernise the text, but mid-sixteenth century English would unfortunately present some difficulties to the general reader. Apart from this necessary drawback, the volume is all that can be desired. Very great care has been taken with the typography; the illustrations are choice and carefully "in character," and even the binding is an adaptation of fifteenth century work. A lengthy historical account of Richard Whytford is prefixed. He was an indefatigable worker, and sent out from his monastery of Sion House a long series of translations. During the "dark days" of Edward VI., when the monastery was suppressed, he devoted himself to the study of the "Imitatio," and under Mary his version was issued by the Queen's Printer. Those who want more than the "Imitatio" can consult the "Omnia Opera" of Pohl., of Bonn—a monument of painstaking editing. Thomas a Kempis makes a strong appeal to the English religious instinct, less by reason of his particular type of mysticism than by his childlike love for the Divine Person of Christ. "Let it be our chief study to meditate upon the life of Jesus Christ!" That opening sentence of the "Imitatio" sums up its whole counsel, and this devotion—which dreadful Americans have labelled "Christology"—breathes even more fully in the less known work of a Kempis. He was for a number of years sub-prior of the Canonry of Mount St. Agnes, and 30 of his addresses to novices there are extant, in which his affection for the Divine Master finds even fuller expression. In an edition of the sort before us a few notes on a Kempis himself would have been useful to many readers. Born about 1380, he was educated at Devonter, and came under the influence of the school of Windesheim. He made his profession at St. Agnes' in 1406, where in time he became a canon regular. He is said to have copied out the whole Bible, besides transcribing a multitude of other works. He died in 1471 in his 92nd year. The "Society of Brethren of the Common Life" had been formed by Gerhard Groot, of Deventer, in Holland, about the middle of the fourteenth century. Forswearing monasticism, it devoted itself specifically to the "Imitation" of Christ. It thus raised the important question as to whether laymen could strive after "perfection" as well as regular clergy. The Council of Constance decided that they could. What may be called the practical mysticism of the "Imitatio" has preserved for us in a remarkable way this pre-reformation movement. It was singular enough. The most striking thing about the "Imitatio" is its individualism. There is not a word in it to hint at the Brotherhood of Man. Sinless perfection is the goal for one's own soul, and no man was ever less his brother's keeper than Thomas a Kempis. So far removed is even the highest virtue of monasticism from the modern ideal of militant Christianity—work while ye have the light!

AMERICAN PAINTING.

The "Story of American Painting" (Hodder and Stoughton, through Angus and Robertson) is interestingly told by Mr. Charles H. Caffin. The story begins with the first quarter of the eighteenth century with the painter of portraits, Smibert, brought out by Bishop Berkeley on the occasion of his ill-starred colonising venture. Several of these old portraits are reproduced, and they are very characteristic of the "old colonial" days. The first native-born painter is Benjamin West (1738-1820), but his career belongs more to England than America. The narrative sketches briefly the main currents of American painting, the most important factor, of course, being the rise and continuance of French influence. The half-tone reproductions (rather crude) themselves form a convenient summary of the evolution of American art—if there is such a thing. Up to now it has been almost wholly imitative, and the few great initiators have been, in a sense, American artists; but their work can hardly be described as American art. Speaking of the pictures at the Paris Exhibition of 1900, the author says that American work was characterised by "capability, moderation, sanity, and perhaps a lack of individualism"—and this he admits is "too negative a virtue, a little fibreless and lacking in marrow." This he accounts for by "insincerity of sex relations," and compares the state of American painting with that of the American novel. The parallel is a very just one. "The necessity of prettiness, of not giving offence to the most fastidious, and of exploiting the obvious, has been urged upon them, until it is small wonder that a great deal of American painting is characterised by irreproachable table manners rather than by salient self-expression." "The taste of our time, in fact, runs to superficial sentimentality, and the painter is apt to respond to it." A critic who can tell the brutal truth in this way certainly deserves to be read, even if his comments are occasionally inane. Usually, however, he is direct and sensible enough, and readers will gather from his pages a pretty accurate idea of the progress and present condition of art in America.

LAFCADIO HEARN.

Dr. G. M. Gould in "Concerning Lafcadio Hearn" has produced a remarkable study of a remarkable man. It is a case in which biography is of little use as interpretation. The dominating factor in the making of Hearn, his morbid vision, cannot be so accounted for. Hearn mentally and spiritually was an echo, and little else. He created or invented nothing. His unique instinct is his instinct for colour. Born in 1850 on one of the Ionian Islands, his father was an Irishman, and his mother a Greek. Shipped to Ireland, he was brought up in Roman Catholic schools, seemed to be "bad," and was shipped to some relatives in Cincinnati. Gould met him first in 1889—so shy that he would write letters from the next room rather than speak. He had been about twenty-one when he arrived in Cincinnati in 1872, and by some freak of luck became a proof-reader. He began to write, diffidently, for a western daily newspaper—12 and 15 columns in a single Sunday issue. He prowled about in dark corners of the city, digging strange stories, and presently showing a startling strength in handling gruesome subjects. The genesis of his imagination is all mystery, but almost at once it showed itself—bizarre, commanding, complete. Essentially an Oriental mind, it was, with no relation to the body that imprisoned it, a strange exotic weed, flowering on strange, crabbed soil. Presently he migrated to New Orleans, where, curiously enough, he found something like affluence, and where he completed his magnificent series of translations. But his restless soul hurried him on. Luckily Gould persuaded him to go to Japan. Strangely enough, after 14 years there he could not read a Japanese book—strange when we remember how marvellously he caught and held the spirit of Japan. But that was because his soul belonged to the East—it was the West that was inexplicable to Hearn. Mr. Gould here gives us the fullest account of his accomplishings in literature, and an important bibliography is appended. (From Dymock.)

UGANDA TO-DAY.

In "The Baganda at Home" Mr. C. W. Hattersley gives an interesting narrative of life and work in Uganda from a missionary point of view. While the main purpose is to explain the progress of Christianity in the protectorate, many matters of secular interest are touched on. Chapters are given to the land and its products (the possibilities of cotton-growing and the rubber industry), the lives of the people, the ravages of sleeping sickness, and so on. The journey to Uganda now presents but little difficulty, and the stream of tourists is rapidly increasing. Ironically enough there is no English passenger line yet—the traveller goes by a French or German boat. The Uganda railway, however, is a joy for ever. It stops for meals four times a day in the most sensible fashion, and although it has been running several years you can still look out of the window and observe strange wild beasts in their haunts. Nor is man much more changed than the beasts; at the railway stations you see those curious Wanandi folk who make themselves a grass tail—out of instinctive respect for Mr. Darwin. This line, it is good to know, earned a profit of £80,000 last year. Four railway steamers now run on Lake Victoria Nyanza. In Uganda itself horses cannot live, and most travelling is done by rickshaw. The bicycle is making headway among the natives, and is in general use by Europeans. Two motor cars have been imported, but their fate has yet to be decided. Telegraph offices are to be found, though occasionally a lion or two walk in in an absent-minded way. Uganda itself is a succession of small hills, with intervening swamps, that can be drained. Rivers abound, but move so slowly that the papyrus chokes their course, so that they look like a grass field. Two hundred and fifty thunderstorms a year is a fair average, and this distributes the rainfall very irregularly. (Religious Tract Society.)

AN ATLAS OF STATISTICS.

Professor Hickmann's "Geographical Statistical Pocket Atlas" (Cole) is a very useful little example of graphic methods. Graphic diagrams printed in colour put on one page of paper a summary of such information as growth of population in the 19th century, division of population according to occupation, areas of principal States of the world, strength of armaments, commerce, mileage of rails and telegraphs, education, harvests, coats of arms and flags, coins—sixty-three such maps and diagrams in a volume that slips readily into the pocket. The printing was done in Austria, and here and there the grammar is a bit unsteady, but this is a very minor point. We notice Australia stands in the proud position as head of the list in cost of government per head and amount of public debt per head. The graphic diagrams showing the distribution of the principal religions should interest those concerned in missionary enterprise. The reproductions of coins of all nations, printed in silver and bronze, make a novel feature.

ESSAYS AT LARGE.

In "At Large" (Smith, Elder), Mr. A. C. Benson gives us another volume of his charming essays. A previous volume was dated from a college window. But the outlook is a bit restricted, and so for six months in the year Mr. Benson now migrates to the old Isle of Ely in the middle of the fen country. There, remote but not unfriended, he remains a bachelor—for "one cannot marry from prudence or a sense of duty or even to increase the birthrate." Mr. Benson is unhappily incapable of the great passion. He chats pleasantly enough about his house and surroundings in the opening essay—surroundings that harmonise well with a philosophy washed in rose-water. Thence Mr. Benson wanders fitfully but with a quaint and equable mentony through his favourite fields of thought. Contentment, friendship, humour, travel, literary finish, optimism, joy—these are some of the finger-posts to his fancy. One essay deals delightfully with speech-day at a great Public school. The Bishop delivered the address. He said, with much emphasis, that all culture was based on the Greek and Latin classics. "We all stamped on the ground and cheered at that. I as lustily as the rest, though I am quite sure it is not true." The Bishop was "only sketchily varnished with culture." He thought German literature nebulous, and French literature naughty. His favourite reading was ecclesiastical biography, and he perused a Waverley novel if kept in bed by a cold; and he had a profound conviction that "games," in the Public school sense, directly minister to virtue. "But the Bishop was not invited that he might say unconventional things. He was asked on purpose to bless things as they were—and he blessed them with all his might." "And yet it did us all good to listen to the great man. He was so big and kindly and ingenuous; he had made virtue pay." Who could imagine Oxford ironical at the expense of a Bishop? Yet Mr. Benson has less fear than the angels. But he makes up for calling the Bishop a Sadducee by being quite delightful about the boys. He tells a little more of the truth than the Bishop did. Perhaps he knew more. He knew how passionately fine they were, how irrecoverable once faded, how soon about to pale; but hardly more than the worthy Bishop did he dare to disturb the illusion of optimism. (Dymock's Library.)

RECENT FICTION.

"Dives' Wife" is a collection of short stories by Thistle Anderson (Mrs. Herbert Fisher), who lived for some time in South Australia, and has already achieved success in both prose and verse. The present volume is well worth reading, and there is a literary quality in Mrs. Fisher's style that will appeal strongly to the more discriminating. (From George Robertson.)

"The Tramping Methodist," by Sheila Kaye-Smith (Bell), is quite a cleverly written story of the end of the eighteenth century. The "Tramping Methodist" was the son of the rector of Brede. At the age of 15 he "got religion," and became devoted to the Methodists. Vivid contrasts between these and the Anglican clergy are, of course, worked into the book, which, however, has a strong human interest, and no connection at all with the kind of literature made familiar to us by Mr. Joseph Hocking.

Mr. Shan F. Bullock's "A Laughing Matter" (Werner Laurie) is a sort of ethnological study of the inhabitants of a London suburb—the sort of suburb where ladies, looking charming in their "pink wrappers," lie back in a wicker chair and dip strawberries in sugar. The more cultured ones occasionally quote such well-known aphorisms from Shakespeare as "sermons in stones." Marriage is the only thing that happens in suburbia. So, of course, Harry and Lydia come out, on page 318, "radiant both of them, arm in arm," and "stood before us, serene in the perfection of their (suburban) youth and happiness, and needing no words to proclaim it to the world." The heroine, by-the-bye, is "unable to cope with Meredith"—and this is another reason why she should be "indeed the top of admiration."

A number of well-established authors send forth their well-established brand, which needs no further description or advertisement beyond their names. John Oxenham's "The Song of Hyacinth" (Methuen) is a collection of short stories, capital in their way, and having plenty of variety. Fred. Whishaw's "A Royal Hoax" (Bell) is a vigorous romance with a hero named Maximilian and a heroine named Veronique. The plot is laid in the little principality of Pegrim. "The Sunny Side of the Hill," by Rosa Carey (Macmillan), is precisely what the name of Rosa Carey leads us to expect. It is simple and sprightly, clever in an easy-going fashion, always decorous, and here and there a touch of pathos. Aunt Margaret has inherited a house in a Kentish village, and she asks her niece Maureen, aged 18, to come and live with her. Not far off lives the crippled owner of Marsh Hall. Inevitably Maureen's "little brown face, with the sunshiny smile and white teeth," grew dearer to Romney Clayton than anything else on earth. Mr. James Blyth's "The Smallholder" (Bell) is a kind of plea for closer settlement in England; and at times the story breaks down altogether and becomes a political pamphlet. The author strongly objects to reading, writing, and arithmetic as tending to destroy the true rural quality in the agricultural labourer. Violet Tweedale's "An Empty Heritage" (John Long) has one passage of utter beauty. "The June morning dawned when Gilbert and Iris were made one, and the joybells rang tumultuously to welcome in the day. That same evening Mimosa and the painter stood by the lake of Como, while the splendour of sunset stained the mountains with gold and ruby. Faintly stole the silvery sound of the Angelus from the little chapel on the hill, and the amber rays deepened. He put his arms about her as the last rays crept through the chestnut boughs, and mingled with the bronze gold of her hair. His head was bowed over hers in thanksgiving." It is hardly necessary to add that "she raised her head with the wild eager grace as natural to her as it is to the flower."

SHORTER NOTICES.

"The Making of Carlyle," by R. S. Craig, is called by its author "an experiment in biographical explication." This is a foretaste of the pretentious and exaggerated style in which the book is written. As a matter of fact it contains in fair amount the material of a reasonably good and commonplace life of Carlyle, which may be read with interest—and that is as far as the "experiment" goes. (George Bell.)

A very pleasant and pleasantly-illustrated book is Anne Macdonell's "In the Abruzzi." This is not one of those inconsequent travel narratives which the title suggests, but a careful study of the wild and rugged district mainly from an historical and literary point of view. The author goes back as far as the Samnite wars in her historical sketch. There is an interesting chapter on brigands ancient and modern, and others are devoted to religion, folk-lore, art, and song. The more descriptive chapters come last. The illustrations from water colours are very dainty. (Dymock.)

"Tragic Russia" is an interesting study by Waclaw Gasiorowski, translated by Viscount de Busoncy, who, however, disclaims revolutionary sentiments not proper for an aristocrat. The author writes with much bitter irony, not to say with a certain direct ferocity. But this note of passion gives a grim power to his book. Beginning with Peter the Great, M. Gasiorowski subjects Czars and Czardom to a merciless searchlight. The delightful little romance, familiar to us from the reading books of our tender years, which makes Peter the patriotic civilizer of his country, is ruthlessly destroyed. As the long tale of bloodshed unfolds it is terrible enough. "The Czar is murdered: long live the Czar," is the Russian version of the French phrase. (Dymock.)

Mr. Benjamin Kidd's Herbert Spencer lecture for 1908 on "Individualism and After" is now issued in pamphlet form by the Clarendon Press. Mr. Kidd, of course, "endeavoured to exhibit the leading feature of our times as a movement of the world under many forms to a more organic conception of society. It is a fact becoming visible that the social organism is tending to be regarded as something wider than the political state." Spencer contemplated a sort of voluntary co-operation taking the place of the State. Mr. Kidd regards "a purified State" as the greatest of all voluntary co-operative enterprises. Mr. Spencer was very careful not to press the analogy of society to an organism too far. Mr. Kidd forgets the necessity for this precaution, and practically ends in a faint-hearted socialism. (From George Robertson.)

Mr. P. Stewart's "Australian Tales and Verse" (Lothian) is a collection of verse narratives, with some intrinsic interest, but small literary pretensions. The present is a new edition, with some fresh verses, and Mr. Stewart warns us, "Not for to-day, In Nature's way, I write upon the scroll of time. 'Tis for the morn and those unborn Who best shall judge my gentle rhyme." We are quite content to leave the task to them.

Mr. Alfred Johnstone's "Piano Touch" (William Reeves) is a useful little manual for pianists. The author, with clearness and good sense, gives a very helpful chapter in criticism of various educational editions of piano classics.

To the excellent "Oxford Modern French Series" is aded "Batailles de Terre et de Mer," by Comte Bouet-Willaumez. The author was a well-known naval commander and explorer of the West African coast. He died in 1871, having published the studies here reprinted in 1855.

Effingham Wilson publishes a second edition of Mr. Stephen Killik's "Stock Exchange Accounts," first issued some years ago. The explanation of stock exchange proceedings are clear and good, and the book should be useful to many financial readers and to teachers and others who have to struggle with weird problems in "stocks and shares."

"The Romance of Protestantism," by D. Alcock (Hodder and Stoughton, through Angus and Robertson) is a series of talks to young people, setting forth evangelical views, and incidentally exhibiting "Rome" in an unfavourable light.

Dr. W. Camac Wilkinson's "Treatment of Consumption" is a clear and vigorous defence of Professor Robert Koch's tuberculin treatment. Dr. Wilkinson tells us that since he was a pupil of Koch in 1884 his allegiance has never wavered. The value of the method, however, is by no means generally admitted. Medical men with an open mind should nevertheless read Dr. Wilkinson's careful marshalling of the evidence, and they will find that his presentment of the case will provide them with much food for thought.

"Training for Athletes" (Health and Strength Company) is a collection of practical hints from such champions as Tommy Burns, Gunner Moir, A. Shrubb, A. T. Yeoumans, and Tom Burrows. Their remarks must be treated with the utmost respect.

Messrs. Angus and Robertson publish "The Australian Birthday Book" in a very neat and convenient form. It is on "classic" lines for birthday books, but the poetical quotations form a choice anthology of Australian verse happily chosen by Bertram Stevens. Where a famous Australian could be found to grace a birthday his name appears under the date. The book should have a special claim for Australian use.

NOTES.

In the various friendly encounters, team matches, and tournaments, the game has been kept alive, nevertheless if the draughts players had good commodious quarters where they could meet the game would be greatly improved.

We regret (says the "Otago Witness") having to announce the death, on June 28, of Mr. J. A. Hay, M.A., of the Audit Department, Wellington. Deceased was the only son of Mr. D. R. Hay, Melbourne, chess and draughts editor of the "Weekly Times," formerly chess and draughts editor of this paper.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

After a considerable period of years "Maritana" is to be elaborately revived at the Criterion Theatre this evening by the newly-formed National Opera Company. The name-part reintroduces Miss Rosina Buckmann, a young New Zealand soprano trained in England, who has already made a good many successful appearances in this city, and Mr. G. H. Snazelle, an old favourite, who has long been absent in Europe, is also in the new combination. None of the other artists has been heard here before. Probably the best-known name to those who follow musical events in London is that of to-night's tenor, Mr. Wilson Pembroke, a singer who studied under Edwin Holland, of the Royal Academy of Music, and started his career some ten or twelve years ago in comic opera. His first important engagement was at the Lyric Theatre in the original production of W. S. Gilbert and Osmond Carr's "His Excellency," and after the run he was engaged with Miss Nancy M'Intosh, Ellaline Terriss, Mabel Love, and John Le Hay to appear at the Broadway Theatre, New York, under Mr. Charles Frohman's management. Mr. Pembroke's reputation, however, is now essentially that of a grand opera tenor, and on returning to England from America he quickly secured that artistic position during an engagement of several years with the Moody-Manners Opera Company. With them he sang the leading tenor roles in a great repertoire of about 20 different works, becoming more especially noted as Tannhauser, Lohengrin, and Faust. During this long engagement he was associated with several sopranos known on this side, more particularly Mmes. Alice Esty, Ella Russell, and Clementine De Vere Sapio, whilst at Colston Hall, Bristol, he was the Faust to Mme. Melba's Marguerite. After leaving the Moody-Manners combination, Mr. Pembroke sang in operatic recitals and at concerts for more than a year, notably Berlioz's "Faust" with the London Choral Society at Queen's Hall last season, when Mme. Mary Conly, the Victorian dramatic soprano, was the Marguerite. Last April he was engaged for "The Meistersingers" with the Belfast Philharmonic Society, and on returning to London he met Mr. George Musgrove, and joined the National Opera Company, which that entrepreneur was at that time forming for Mr. John Wren, of Melbourne.

The Sydney Amateur Orchestral Society's final concert on November 18 will be remarkable for the number of great representative works performed. Herr Slapoffski will open the programme with the "Leonora Overture No. 3," being the rewritten overture to "Fidelio, or Wedded Love," which Beethoven prepared for the revival at Vienna of the only opera he composed. This was in 1806, and history records that he prepared another overture in 1807, and a fourth for the revival in 1814. Amongst these, the one known as "No. 3" has become immortal. We read that "its grandeur and dimensions are such as to entitle it to the description 'Symphonic Poem.'" Mozart's "Symphony in G Minor," the last but one of his 49 symphonies, and the 550th of his catalogued compositions, will form another important contribution to the programme. This great work was composed in 1788, during a period of seven weeks, which embraced also the "E flat Symphony" and the masterpiece known as "Jupiter." With these three noble works Mozart fitly closed his labours in the highest department of orchestral music. Ambross, in his "Grenzen der Music und Poesie," says of them:—"Considered as pure music, it is hardly worth while to ask whether the worth possesses anything more perfect." In striking contrast with these classic examples of a classic period will be the Tchaikowsky "Concerto in B flat minor," in which Miss Katherine Goodson is to play the solo part. This tempestuous modern work was composed for Nicolas Rubinstein in 1875, but that director (brother of the great piano-virtuoso of that day) criticised it so freely that Tchaikowsky rededicated it to Hans von Bulow, who played it in that year for the first time in public at Boston. Its first European performance was by Professor Kross with the Russian Musical Society at St. Petersburg, and it was again rendered during the year of its creation by Taneieff at Moscow. In 1889 the composer revised the solo-part, which, whatever strictures were made upon it in earlier days, is now a captivating example of passionate and bravura music.

As illustrating the demand for the services of a star of world-wide reputation, it may be stated that Kubelik is to play the Paganini violin-concerto at the opening of the London Philharmonic Society's 96th season next Thursday. Mr. Henry Wood will conduct. Mr. Kubelik left Kalgoorlie and Perth so recently that he could only have arrived in England a few days before his reappearance. Some change has evidently been made in the Philharmonic scheme, as hitherto the season has not opened until February. The solo pianists announced are Busoni, Godowski, Pugno, and Sauer. At the last concert of the season Mr. Arthur Nikisch is to conduct Liszt's "Faust" Symphony. Miss Adela Verne, who has not left the United Kingdom since her return there after her Australian tour with the late Mme. Alva in 1898, has just left London for a tour of the United States, which she was to open at Carnegie Hall, New York, on October 17, afterwards starring with the principal orchestras of the country. Madame Carreno is again in London, and has given a recital at the Bechstein Hall, and has also played the Tchaikowsky Pianoforte Concerto, both at the Sheffield and Norwich (Oct. 30) Festivals. Carreno is also to star at the Queen's Hall Symphony Concert on January 30. Another recent visitor here, Miss Marie Hall, is also in London, and has given her first recital at St. James's Hall.

However, the announcement which is causing most sensation in the Empire's capital just now is the debut of a new pianist next month, who is none other than Mme. Marie Gabrielle Leschetizky. This lady is the six months' bride of the famous virtuoso and teacher of the same name, who is now 79 years of age, and he pronounces her solemnly and sincerely "the best pupil of all." As a matter of fact the veteran Leschetizky had previously espoused in succession three pupils of his school at Vienna. His first wife, Mme. Essipoff, became one of the greatest pianists of her day. This fourth marriage recalls an apochryphal story told by Mr. Leslie Harris, the English monologuist, of an aged Bishop of Salisbury in centuries past, who on a similar occasion presented his bride with a solid gold ring within which was engraved the enterprising motto:—

"If I survive
I'll make it five."

Mme. Melba will this day make her only appearance in London until 1910, as the great singer thereafter leaves for America and Canada, opening her Australian tour at Perth in February next under Mr. John Lemmone's direction. To-day's concert will be an immense affair at the Royal Albert Hall, with the support of the London Symphony Orchestra under Mr. Landon Ronald, and Wilhelm Backhaus (pianist), John McCormack (the new Irish tenor), Joska Szigeti (Bohemian violinist), Mr. Vincent Needham, and Mr. Samuel Liddle (pianist and composer). These artists accompanied the diva throughout her recent tour of 30 important cities, including Edinburgh, Glasgow, and Dublin. When the mail left the Australian cantatrice had just been welcomed by the Mayor and corporation of Portsmouth at an official lunch.

Mme. Ada Crossley's party, which will appear at Warrnambool, Colac, and Geelong during the first three days of next week on their way to Adelaide, made an interesting appearance in the "Elijah" before leaving Melbourne. A newly-formed Festival Choir of 220 voices made its debut under Mr. Frederic Beard's baton, and did remarkably well. Mme. Ada Crossley and Mr. John Harrison both proved at home in the contralto and tenor music, and a local soprano of pure and silvery timbre, Miss Lilian Reid, is highly praised. Mr. Hamilton Earle seems to have entitled himself to a place amongst the better known of the many eminent baritones who have sung the dramatic part of the prophet in Australia, and Mr. Sametini led a professional orchestra, so that the whole performance must have been especially impressive.

To Invigorate Your Health.

TO STRENGTHEN YOUR NERVES

People of sedentary occupation require periodical stimulation of the liver, which plays a most important part in digestion. Dyspepsia, biliousness, stomach troubles, liver disorders, excessive uric acid, and last, but not least, constipation all proceed from irregularities of the digestive organs, which affect the nerves and irritate the brain. Perfect digestion means perfect action of the stomach, liver, and bowels. Kutnow's Powder acts on each of these forces of digestion, and stimulates the digestive processes so perfectly that errors of diet are neutralised thereby. A dose of Kutnow's Powder cleanses the Stomach, rouses the Liver, frees the Bile, improves the Digestion, strengthens the Nerves, and sets the machinery in perfect working order.

Try Kutnow's To-day.

If it is your desire to enjoy the best of health, you cannot do better than send to the nearest Chemist for a bottle of Kutnow's Powder. One dose will convince you that, at last, you have obtained a perfect invigorator for the digestive organs, a splendid antiseptic aperient, which regulates the bowels, flushes the kidneys, and efficiently cleanses the whole system.

"Thanks for parcel of Kutnow's Powder, which I received this morning. I have used this Powder for some years, and find its effects are most beneficial—in fact, I am hardly ever without it. I can fully recommend it as being the best aperient powder I know of; its action is not violent, while it is invariably the same, and can always be relied on."

"1, Abbey-road, St. John's Wood, N.W.—I have used Kutnow's Powder for the last five years, and it has added to the pleasure of my life. I take a tablespoonful every morning when I rise, and find it a most refreshing drink. I have never needed to increase the dose, and it has acted perfectly in assisting Nature all the time. I am now strong and healthy, and give you my experience, which may be useful.—John MacWhirter, R.A."

HUGH L. DOBREE

"The Hut, Weymouth, 23rd May, 1908.

"Sirs,—I have but recently returned from a tour in the States, and I feel that I must write and tell you how Kutnow's Powder has been of service to me. Different food and strange climatical conditions tend to affect the liver, and it is a usual occurrence to rise in the morning with a headache, feeling more weary than the night before. A dose of Kutnow's relieved me of this trouble like lightning. There are so many spurious medicines on the market that I think it is only fair that a thoroughly genuine article should be given the notice it deserves."

Guard Against Fraud.

The Genuine and Original Kutnow's Powder can be had of all conscientious Chemists throughout the world. When you ask for Kutnow's Powder and do not receive the package and bottle bearing the usual fac-simile signature, "S. Kutnow and Co., Ld.," and the registered trade mark, "Hirschensprung, or Deer Leap," you are being defrauded by an unscrupulous dealer, who is intentionally foisting upon you a worthless substitute.

HEARNE'S BRONCHITIS CURE.

COUGHS, BRONCHITIS, PNEUMONIA, PLEURISY, ASTHMA, & CONSUMPTION.

Those who have taken this medicine are amazed at its wonderful influence. Sufferers from any form of Bronchitis, Cough, Croup, Difficulty of Breathing, Hoarseness, Pain or Soreness in the Chest, experience delightful and rapid relief, and to those who are subject to Colds on the Chest it is invaluable, as it effects a Complete Cure. It is most comforting in allaying irritation in the throat, and giving strength to the voice, and it neither allows a Cough nor Asthma to become chronic nor Consumption to develop. Consumption is not known where "Coughs" have been properly treated with this medicine. No house should be without it, as, taken at the beginning, a dose is generally sufficient, and a Complete Cure is certain.

BRONCHITIS AND PNEUMONIA

CURED BY

HEARNE'S BRONCHITIS CURE.

AFTER OTHER TREATMENT HAD FAILED.

Mr. W. G. Hearne. Dear Sir,—From a strict sense of duty I feel that I should publish the following statement, so that others may know what to do when the awful fact is evident that a life is in danger of being lost:—In September, 1906, my little girl, aged at that time 3 years, contracted measles, and in the following October was attacked by Bronchitis, Pneumonia, and Congestion of the Lungs. She was attended by a legally qualified doctor of high standing, but his treatment was not successful in arresting the progress of the illness. On Saturday, the 21st October, 1906, he said that her life was in danger—that there was very little hope for her. For eight days and nights she had been prostrated by cough, pain, and fever, and was lying like a statue, unconscious. At this stage I was persuaded by a friend to obtain Hearne's Bronchitis Cure, with its auxiliary medicine for the Fever and Congestion of the Lungs, as directed in the Catalogue of Medicines which accompanies each bottle of the Bronchitis Cure. I gave the medicine as directed, and there was an improvement from the first dose of Hearne's Bronchitis Cure. The improvement continued after each dose of the medicine. In a week she was perfectly free from the Pneumonia, Congestion, Cough, Pain, and Fever, and was well, except that she was still weak. In a fortnight she was quite recovered, and is now in splendid health, and stronger than ever. Any person asking for information about this grand medicine can be supplied by me, or by any of my neighbours who have witnessed its wonderful effects. It absolutely snatched my child from an early grave. Yours gratefully,

D. GARDINER.

Police Station, Geelong East, Feb. 5, 1908.

BRONCHITIS.

A SUFFERER 73 YEARS OF AGE.
THOROUGHLY CURED BY TWO BOTTLES OF HEARNE'S BRONCHITIS CURE.

IMMEDIATE RELIEF.—EFFECT WONDERFUL.

Mr. Hearne. Sir,—I was very ill with Influenza and Bronchitis. A friend of mine persuaded me to try your Bronchitis Cure. The first dose gave me immediate relief, and after taking the second bottle I am thoroughly cured. Its effect on me has been most wonderful. I am 73 years of age, and I trust that you will make use of this statement by publishing it for the benefit of humanity generally. Yours most respectfully,

THOMAS R. TREZISE, Reedy Creek, Victoria.

CONSUMPTION.

TOO ILL TO LEAVE HIS BED.—A COMPLETE CURE.

Mr. W. G. Hearne. Dear Sir,—I am writing to tell you about the wonderful cure your medicine has effected in my case. About three years ago I began to cough. At first the cough was not severe, but it gradually got worse, and I became very weak and troubled with night sweats, pain in my chest, and great quantities of phlegm. On several occasions there was blood in the expectorated matter. I had been treated by a doctor, who pronounced my case to be consumption, and various other treatments had been tried, but without benefit. It was at this stage that I heard of your Bronchitis Cure, and sent to you for a course of the medicine. When it arrived I was too ill to leave my bed, but I commenced taking it at once, and gradually improved. I am glad to say that the two lots of medicine you sent have effected a complete cure, for which accept my very best thanks. Yours gratefully,

J. BLAIR, Westminster Bridge-road, S.E., London.

CURED BY

HEARNE'S BRONCHITIS CURE.

AFTER OTHER TREATMENT HAD FAILED.

I, Prudence M'Kee, of Carr-street, South Geelong, in view of the importance of a person making it quite clear what treatment was successful in curing a serious and complicated case when the medicine, directions, and treatment of a legally-qualified doctor had failed, state as follows:—

My son, Henry M'Kee, then aged 8 years, had been attended by a legally-qualified doctor, who pronounced him to be suffering from Pneumonia, Pleurisy, and a stoppage of the passing of urine. Under the doctor's treatment the child gradually got worse, and the doctor pronounced the case hopeless. He told me that the child could not live. At this stage I obtained from Mr. W. G. Hearne, chemist, of Geelong, a bottle of Hearne's Bronchitis Cure, and gave it to the child according to the directions which accompany each bottle of it. The child improved after the second dose of Hearne's Bronchitis Cure. He continued to improve each day from each dose of Hearne's Medicine alone, and within three days he was free from the Cough, Pneumonia, and the Pleurisy, and the urine was passing satisfactorily. He was out of bed at the end of a week, completely recovered, and he is now in perfect health.

PRUDENCE M'KEE.

Carr-street, South Geelong, 6th February, 1908.

BRONCHITIS AND PLEURISY.

A SEVERE CASE CURED BY TWO BOTTLES OF HEARNE'S BRONCHITIS CURE.

AFTER OTHER TREATMENT HAD FAILED.

Mr. Hearne, Chemist, Geelong. Dear Sir,—Some months ago in Sydney I suffered from a severe attack of Influenza, and was confined to my room for about a week, at the end of which time, feeling somewhat better, I got up and tried to transact my business as usual. But I got up too soon, for the very next day I had a relapse, and suffered tortures from what the doctor told me was Pleurisy and Bronchitis. The pain from the former in my chest and shoulders was frightful, and for four long weeks I was confined to my bed under the care of a well-known Sydney doctor, and all the time his medicine gave me but temporary relief. The landlady of the hotel (the Cleveland) where I resided told me of a medicine—Hearne's Bronchitis Cure—from Victoria, which had cured her of a bad attack of Bronchitis and pains in the chest, and begged of me to try it. I did so, and, in thanks and gratitude to you, tell you that, after the second bottle, my cough had ceased, but what is more astonishing the pains from pleurisy entirely left me, and in about a week I was able to attend to my duties as usual. Yours faithfully,

J. BRAHAM, Melbourne "Punch" Office, Melbourne.

ASTHMA—A 17 YEARS' CASE.

PREVIOUS TREATMENT FAILED.—CURED BY THREE BOTTLES.

Mr. Alex. J. Anderson, of Oak Park, Charleville, Queensland, wrote:—"After suffering from Asthma for seventeen years, and having been under a great many different treatments without benefit, I was induced to try Hearne's Medicine for Asthma. After taking three bottles of this medicine I quite got rid of the Asthma, and since then, which was the beginning of 1883—fifteen years ago—I have not had the slightest return of it. The medicine quite cured me, and I have much pleasure in recommending it."

Speaking in February, 1908, he states:—"I am keeping very well. Never have the slightest return of the asthma."

"Hearne's Medicine cured me of Asthma, from which I had been suffering for twenty-five years, during which time I had used almost every patent medicine on the market—including asthma inhalations—without getting a cure. It was eight years ago that the cure was effected by Hearne's Medicine, and I now feel stronger than I have felt for years—in fact, I feel splendid."

C. WISEMAN, Meredith, Victoria.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS! The great success of HEARNE'S Bronchitis Cure has induced a number of unprincipled persons to make imitations, each calling his medicine "Bronchitis Cure," with the object of deceiving the unsuspecting, and so getting a sale for an imitation which has none of the beneficial effects that HEARNE'S Bronchitis Cure has. Consequently it has become necessary to draw your attention to this fact, and to request you in your own interests to be particular to ask for HEARNE'S, and see that you get it.

HEARNE'S BRONCHITIS CURE, Small Size, 2/6; Large Size, 4/6. Sold by all Chemists and Medicine Vendors, and by the Proprietor, W. G. HEARNE, Chemist, Geelong, Victoria. Forwarded to any address, when not obtainable locally.

SCIENCE NOTES.

W.G.P.

RADIO-ACTIVE ROCKS.

Professor Joly's address to the geology section of the British Association dealt with the distribution of uranium, the grandparent of radium. Uranium is a stable element, a very minute fraction of which is being transformed into radium. A hundred million years ago the earth's total stock of uranium was not more than 1 per cent. greater than it is now. As uranium is one of the heaviest of the elements, the main mass of it ought to be at the centre of the earth's core, but if the core were as radio-active as the crust, the earth's temperature would be much greater than it is. Either then radio-activity at the core is inhibited by the physical conditions (which is quite thinkable, although Professor Joly does not mention it) or there is a greater proportion of uranium in the earth's crust, and Professor Joly supposes that the heating effect of its radio-activity caused it to expand and rise to the surface at a time when convection was still possible. Another (and absurd) suggestion put forward is that radio-active elements were added from without after the earth had partially cooled down. It is always better to confess ignorance than make ridiculous assumptions. It is, however, decidedly curious that among the rocks Professor Joly has been able to examine those furthest from the surface have the least radio-activity, and therefore, ultimately the least uranium. Professor Joly's recent results on the high radio-activity of deep sea deposits have already been given in this column. In a very ingenious calculation Professor Joly estimates the extent of these deposits at twenty million cubic miles—enough to cover the entire ocean bed to a depth of 240 metres—and it should possess about a million tons of radium. The illustration well shows how minute amounts accumulate into a total bulk capable of far-reaching effects on the large scale. Radium has been found in meteors, and probably uranium exists in the sun; but the spectroscopic evidence is not so plain as it should be if the sun owes much of its heat to radio-activity.

TRANSMUTATION OF ELEMENTS.

Madame Curie, in a recent paper, gives an account of attempts to repeat Sir William Ramsay's alleged transformation of copper into lithium—with negative results. Madame Curie found that lithium was present as an impurity even in distilled water, and in nearly all reagents. If an absolutely pure reagent is allowed to stand a short time in glass vessels traces of lithium are found. Even fused quartz, now largely used instead of glass for flasks, is not safe, for it contains notable amounts of lithium. Madame Curie's experiments were therefore carried out in platinum vessels. While it is even then impossible to say that no lithium was formed, it was impossible to detect it. These criticisms of Ramsay's work show what wonderful refinement of experiment is needed in the present tantalising state of transmutation theory.

ACQUIRED CHARACTERS IN PLANTS.

The Rev. G. Henslow is an English botanist of repute, who has the distinction of being one of the most violent and implacable of anti-Darwinians. He is, of course, an evolutionist, but he will have nothing to do with natural selection. He is one of those who believe that modifications arise in an organism as the direct result of response to the influence of environment, and that the transmission of these acquired characters is cumulative until a new species is produced. Since Darwin was by no means clear on this point, Henslow, by shutting his eyes to the natural selection factor, which to Darwin was all important, and opening them only to Darwin's hesitating remarks as to use-inheritance, is able to masquerade as the only true Darwinian, and the rest of us are wicked perverters of the Darwinian faith. Mr. Henslow is not a zoologist, and he can therefore ignore the absolute lack of evidence for use-inheritance among animals. Confining himself to botany, he imagines he finds proof of use-inheritance on every side. He sets forth some of this evidence in "The Heredity of Acquired Characters in Plants" (Murray), which those interested in the controversy will be glad to read, if only as an example of weak logic. It is only fair to say, however, that many Continental botanists take more or less the same line.

THE EVOLUTION OF MAMMARY GLANDS.

The possession of milk glands gives its name to the class of Mammalia. No very clear indication of the coming of these glands is given in the other vertebrates; but they have a certain similarity to sweat glands, and traces of early stages of hair are noted in the development of the mammary region. These hairs disappeared, but their sebaceous glands became connected with the mammary ducts. The mammary organs are thus highly specialised forms of primitive tubular glands, which have become confined in the ventral side of the body in adaptation to the method of suckling the young. In the Monotremes, which link the Reptilia to the mammals, bunches of hairs remain in the mammary region, and there are no teats. In platypus, the sieve-like apertures of the mammary gland are distributed over areas covered with fur; but this may not be a primitive character, since the platypus has become greatly modified in adaptation to its aquatic habit. Marsupials have teats, though the lowest of them have no trace of a pouch. The mammary glands lie in a sunken area, the marsupial pocket; and these can be recognised in higher mammalia in early stages. In mice they can be discovered until the beginning of lactation. The formation of teats follows two distinct lines in the class. What are called primary teats occur in carnivores, pigs, horses, and ruminants. In these the skin surrounding the pocket is raised up to form a circular rampart, and thus gives rise to a teat perforated by a canal. In marsupials, rodents, monkeys, and man, the gland surface itself becomes elevated—secondary teats. The number of teats varies from one pair to 11 pairs in adaptation to the number of young produced at a birth. Abnormal extra teats are common, and in the embryo there may be indications of a greater number of teats than appear in the adult. In some whales there are eight pairs in the embryo, and only one in the adult. This, of course, points to an early stage of race-history in which there was the greater number of teats in the adult. Whenever mammae occur in an abnormal position corresponding to a normal position in a lower member of the class, we have a clear case of atavism.

SCIENCE IN SCHOOLS.

A rather remarkable convert to drastic reform in education is Mr. A. C. Benson, who now advocates the total excision of classics from the curriculum of the normal boy, and the substitution of elementary science, with plenty of practical work. This is a question that bulked largely in the education section of the British Association. Reports were adopted urging that no school course was complete without two years' systematic work in science; that sound scientific literature and lectures of a general character should take part of the place of formal treatment of the subject; that biology should have a place as well as chemistry and physics; and that the fetish of physical measurements—which reduces much science teaching to the most sterile of routine—should not be worshipped overmuch. It is curious that both the sub-committee that made this report and Mr. A. C. Benson urge the thorough teaching of English composition in close conjunction with science. Is all this expert opinion conspiring to do "immense harm" to the cause of secondary education as those who buttress incompetence would have us believe?

INSECTIVOROUS PLANTS.

Mr. John Murray adds to his cheap edition of the works of Charles Darwin the volume on "Insectivorous Plants" which was revised by Professor Francis Darwin in 1888, with the addition of footnotes to bring the account up to that date. The work, of course, still holds its own as a classic, though it was first issued in 1875, and it has always been one of the most popular of Darwin's books. This series of reprints is now almost complete, and any alleged school library in which it is not found should remove the disgrace as soon as possible.

THE OCTOBER REVIEWS.

CANADIAN PREFERENCE.

Viscount Milner in the "Nineteenth Century" declares that Canadian preference has been of the greatest value. The article is a reply to free-trade criticism in the "Edinburgh Review," which drew a sufficiency of optimism from statistics. To these arguments Viscount Milner opposes the usual tariff replies as to the greater comparative advance of Germany and the United States. In the special case of Canada, by taking a few carefully selected figures, and avoiding the trade statistics as a whole, Viscount Milner shows that in groups of imports covered by preference there has been considerable increase in consumption of British goods. "Let those who belittle preference produce some other cause to account for the change." He proceeds to claim that when British goods are competing with foreign goods on more or less equal terms, even a moderate preference on British goods will turn the scale in their favour. He admits, however, that the scope of preference is limited and uncertain; yet for that uncertainty he is ready to put the fiscal freedom of Great Britain in pawn. In spite of the most violent efforts in the way of argument, Viscount Milner has to admit that the increase in value of his own selected imports into Canada, 1898-1906, was 135 per cent. for goods from the United Kingdom, and 144 per cent. for goods from the United States; so it all comes down to the rather lame conclusion that without preference the lead of the latter must have been considerably greater.

THE FIGHT FOR PENNY POST.

Mr. Henniker Heaton, in the "Nineteenth Century," indulges in a pardonable whoop over the present successes of the penny post movement. The penny post is much more to Mr. Heaton than a commercial convenience and a social necessity. He looks upon it as the final sacrament in the brotherhood of man. He began his crusade in 1886, when he overwhelmed the House of Commons with a picture of the cheerful penny postman wending his way along the "brimming margent of Australasian seas," over the "pathless prairies of America," and down "glancing equatorial streams." Of course, Mr. Heaton's eloquence fell on stony ground, but not quite stony, for 142 members voted with him, to each of whom 12 years later he presented a silver penny when the first great victory was won. But why a "silver" penny? To Mr. Heaton that first defeat was the beginning of victory. Although we smile at his enthusiasm sometimes, it is only just to admit that no man ever fought more tenaciously for his faith, and that faith in a penny stamp was better worth fighting for than many a more pretentious creed. His account of his struggles is interesting enough. On Christmas Day, 1898, Imperial penny postage was inaugurated; and New Zealand shortly afterwards had the pluck to respond from the other side. The next "great victory" was, of course, the recently consummated penny post to America. Within another year Mr. Heaton hopes to see penny postage universal.

THE ALIEN PROBLEM.

The Hon. Mr. Justice Hodgins (Canada) discusses in the "Nineteenth Century" the "revocation of treaty privileges to alien subjects," from the point of view of international law. He claims that the right to revoke remains, and gives a sufficiency of illustrations in point. What he has more particularly in mind are the fishing privileges in Canadian waters granted by the Anglo-American treaty of 1818, and a cause of international friction ever since. The concession is at the bottom of course of United States claims to territorial rights within colonial waters, and to immunity of American fishermen from British and colonial municipal law. This is a question the magnitude of which few of us perhaps realise. The coast mileage of the treaty concession of these fishery privileges extends along about 2520 miles of the teeming fish-wealth of the coast waters of Canada and Newfoundland. The disputes are to be submitted to the Hague tribunal, and Canada hopes that Great Britain will raise the claim of "an inherent prerogative revocation-power" similar to that asserted and practised by the United States itself. In untechnical language, the claim simply is that no treaty obligation involving concessions to alien subjects can be held binding if it works out to the disadvantage of the King's subjects.

AN APPRECIATION OF PRINCE BULOW.

Sidney Garfield Morris has a very high opinion of the German Chancellor, which he expresses in the "Nineteenth Century." He thinks we make too little allowance for the terrible difficulties Bulow has had to face, and that we are altogether wrong in trying to judge him by British standards. His eight years as Chancellor have been one long conflict—with the socialists, with hostile Court influences, with extremists of all parties. His first success was the revision of the tariff, and his triumphant conclusion of seven important commercial treaties on the new basis. Mr. Morris reviews the Morocco episode, and denies the hostility of Prince Bulow towards France; rather is he to be looked on as the peacemaker. He has set before him the "grand aim" of trying to teach the German people the real meaning of constitutional government. "It is scarcely needful to emphasise Prince Bulow's earnest and consistent efforts to place the mutual relations of Germany and Great Britain on a more cordial and friendly basis," especially in the light of quite the latest developments. Here is Mr. Morris's portrait of his statesman:—"Tall, with a stately carriage of the head and shoulders, which gives him grace and distinction, he has the broad brow of intellect and a mouth and chin which show courage, energy, and decision. But it is the eyes which arrest attention—eyes beautiful and fearless that meet you with a directness and sincerity rare indeed in any class, but for a diplomatist almost unique. It is a face steadfast, proud, and self-reliant, yet with a sunny tempered kindness and grace in it which wins straight to the heart." This is all very well; but Mr. Sidney Garfield Morris has no great grip of international politics.

GREAT BRITAIN AND GERMANY.

Harold Spender, in the "Contemporary," agrees with Herr Bebel that great armaments, and particularly rivalry in great armaments, provoke the catastrophe they are meant to prevent. They create an atmosphere of mutual fear swept by violent winds that shift and change. Ten years ago these winds blew to England across the Channel. Now they blow across the North Sea. But why? If Germany runs us close in battleship building, the United States is running us closer. Why are the hammers of Baltimore music and the hammers of Stettin a menace? In race we are nearer the German than polyglot America. Too near at any rate to be driven into panic. On their side, the Germans make out as threatening an attitude from Great Britain as we make out from them. Why concentrate our power on the North Sea if not because we have it in mind to destroy their nascent fleet? Very nobly—and very uselessly—Mr. Spender pleads against the crushing burden of armaments. Already it costs the world 400 million sterling a year. At the present rate it will soon cost it 1000 millions. Europe cannot carry that burden without cataclysm. The marvel is that she has carried it so long. Let us, therefore, says Mr. Spender, get rid of our mutual suspicions, and try to resume the spirit in which negotiation is possible. The antidote to Mr. Spender is Dr. Dillon. There is no finality, he says, in transactions with Germany, and he reviews recent history to prove his point—more particularly the German "game" in Morocco. Also, in the "Fortnightly" Excubitor ridicules a naval understanding with Germany, and urges on the British taxpayer to "build, build, build," and, of course, to "pay, pay, pay." The German people, patriotic and timid, have risen to the war bait—British hostility—and they will not have the chance to draw back. Battleships are cheaper than battle—and so on until all the worthy sentiments of Mr. Spender are over-ruled.

THE FUTURE OF TURKEY.

Mr. Ellis Barker, who is usually sound and well informed, writes in the "Fortnightly" on the future of Turkey. He does not think the revolution is going to be the success of simplicity generous admirers of "popular liberty" suppose. The expectation that Parliamentarism will prove a panacea for all the ills of Turkey seems vain. Is Turkey fit for democratic government, and will the people be able to create efficient administration? The Mohamedans have known how to conquer, but they have never known how to rule. Has the Turk so far outgrown his religion as to scape this paralysis at the root of government? A new Turkey to last must have in effect a non-Mohammedan foundation. Mr. Barker contrasts Turkey with Japan, where religion is another name for patriotism, and hence was a help rather than a hindrance to reform. Over against the inherent internal weakness of Turkey is the simple foreign policy of Greece, Bulgaria, and Servia—a policy of expansion so as to include those compatriots of each who are domiciled on Turkish soil; while between them lies Macedonia, where all the races are mixed up inextricably. Can the Young Turks hope to create peace and order out of such confusion? Their dilemma is most awkward. A really liberal policy will have to contemplate the disintegration of the Turkish Empire, and perhaps the migration of the Turks into Asia. A conservative policy will have to face the impossible task of nationalising utterly irreconcilable races. Democracy means suicide; conservatism means revolt. The Balkans have no interest in Turkish regeneration—except what advantage each race can snatch for itself out of the fire. But the writer of "Foreign Affairs" in the same review is much more optimistic. Dr. Dillon in the "Contemporary" tries hard to be optimistic, but scarcely succeeds.

POULTRY.

Questions relating to fancy or commercial poultry-keeping, diseases, etc., should be addressed to "Ancona," "Herald" Office.

W.S.—The system you have discovered for telling which sex is contained in an egg, like all other systems of the sort, will tell its own tale. Certain hens of the same breed lay eggs easily recognisable by their shape, and some hens' eggs produce more cockerels than pullets. Other hens may lay the same shaped eggs, and when hatched the results be different from your present experience. Persistent and consistent breeding for sex has had some success, but any attempt to foretell sex is futile.

Hunter.—Sunlight oil-cake mixed with bran and pollard makes an excellent morning food for fowls, but is not recommended by the manufacturers as a sole food.

Singleton.—If your hens are not laying now it is scarcely likely that spice will assist them. The following is largely used in England in the cold spring months, but is unnecessary here. At any rate, it can be tried, although it is likely that age is the cause of non-production:—Gentian 4oz, fenugreek 8oz, liquorice 2oz, table salt 2oz, bone-meal 2oz. Powder and mix. Dose, a tablespoonful to a dozen fowls three times a week.

The members of the Pig and Poultry Farmers' Association, with their wives, weans, and visitors, to the number of about 70, assembled at Eddy-avenue on Wednesday last en route by special tram for the trysting ground, La Perouse. There was a wealth of good things to eat and drink, and plenty of amusements, a long, enjoyable day being spent by young and old. A cash prize, given by Mr. Ryan, of the association, was won by Mr. Ticiak, of Bondi, who in turn gave it for competition amongst the children of members. The society is a sort of mutual help one, and is in substantial funds.

Mrs. Cannon, of Epping, has been one of the most successful Orpington exhibitors of the year. At the recent Wallsend show her birds won nearly all the Orpington prizes, as they did a few weeks ago at Albury, securing six firsts and champion. Mrs. Cannon reports having hatched 400 chickens solely by hens, and says she finds the white Orpingtons splendid layers during the autumn and winter months, and has got as high as 9s per pair for 5½ months old cockerels for table purposes, which should be sufficient testimony as to their table qualities.

Mr. H. W. Potts, principal of Hawkesbury College, forwards the October results of the two egg-laying competitions in progress there. The 50 pens of one-year-old hens laid 6010 eggs, being an average of 120.20 per pen. The leaders are Bright and Thompson, W.L., 802; Forest Home, Lang., 794; J. Stewart, W.L., 789; Mrs. Snowdon, W.L., 784; S. Ellis, W.L., 775; A. E. Henry, B.O., 770; J. Kelly, B.O., 764.

Mr. F. J. Brierley's White Leghorns won the monthly prize with 155 eggs.

The 50 pens of two-year-old hens laid a total of 5210 eggs. The leading pens for the 19 months are:—P. Lowe, W.L., 2066; R. Boardman, W.L., 1867; J. Jensen, W.L., 1830; J. C. Gould, S.W., 1819; Griffiths Bros., W.L., 1716; W. E. Boutcher, W.L., 1705.

FATTENING FOWLS.

The assistance given by the English Board of Agriculture to the poultry industry is largely confined to brief bulletins or leaflets on various branches of the subject. Leaflet No. 176 is on poultry fattening. This branch of the business applies in but a small way to the industry here, as our fowls are marketed alive, the poulterers purchasing them by their appearance, which is a very excellent thing for the breeders, as often one or two inferior birds are included in a coop of good stuff, and realise the same price, the buyer losing on the poor specimens. In England the fowls are marketed dead, being sent to London or elsewhere in baskets or boxes, usually packed in straw, having been killed, plucked, and packed either by the breeders at their homes, but more generally by what are known as fatteners, those people, whose sole business is to purchase poultry alive, and then put them up in coops for about three weeks, which is the usual fattening period. The leaflet says:—"Fattening is a very special business, and although there are no actual secrets in it experience is necessary to success. Some breeds will not fatten. Then there are specimens of the fattening breeds which will not do well. Three methods are employed: The cramming machine, by which the food is actually pumped into the fowl's crop; the funnel method, the food in this instance being made thin, is poured into the mouth of the funnel until the crop is full. The third method is making the food into boluses, and forcing them down the bird's throat. The food used is known as Sussex ground oats, which is not ground oats, but a mixture of barley and oats, and is of Russian growth, being more free from moisture than the English grown. The husks are removed from both the barley and oats, the actual grain being ground by special machinery to a state more like a dark-coloured flour, or fine pollard. It is the fineness of the meal to which is attributed the excellent result. This is mixed with skim milk, and a certain proportion of mutton fat, which imparts a special whiteness and softness to the flesh of the fowl, and no matter where prepared, if by the above means they are known and sold as Sussex fowls, i.e., prepared by Sussex methods. The Sussex ground oats are sold at from 11s to 12s per cwt, and although the chief feeding stuffs, wheat and other cereal meals and potatoes are sometimes used, maize meal is rarely included, as it creates an oily fat. The mutton fat used largely comes from this country, and is known in the Heathfield and other fattening districts as Australian tallow. Experiments have been made to determine the weight gained during the fattening period, which usually lasts three weeks. Chickens from three to four pounds weight are those usually fattened. They are first starved for 24 hours to stimulate an appetite, otherwise they might refuse to eat. The first week there may be a loss in weight or slight gain. The greatest gain is always in the second week, and at three weeks' time the gain is from 1½lb to 2½lb. At this time they are considered ripe, and gain only a few ounces in any succeeding weeks. The cost for the three weeks is about sixpence per fowl. A few enthusiasts here have occasionally tried fattening, but owing to the system of marketing, it has never turned out profitable. At the same time there are many who rear and keep fowls for the purpose of their own table, going into the fowlrun and catching one when required. Rather than this did they place it in a small coop by itself for two or three weeks, and feed liberally with pollard, barley, meal, and potatoes, or even maize meal, and, if available, mix with milk, the results will be a revelation in quality, and amply repay the small extra trouble and expense.

IN THE GARDEN.

BORDER, LAWN, AND BUSHHOUSE.

Carnations.—It is pleasant for the cultivator of the carnation to attend to the plants now they are spindling for bloom, tying the stems to the supports and watching the expanding buds. Nearly all the large flowers of carnations have a tendency to split their pods, and the splitting begins sometimes as soon as the colour of the flowers can be discerned. This must be watched for, and the segments on the opposite side must be slit down a little, and the calyx should be tied round with a strip of matting. Some of the new forms are very beautiful. Choice flowers should be shaded from strong sunshine. They require little or no water while they have any moisture in the soil. Any excess of water is fatal to them. A mulching of stable manure will be beneficial if applied in the hot summer weather.

Pelargoniums.—Pelargoniums after flowering may be propagated by cuttings. Any that are shy strikers should be cut partially through and left on the plants for a few days before being finally made into cuttings. The cuttings should always be short-jointed, firm to the touch, but not too ripe, and about three inches in length. The compost should consist of loam, leaf-mould, and sand in equal parts. They should root well in two or three weeks. In the case of the ivy leaf kind it is unnecessary to leave a joint at the base, but in zonals that should be done. The ivy-leaved section are most of them well adapted for hanging baskets. They are not only of elegant growth, but possess the additional merit of producing single and double flowers in great profusion. In fact it would be difficult to suggest anything more graceful and pleasing when grown in this manner.

Primroses.—The various forms of double primroses are a very beautiful group, but have a bad habit of disappearing during the summer months, and being seen no more. This arises chiefly from want of attention to moisture and coolness during the heat of summer. If the plants get dry at the roots they often become the prey of the red spider, and it is then difficult to induce them to put forth others. In large gardens where suitable places can be found for reserves, this hot weather difficulty is not so obvious, but the amateur of limited room often finds the difficulty insurmountable. In drought or extreme heat, existence may be given to the fainting plants by loosening the soil around them, and mulching with moist leaf mould. Anything which will economise moisture and keep the roots cool may be used with advantage. Care should also be exercised in planting, the aim of the cultivator being to induce the plants to put forth fresh roots above the old ones.

Gaillardias.—For hot, dry situations, where other plants would be liable to become withered, gaillardias will be found very useful. The soil should be of a light nature, well enriched with manure, and deeply dug. They are most effective when planted in groups of several together, planting them individually at about eight inches apart, and pegging them down, so as to cover the ground.

The Lawn.—Mowing should now be done once in 10 days or a fortnight, either with the scythe or machine. Nothing tends to make a garden more enjoyable than a well-kept lawn. The nuisance created by worms on lawns and bowling greens may easily be got rid of by the following means:—Take a peck of unslaked lime, and place in a tub or cask capable of holding 30 gallons of water, add the water, and stir the lime well up till completely dissolved, and then allow it to stand until quite clear. The turf is then to be watered with the clear lime-water, which will bring the worms to the surface, when they can be swept off.

Thrip.—Thrip is a very annoying pest. It seems never to leave us, summer or winter. It is an insect allied to the aphis. They are very active, and troublesome by the amount of injury they do to plants, not only in the plant-house, but also in the open air. They may pursue their depredations to a great extent before they are discovered; their minuteness renders them inconspicuous. They attack the leaves of plants from the underside, and by depositing glutinous matter the pores of the leaves are closed; thereby large portions of the leaves are closed, and become blotched or apparently scorched, which gives the plant a bad appearance. Rhododendrons, azaleas, fuchsias, and many other of our border plants are very much predisposed to their ravages. If allowed to have the freedom of their own sweet will, the plant will soon have to undergo the heading operation. Water is as good a preventive as can be got for destroying. Syringing with pure water will keep them under. Starvation and a hot, dry air will bring thrip as soon as anything. Tobacco-water applied with a syringe to the under sides of the leaves, and afterwards syringed with clear water, is a good remedy; so also is flour of sulphur.

Glass.—As the days become warmer, increased attention must be given to glass structures regarding ventilation, taking care, however, to prevent the entrance of cold winds, which would speedily do considerable injury among the plants. It is a mistake to avoid ventilation during hot weather, as many plants suffer quite as much from excess of heat as from excess of cold. During bright sunshine the house should be shaded. Water plentifully, and do not spare the syringe if you desire to keep the plants clean and healthy. Keep a close watch for insects, especially among the foliage plants, such as dracaenas and crotons, which may be sponged with warm soapsuds, and cleansed with the aid of the syringe and pure water. These plants not only require liberal supplies of water, but also plenty of room. When houses are small the temptation to crowd too many plants into them is almost irresistible, but under such circumstances really fine specimens cannot be expected. Let all plants be carefully cleared of decayed leaves and dead flowers, loosen the soil on the top, and surface with fresh soil. This will give them a neat and pleasing appearance. This dressing or surfacing is of more benefit to the plants than many think, and more particularly to those plants in small pots.

Sow seeds of cineraria, calceolaria, and similar plants in shallow pans of fine soil, barely covering the seed. If this be properly done, there will be no difficulty in obtaining seedlings, the principal cause of failure being the use of coarse soil, and covering the seeds too thickly. Gloxinia and tuberous begonia seed may also be sown in pots, under a sheet of glass, to make bulbs for the following year's blooming.

As the conservatory becomes crowded many of the hardier plants may be removed to the bushhouse. Among these fuchsias intended for late flowering may be included. The appearance of the bushhouse depends largely on the manner in which the plants are arranged. Anything tending to monotony should be avoided, the plants being placed so as to cause each to assist in displaying the others to advantage.

VEGETABLE GARDEN.

The carrot crop is frequently rendered useless in many gardens by grubs eating into the roots. This takes place in many well-managed gardens. The best remedy is to scatter a quantity of soot and lime over the surface of the ground before forking it over for the carrots. This works it into the ground, and keeps the soil free from all sorts of grubs for the whole season. The next best way is to sow the lime and soot between the rows and hoe it into the ground.

Tomatoes are doing well where the soil is moist; when the fruit appears it must be supported off the ground, otherwise it will suffer from grubs, slugs, and damp. The same treatment answers for the Cape gooseberry, asparagus and rhubarb roots require thinning and water, the latter becoming miserably poor when overcrowded.

It is a good plan to leave parsley to prove itself before finally thinning it out, then all the infirm and less curled varieties should be removed, and only the best retained. The soil best suited for parsley is a light sandy loam on a rather dry bottom, enriched with a liberal dressing of manure, charred refuse, burnt earth, and soot. All might be applied if available, and, if not, one or more of the stimulants named. Charred refuse, rough wood ashes, and soot suit parsley admirably. The leaves and stems run up with extraordinary vigour, and curl with a prodigality of verdure and size in such a mixture as to render parsley as unlike as anything well could be the common parsley seen in some gardens. A loose surface is also favourable to its growth.

Sow celery seed in boxes of fine light rich soil, keep it a little shaded, and don't neglect to water. When large enough to handle, prick out in rich soil, afterwards plant in well-manured trenches.

ORCHARD, ETC.

This is a busy month with the vine. Continue to rub off all superfluous buds and shoots, and tie the shoots to trellises or stakes carefully. Do not wait for the appearance of the oidium. Dust with sulphur at once, it is a preventative and cure; look carefully for caterpillars, and pick them off by hand.

Strawberries may be continued fruitful, having copious waterings, but nothing less than a good soaking will be of much service. Runners should not as a rule be allowed to root on the fruit beds. They not only smother the fruiting plants, but seriously impoverish the soil. The best plan is to grow a few plants, according to requirements in lines for the special purpose, and to remove the blossoms as they appear. Runners will then be plentiful and early. Any barren plant should be at once removed. It would probably bloom the following year, but it is as well not to propagate from non-blooming plants.

Attend to newly-planted trees, they will now be making good growth, disbud them, and regulate the shoots wherever they require it. Much depends on this summer pruning and regulating.

LAW REPORT.

IN BANCO.

(Before the Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Cohen, and Mr. Justice Pring.)

PLAINTIFF'S APPEAL DISMISSED.
A QUESTION OF WAIVER.
Rendall v Barraclough and others.

Dr. Cullen, K.C., and Dr. Brissenden, instructed by Mr. Ralph L. Houston (of Messrs. Houston and Co.), appeared for the appellant, Walter George Rendall; and Mr. Leverrier and Mr. D. G. Ferguson, instructed by Mr. W. E. Hawkins, for the respondents, who are the deacons of the Pitt-street Congregational Church. This was a motion to make absolute a rule nisi granted on August 11 last to set aside the nonsuit, and for a new trial. The action, which was tried at the last sittings for the hearing of causes, before Mr. Justice Sly and a jury of four, was brought by Walter George Rendall, organ builder, against Sydney Henry Barraclough and others, deacons of the Pitt-street Congregational Church, to recover for work done and material provided in connection with an organ sold by plaintiff to the defendants. The defence was mainly that plaintiff had failed to carry out the work according to the specifications of the contract. The contract was entered into in December, 1901, and the price agreed upon for the work was £1450, exclusive of £50 for extras and alterations, the total amount claimed being £2089 3s. The whole matter turned upon the question whether the building of the organ which plaintiff contracted for, outside the question of extras and other work, was completed irrespective of the right of the defendants to have the work passed by their expert. Clause 7 of the contract provided that the organ had to be passed by the deacons' expert before it was finally handed over, but the plaintiff contended that the defendants by their use of the organ for various purposes after it was erected in the church had waived that condition of the contract. At the trial Mr. Justice Sly nonsuited the plaintiff on the ground that there was no evidence of waiver by the defendants of the conditions precedent to the right of the plaintiff to maintain his action. Plaintiff now appealed on the ground that his Honor had arrived at an erroneous decision.

The argument was resumed, and Mr. Leverrier on behalf of the defendants said that the deacons were entitled to use the organ for Sunday services and for choir practice. The evidence as to other uses was very vague indeed. Even without the letters that passed there was not sufficient evidence to enable a jury to say that there was any user beyond that agreed upon, or anything to show that defendants intended to waive the condition that the organ was to be passed by their expert. No jury, he submitted, could find that plaintiff completed the organ or handed it over to the defendants' expert, or that defendants waived any of the conditions of the contract.

Dr. Cullen in reply contended that there was nothing in the correspondence between the parties prior to Easter, 1904, which in any way shook the plaintiff's case. His learned friend said that defendants were constantly asking the plaintiff when the organ would be ready for examination by the expert. That was hardly correct, because it was not till November, 1904, that they commenced the process of asking plaintiff when the instrument would be ready for inspection. That was the first time since Easter, 1903, and during the interval the defendants were continually using the organ. If the jury had been allowed to decide the case, and had come to the conclusion that the organ, which was good enough for use for a period of three and a half years, could not have been an incomplete organ, and that the understanding between the parties as to expert approval had been departed from, there would have been sufficient foundation for that conclusion. There was extremely strong oral evidence that that was the position, and it was for the jury to say whether the correspondence cancelled it. He submitted that there was evidence to justify a conclusion in favour of plaintiff, and if that had been so found, the Court could not have set the verdict aside as an unreasonable verdict.

The Chief Justice said that the contract was entered into on December 27, 1901, and the 20th clause provided "that the price of the above specified organ, delivered in the church in good order and condition, and kept so, free of charge for one year from date of completion, is £1450, on terms to be arranged." Clause 21 provided "that the builder shall not require payment of any portion of the purchase money until the organ is delivered and handed over in perfect order." Clause 7 stated, "That the centre pipe work shall be copiously winded, and that on erection and completion shall be sufficient for the general requirements of the church, and that the instrument shall pass the approval of the deacons' expert before being handed over to the deacons." By clause 22 of the contract plaintiff undertook to deliver the organ within six months from the date of acceptance, and that during that period he would keep the organ in tune free of cost. It would thus be seen that delivery was to take place within a period of six months, and that the organ was to pass the approval of the deacons' expert before it was handed over. That being the contract, they had on one side the plaintiff, who was an organ-builder and an expert, and on the other side a number of gentlemen, who, though they might be very good judges of the capabilities of an organ, knew nothing whatever as to whether it was properly built or built in such a way as to be satisfactory to the congregation. They, accordingly required—as contracts of the kind generally did—that an expert should be appointed; and Mr. Sykes, a well-known and distinguished organist, was chosen. He was mentioned throughout the whole correspondence, and apparently he was selected with the approval of the plaintiff. The defendants, in defending the action, said that the term of the contract that the organ should pass the approval of Mr. Sykes before being handed over was never carried out at all. Plaintiff then said, in answer to that, "Yes, that is true; but clause 7 of the contract was, in point of fact, waived by you." The organ was to be completed and handed over within a period of six months, whereas in point of fact two years and three months elapsed, and, admittedly, the organ was not finished. In 1906 it was not completed, and no attempt was made by the plaintiff to bring it before the expert appointed by the deacons of the church. It had, however, previously been arranged between the plaintiff and defendants that the latter were to have the use of the organ for church services, and choir practice, but plaintiff now said that they used it for other purposes, such as concerts, oratorios, and weddings, without his permission, and that they accepted the instrument and waived the condition contained in the seventh clause of the contract. In his opinion, there was no evidence that the plaintiff ever objected to the use of the organ for other purposes; and, looking at the oral evidence, and the correspondence which had passed between the parties, he was clearly of opinion that there had been no waiver, and that plaintiff understood all through that the organ must pass the expert appointed by defendants. If Mr. Justice Sly had left the question to the jury, and the jury had found for the plaintiff on the ground that there was evidence of waiver, then, in the view he took of the case, it would have been the duty of the Court to set it aside, and, possibly, enter it for the defendants as being a verdict which could not reasonably have been arrived at. The case of Nash v Inman, in the Appellate Court, was a clear authority upon that point. For these reasons, he was of opinion that his Honor was right in nonsuiting, and that the rule nisi must be discharged with costs.

Mr. Justice Cohen and Mr. Justice Pring concurred.

Rule discharged, with costs.

IN DIVORCE.

(Before Mr. Justice Simpson.)

GORMAN v GORMAN.

Mr. Whitfeld, instructed by Messrs. Shipway and Berne, appeared for the petitioner; and Mr. P. K. White, instructed by Mr. R. Thornton, for the respondent. This was a suit brought by Ada Gorman against Samuel Albert Gorman for the dissolution of the marriage. The marriage between the parties took place on February 12, 1900. The issues submitted on behalf of the petitioner were "whether respondent during three years and upwards has been an habitual drunkard, and has habitually been guilty of cruelty towards petitioner; whether the respondent has, during one year previous to April 1, 1908 (the latter being the date of the presentation of the petition), repeatedly assaulted and cruelly beaten the petitioner." The respondent had filed an answer denying that he had been guilty of the charges involved in the issues.

The petitioner's case having closed, respondent gave evidence in contradiction of the charges of habitual drunkenness and cruelty brought against him.

His Honor found for the petitioner on the ground of habitual drunkenness and cruelty on the part of the respondent, and granted a decree nisi, returnable in six months.

IN EQUITY.

(Before Mr. Justice A. H. Simpson, Chief Judge in Equity.)

A TRUST MATTER.
Smith v Kitt and others.

Mr. J. A. Browne, instructed by Mr. R. J. M. Foord, appeared for the plaintiffs, Beatrice Isabel Smith (by Francis Gould Smith) and William Miller; Mr. Harvey, instructed by Messrs. Jones and Jones, appeared for the defendant Catherine Kitt; and Mr. Maughan, instructed by Messrs. Fisher and Macansh, for the defendants Edward Abraham Read and Frederick Chapman. Other defendants, the Queensland Trustees, Limited, A. A. Castling, and Joseph Hodel, were not represented. In this case it appeared that John Major, of [illegible], Queensland, left an estate worth about £35,000 to the defendant Catherine Kitt for life, and directed that after her death it should fall to his four daughters in equal shares. The defendants Catherine Kitt (then Catherine Major) and one W. J. Castling were appointed trustees of the will. It was charged by the plaintiffs that the defendant Catherine Kitt had appropriated part of the estate, and had committed breaches of trust in wrongfully purchasing property and deposited the estate moneys, and plaintiffs asked that proper inquiries be made and accounts taken by the Court. Mrs. Kitt in her defence denied these allegations, and said she had expended a considerable portion of the capital moneys in permanent improvements and rebuilding upon portions of the trust property, and that she had expended her own moneys for such purposes. By consent a motion to determine preliminary points of law was turned into a motion for decree, and the defendant Mrs. Kitt was ordered to file certain accounts, the Master to make inquiries, and an injunction previously granted was continued.

INDUSTRIAL COURT.

(Before his Honor Judge Heydon.)

SUMMONS FOR PENALTY.
Young v Dombkins.

George Richmond Young proceeded against William Dombkins for a breach of an award. Mr. Stuart Robertson appeared for the claimant union; and Mr. Keith Cohen for the defendant Dombkins.

George Richmond Young, secretary of the Shop Assistants' Union, said he went to Newcastle, and told Mr. Dombkins that he was committing a breach of the award by paying an employee, Miss Milton, less than 25s per week.

Mr. Cohen contended that Mr. Dombkins had been very kind indeed to Miss Milton, who was a factory hand, and not a shop assistant. This was a summons for money due, but that had already been paid.

His Honor: The payment of the money does not do away with the breach of the award. It was not a case of sweating, where one might get indignant. It seemed a case where the weaker an employee the higher the wage. But there was actually a breach of an award, and defendant was fined £1 1s, with £4 4s costs. The summons for money due under the award was dismissed.

IN BANKRUPTCY.

(Before the Acting Registrar, Mr. F. H. Salusbury.)

HEARING OF CREDITOR'S PETITION.
THE FREEMAN AND WALLACE CASE.

Robert Grimson versus Howard Freeman and Richard Wallace. Mr. Moriarty, instructed by Mr. H. E. M'Intosh, appeared for the petitioning creditor, and said that the respondent Wallace had voluntarily sequestrated his estate on October 22, and Freeman on October 21. He also said that the respondents were indebted to the petitioning creditor in £673 11s 6d, and certain costs, and asked that the petitions be consolidated, and the same official assignee appointed in each case.

The Acting Registrar made an order as asked, and appointed Mr. W. H. Palmer official assignee.

EXAMINATION UNDER SECTION 30.

Re Richard Wallace. Cecilia Florence Frances Wallace, and Richard Wallace, the bankrupt, were examined, and the examination was then adjourned generally.

VOLUNTARY SEQUESTRATION.

POLICE COURTS.

TRANSFERS AND LICENSES.

The Licensing Bench at the Central Police Court on Thursday granted the transfers of the following licenses:—Petersham Inn, Parramatta-road, Petersham, Thomas Barrett to Catherine Fraser; Grand Pacific Hotel, Watson's Bay, William T. Chitten to Angus Crawford; Tennyson Hotel, Botany, Dorothy Hamilton (widow and executrix of the late Irvine Hamilton) to herself; Royal Sovereign Hotel, Liverpool-street, Sydney, Emmeline Taplin to Walter Henry Haughton; Printers' Arms Hotel, Liverpool-street, Sydney, Julia M'Culloch to John D. Cox; President Lincoln Hotel, Joseph Scullard to James Joseph Cleary; Kelso's Hotel, Oxford-street, city, Conway Drew to John J. Barnett.

COULD NOT FIND SURETY.

Thomas William Child, a salesman, who was on Thursday at the Central Police Court sentenced to 21 days' hard labour, but whose sentence was, on the urgent appeal of his solicitor, altered to three months' hard labour, to be suspended under the first offenders' provision, appealed yesterday afternoon to have the original sentence imposed. His reason was that he could not find the necessary surety.

Mr. Payten said that he had determined, in the interests of Child, his wife, and family, to alter the sentence to the original term. He had since been informed on good authority that it was not the wages that he received that contributed to his downfall. It was the drink. He warned Child that if he again came before the Court he would have cause to regret it.

SELLING LOLLIES ON SUNDAY.

Michael Chingos, a confectioner, of George-street, pleaded guilty yesterday in the Summons Division of the Central Police Court to a charge of having sold lollies on Sunday. Defendant, who had 25 previous convictions against him for offences of a similar nature, was fined £3 with 5s 6d costs, or in default 14 days.

SLY-GROG SELLING.

Before Mr. Clarke, D.S.M., yesterday, at the Water Police Court, Demetrius Arsenas, 44, restaurant keeper, was charged that, he not being the agent or servant of a holder of a license under the Liquor Act, did at his restaurant, 18 Forbes-street, on November 1, sell wine without holding a license authorising the sale thereof. The evidence for the prosecution was to the effect that Constable Anderson and a man named Gabriel visited the restaurant kept by the accused in Forbes-street, and called for meals, which were served with tea. They asked if lager beer could not be obtained, to which defendant replied in the negative, saying that he had some wine. Wine was supplied and paid for in addition to the meals. Accused in his defence stated that the men when they entered the premises pretended to be ill, and he in kindness got them the wine, for which he refused to accept payment. After pressure he accepted a shilling as a gift. Other evidence having been given supporting defendant's story, a conviction was recorded, and a fine of £30 imposed, or in default three months' imprisonment. The liquor found was ordered to be confiscated.

Mothers will find O-CE-O-LO, the shampoo, just the thing to wash their children's hair with, for, aside from its tonic action, it also possesses germicidal properties. One shilling per jar.—Advt.

DEADLY HOUSE-FLY.

SOME DISEASES IT PROPAGATES.

It is about time Australians woke up to the necessity of getting rid of the deadly house-fly. This insect until lately has been regarded as quite harmless, but recent scientific investigation has conclusively proved it to be the carrier of quite half the infectious and contagious diseases to which human flesh is heir. Dr. Daniel D. Jackson, the eminent bacteriologist of the New York Water Bureau, states that in 1907, in New York city alone, out of 7000 deaths from intestinal diseases, 5000 of such deaths were due to the common house-fly carrying intestinal disease germs for sewage or offal to food and drink; besides which there were no less than 50,000 cases of sickness within the same area due to the same cause.

When the Sanitary Inspectors' Association held its annual conference in Liverpool (England) recently, Sir James Crichton-Browne devoted the chief part of his presidential address to the disease-spreading capacity of the common house-fly. He stated that 100,000 fecal bacteria had been found on the legs, body, and mouth of one fly, and that there was an exact correspondence in populous centres between the prevalence of this pest and of deaths from diarrhoeal complaints.

It is now known that flies frequently act as the intermediary between typhoid sufferers and unsuspecting and healthy individuals. It has also been sufficiently shown that the Musca domestica (the scientific name of this pest of the house) is the most frequent cause of tubercular inoculation. And why not? It alights on the sputum of the consumptive, flies through the open window and into the milk jug of a householder some 50 yards away, where it may meet an untimely death. But the tubercle germs, clinging to its legs and mouth, find in the milk a most congenial breeding-ground, and may render that innocent and nourishing fluid as deadly as if it contained arsenic.

There is no filth to which the common house-fly has not free access, and there is no food which it may not thereafter infect—for this may be done whilst the same is in the very act of being placed in our mouths. Sandy blight—that bane of the dry interior of this country—is propagated solely by the house-fly, and scores of minor ailments doubtless owe their prevalence to the same insect.

It is important to "exterminate the house-fly," slaughter it, not singly, but in whole battalions. Don't merely drive it out of the open window, to float in again at the open door on the next waft of air; but deal with it finally and conclusively wherever it may be found. Remember, one fly may have 25,000,000 descendants in a single season; therefore let your efforts be prompt and never-ceasing, for upon the absence of the house-fly very largely depends the health, and sometimes the lives, of you and your family.

A FARMER'S SUICIDE.

FOUND FLOATING.

An inquest was held by the Acting City Coroner, Mr. F. G. Adrian, yesterday afternoon, concerning the death of Thomas Rhodes, 38, a farmer, who some time ago arrived in Sydney from Mudgee. Deceased's body was found floating in the Upper Lane Cove River on October 29.

Mr. G. S. Beeby stated that he appeared on behalf of the ratepayers of the district and the council of Lane Cove to put before the Coroner the conduct of the asylum, of which deceased had been an inmate.

The Coroner replied that his duty was merely to inquire into the cause of death, and any evidence relating to that he would be prepared to hear, but unless it had some relation to the cause of death he did not think it was within his province to deal with it.

Alfred Herman, the proprietor of a private hospital at Longueville, known as the Retreat, said that deceased had been an inmate of the hospital for about five weeks. At 6.30 a.m. on October 29 Rhodes was found to be missing. A search was made, but without success, and witness informed the police. Witness said that every precaution was taken to keep patients within bounds.

Other evidence showed that deceased's body was seen floating in the Upper Lane Cove River on the same day on which deceased was reported missing by Charles Hewitt, a deck hand on a motor boat. The police were informed, and Constable Lucas recovered the body and conveyed it to the morgue.

A verdict of suicide was recorded.

COUNTERFEIT COIN.

CASES AT BALMAIN.

At the Balmain Police Court yesterday, before Mr. L. S. Donaldson, S.M., Coucha Calderon, 44, married, and a native of Spain, was charged with unlawfully offering a counterfeit coin intended to resemble a King's silver shilling, knowing the same to be counterfeit, to one Elizabeth Alexander at Balmain on October 27. The same accused was further charged with uttering a counterfeit shilling to Mary Tanner, at Balmain, on October 28, and with uttering a counterfeit shilling to Harriet Drew at Balmain, on October 21. Mr. Parker appeared for the accused, who, it was stated, did not understand English.

The accused, who reserved her defence, was committed for trial on the three charges.

Bail was allowed, herself in £80, and two sureties of £40 each, or one in £80.

TICKET SCALPING.

At the Water Summons Court yesterday, before Mr. W. M. Macfarlane, S.M., Reginald Tutton, of Sydney, was proceeded against by Robert Davies, chief ticket collector, New South Wales Government Railways, upon an information alleging that he sold a portion of a railway ticket without having been authorised to do so by the Chief Commissioner for Railways and Tramways, on October 13. It was stated that defendant sold a railway ticket available from Parramatta to Blayney, and for years past had been engaged in business of a similar character. A fine of £30 was imposed, with costs, or in default four months' imprisonment, with hard labour.

FOR THE ADVANTAGE OF THE STATE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—As defence, immigration, and closer settlement are the three most important problems engaging our attention at the present moment, the corollary to their solution is that the construction of railway lines, that will serve not one community but several, must be the policy of any enterprising Government.

In our State we have thousands of acres of soil that would enable the man with small capital at his disposal to go out, rear, and educate future sturdy colonists, if he were afforded the necessary facilities. Broad acres, at the present time only carrying a couple of sheep, perhaps one, and thereby producing wealth for the colony, to the extent of a mere trifle, and providing very little employment for the labourer and manufacturer, would, under the plough-share, create solid wealth, which increment would undoubtedly cause industrial activity throughout the colony. Start one spoke of the industrial wheel, as it were, in motion, and the others speedily follow in their dependent spheres.

A line that would undoubtedly prove of the greatest importance, not only to the colony but to the Commonwealth, is one that would link the north-east with the dry west. The connection with the west requires the greatest consideration; it must be as far west as possible, in order that the starving stock, in times of drought may be quickly removed from the arid west to the favoured table lands of the north-east. Another reason why the connection should be as far west as possible is that when the line goes from Mudgee to Coonabarabran, which must come about, it will join that cross-country line at Cobbora, thereby providing a second line to Wallerawang and Sydney, which would be a great boon to the producers of flesh and wool in the west, not to mention the relief of traffic on the main line, which in periods of plentifulness is very heavy, while the cost of duplicating the main western line would be saved.

For military purposes a line from Werris Creek to connect with the western line would be of great value, when we consider the formation of lines that must necessarily be constructed in the future. As the line from Cobar to Broken Hill is one that will be built, it can easily be seen by a glance at the map that from Dubbo to that city is very nearly a straight line, hence, if the connection between Werris Creek and the west was made at Dubbo it would mean a saving of 320 miles from Brisbane to Adelaide, and 100 miles between Brisbane and Melbourne.

Should, at any time, anything happen to the Hawkesbury bridge, this line would preserve intact the continuity of the State's railway system. If it should ever happen that the transport of troops were necessary, troops could be easily moved to and from any part of New South Wales or from the other States.

A line from Mudgee to Coonabarabran would open up some of the finest agricultural land to be found anywhere. Thousands of acres could be given to the agriculturist, who can only settle when in close proximity to a railway line. Get these men to settle, and they will find constant employment for sturdy labourers.

By railway lines intersecting one another, new villages would spring up, immigrants (what made America but immigration?) would be attracted, and an industrial activity would prevail which would bring comfort, pleasure, and security of employment to hundreds, who at present are not dwelling within the environment of contentment.

I am, etc,
PLAIN BILL.
Dubbo, Oct. 31.

Mr. Frank W. Fraser, of Scone, N.S.W., writes:—"I was touring New Zealand some time ago, and owing to the continued wet weather contracted a very severe cold. While staying at the 'Royal Oak,' in Wellington, a friend advised me to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. This advice was followed, and after I had taken a few doses was completely cured. I can confidently recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to anyone suffering from throat or lung troubles."—Advt.

DISORDERED LIVER.

Pains Between the Shoulders.

New Departure in Therapeutics.

The most remarkable departure in therapeutical science of recent years is undoubtedly the unique combination of laxative and tonic principles in that wonderful preparation LAXO-TONIC PILLS.

These Pills are effecting remarkable cures in Australia to-day, and they are rapidly taking the place of all other remedies as a safe and certain Spring Medicine. Read what Mr. F. C. Dowding, 49 Brown-street, Paddington, N.S.W., says regarding them:—

"For a considerable time I suffered from a disordered Liver, which produced a number of unpleasant symptoms, such as an acid taste in the mouth in the mornings, dull headaches, and general lassitude. My appetite varied considerably, and sometimes I was afflicted with bilious turns of short duration. There was also the usual unpleasant pain between the shoulders. Sometimes this pain was of a dull character, and sometimes it was piercing. Perhaps the worst manifestation of the indifferent working of the mechanism of my Liver was giddiness. This was not so pronounced as to prevent me walking or duly attending to my business, but it was extremely disagreeable nevertheless. I tried many of the well-known and much-advertised remedies for Liver Complaint, but never got complete relief till I struck Laxo-Tonic Pills. After taking these Pills for a time my head felt perfectly clear, and my Liver got into thorough working order again, and has not troubled me since. I can speak in terms of highest praise of Laxo-Tonic Pills. They evidently mark a new departure in therapeutical science."

Laxo-Tonic Pills are sold by all Chemists and Stores. Regular Size 10½d, Double Size 1/6, or a Free Sample will be sent upon application to the Laxo-Tonic Pill Company, 15 O'Connell-street, Sydney.

LIFE IN LONDON AND THEREABOUT.

(CHRONICLED BY HENRY W. LUCY.)

Lords and Commons.—Approaching Crisis.—Lesson of the Newcastle Election.—A Page of Secret History.—Mutiny of the Bounty.—"Times" Book Club.

WESTMINSTER, Oct. 2.

Whilst decision as to the precise course to be adopted in dealing with the Licensing Bill in the House of Lords remains formally deferred till the measure has passed the Commons, it is increasingly probable that it will be rejected on the motion for the second reading. Lord Lansdowne is personally in favour of stopping short of that extreme step, and paying the House of Commons the deference of giving their measure full consideration in committee. The leaders of the Opposition have, however, been informed on high authority, in which one of their own law officers concurs, that if they endeavour to arrive at a compromise by amendments in committee they cannot fail to come in conflict with the privilege of the other House. Such difficulty would arise in connection with the time limit, and upon any attempt to raise the question of compensation.

As was shown in respect of an amendment to the Old-Age Pensions Bill carried in the House of Lords last session, and denounced in the Commons as an infringement of privilege, alterations in committee of these vital parts of the bill would be peremptorily nullified. Of course there would remain the opportunity of refusing to submit to the action of the Commons, bringing about a deadlock in conference of the two Houses. Or an end to the bill might be made on the third reading. Meanwhile there would have been much waste of time, and the creation of an angry feeling between the two Houses reflected throughout the country. These reasons will doubtless prevail in shaping the course adopted by the leader of the Opposition in the Lords when the Licensing Bill reaches that Chamber.

Whilst welcoming the result of the Newcastle election as adding a vote to the scanty muster of the Opposition in the Commons, there is among sober-minded Unionists a feeling of discomfort. It is not often that the causes of the transfer of a big majority can be traced with the mathematical precision possible in the case of Newcastle. Accepting the calculations made by Unionist authorities, a minimum of 2000 Irish votes were, more Hibernico, by way of grateful acknowledgment of the Government having passed an Irish University Bill, transferred to the Opposition candidate. That counts 4000 votes on a division. The Socialist candidate filched 3000 of the votes which at the general election were undoubtedly given to the Liberals. Here are the 7000 votes whose disappearance from the Liberal roll accounts for the return of the Unionist candidate. The irony of the situation is as obvious as to good Unionists it is painful. The two sections of the political community with which they have least sympathy, whose tenets are most abhorred, are the Irish Nationalists and the Socialists. Yet these are the combined forces which have enabled them to capture a Liberal stronghold.

In the account given in the "Cornhill Magazine" of the current month of the secret history of the split in the Liberal party on the Home Rule Bill of 1886, there is a significant passage which, as far as I have seen, has not been noted in newspaper editorials on the subject. In the course of his picturesque narrative of the historic negotiations in which he took a leading part, Mr. Labouchere writes to Mr. Lucy with respect to the private meeting of Mr. Chamberlain's friends that settled the fate of the bill and smashed up the Liberal party:—"Having heard the result, I went to the Reform Club. There I found Bright, who eagerly asked what the meeting had decided. I said, to vote against the bill. He said he regretted this. When I told him it was due to his letter, read to the meeting by Mr. Caine, he replied he had only said that he should himself vote against the bill. I reminded him he had previously told me he would vote neither way. He answered that he had been insulted by Sexton."

There is the whole pitiful story, with its far-reaching results, not only to Ireland, but to the Empire, indicated in a sentence. There is not the slightest doubt that at this particular juncture John Bright held the fate of parties in the palm of his hand. As indicated by the negotiations carried on through the agency of Mr. Labouchere, the Radicals were growing uneasy at the prospect of being instrumental in displacing Mr. Gladstone, and setting Lord Salisbury on his throne. Had Mr. Bright gone down to the meeting, held in Committee Room No. 15, and preached peace, peace would have prevailed. But "Sexton had ipsnited" him. The wound rankled deeply. He abandoned his earlier avowed attitude of neutrality, recommended his friends to vote against the bill, and so it was wrecked, with stupendous consequences then unforeseen.

The deathless human interest that for more than a century has lingered round the story of the mutiny of the Bounty is illustrated afresh by a correspondence that has just reached me. Nearly three months ago, under date July 4, there appeared in this column a paragraph reporting the sale at Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson's Wellington Rooms, of an autograph manuscript, in which Captain Pipon related the story of the discovery of the mutineers on Pitcairn Island. "Captain Pipon," it was written, "described the condition of the community, consisting, with one exception, of women and children. The exception was Fletcher Christian, who had assumed the name of John Adams."

A member of the Australian Historical Society writes to me from Sydney: "If it could be proved that the sole survivor of the crew was, as Captain Pipon states, Fletcher Christian, who had assumed the name of John Adams, a very interesting discovery indeed would have been made. Captain Folger, of the ship Topaz, of Boston, landed on Pitcairn Island in 1808, and reported that he found Alexander Smith, alias John Adams, the sole survivor. This was six years before Captain Pipon visited Pitcairn. If Captain Pipon says that Fletcher Christian was still alive, and had adopted the name of one of his shipmates, it would throw a new light on the mystery attaching to Christian's fate. Captain Peter Haywood was under the impression he saw Christian in Plymouth in 1809. Singularly enough, the age attributed to Adams at his death in 1829 (65) approximates nearer to Christian's years than to Adams'."

Another correspondent, equally erudite and not less profoundly interested in the mystery, writes, also from Sydney: "Fletcher Christian was killed by the Otaheitans a year after the mutineers settled at Pitcairn, more than 20 years before Captain Pipon visited the island. The man he met was Fletcher Christian's son, Thursday October Christian; and the only surviving mutineer at that date was Alexander Smith, who had taken the name of John Adams." My first correspondent suggests that so interesting a document as Captain Pipon's report should be lodged in the library of New South Wales, and he undertakes to take steps to secure its possession.

After a long embittered campaign, in which the "Times" must have lost considerable sums of money, the Book Club to which it gave its name has capitulated on the subject of the premature sale of books issued at net cost. It will be remembered publishers and booksellers agreed that no such edition should be offered for sale at a reduced price within the term of six months. The "Times" Book Club ruthlessly over-rode this arrangement, throwing on the market, sometimes within a month or six weeks of publication, parcels of net cost books, to the detriment of the bookseller who had stocked himself on the understanding that he had at least six months in which to work off the books at full price. Under the old regime of Printing House-square, which was probably in this matter helpless in the hands of its American coadjutors, neither the remonstrances of the booksellers nor the reprisals of the publishers had effect. The fight was carried on under two serious disadvantages. The publishers not only withdrew their advertisements from the "Times," implying a serious reduction in revenue, they refused to supply books to the club, an interdict evaded by devices which occasionally licited damaging rebuke publicly administered. The new proprietary, unhampered by engagements to the enterprising Americans, and not bound by former policy, have determined to put an end to a struggle that brought no profit to anybody, least of all to the shareholders of the "Times."

A WOMAN'S LETTER.

Summer Stays Late.

LONDON, W., Oct. 2.

The first Friday of October! If you were here to-day and could feel the wonderfully warm air, and see the sun shining as if it were June, you would be amazed at this phase of the English climate. It has simply beaten all records. One is used to the "little summer of St. Martin," but this is more like our own midsummer. We are back into summer garments, and delighting in the absence of fires. All the windows are open, ice is in constant request, and the approach of winter seems held back in some mysterious manner. There is an unusual quiet in the atmosphere. It is as though the sun shone through a light veil. Wind there is none; in the early morning it was misty; but that sort of mist promises a lovely day.

Dress Notes.

All the dressmaking houses and milliners' are at their busiest. The autumn fashions are in full view, and the mode Directoire leads the van. This 1796 mode is being in some cases copied directly from the prints of the period. I love its beautiful lines for what I call dressmakers' gowns, and agree that dress is at a most graceful epoch. I am not so fond of the Directoire style for day or tailor costumes. The coat and skirt has to be modified, for the skirt of the Directory was a long, narrow, plain thing. We keep to that in all the evening gowns of the period; but when you come to tailor gowns, of course the skirts must be short, and they do not look as well as the long ones when brought above the waistline. Clever tailors, however, manage to make them becoming, but they are Empire, not Directoire gowns.

I saw a very good example of this kind of gown only last night, belonging to a beautiful Australian woman, whose taste in colouring and trimming is exceptionally correct. She has so beautiful a skin that anything becomes her. The costume was devised in an artistic shade of soft green cloth, made with a gored and high-waisted skirt, with one broad pleat down the front, held in place by buttons. (Button manufacturers are making fortunes!) The back had also a flat box pleat, and came so well up above the waist. They fit them on to a bone-shaped belt, put inside the skirt, which grips the figure at the right place. The coat was of the Directoire type, with a waistcoat made of the cloth braided in cinnamon brown, black, and a touch of pale blue. There was a black satin roll collar, turning over at the neck, and the coat buttoned with two buttons on the bust. There were straight lines at the semi-fitting back, so that the long, straight line was observed.

There is a great feeling for the classically-cut gown, which has been taken from the Greek, with the folded sleeve kept in place by gold and metal ornaments, and those who do not care for the severe lines of the true Directoire gown can find a haven in flowing robes of soft satin of crepe de chine, bordering them with heavy fringes, and weighting the long sash ends with lead concealed in the stems of tassels.

New Hats.

The new hats have large low crowns. The Cloche has gone out; these hats are more of the Romney or Gainsborough type. Many of them have very large bows of velvet in front and long ends coming from the back tied at the side. They go well with a high-waisted gown cut in Romney style. It seems that the Directoire time did not produce pretty hats for ladies. The true Directoire hat is small in the brim, and has a conical crown, else a high crown, narrowing and flat at the top. Perhaps you may have seen costume plays that recall the shape. Sir Henry Irving's hats in "The Lyons Mail" are more the kind I mean. So the broad-brimmed hat, which to be right should exceed the width of one's shoulders, is the right thing now to wear with the Directoire gown.

Every country, every style, is laid under contribution for trimming hats just now. The Malayan Peninsula furnishes huge quills from the Argus pheasant, put straight across the front of hats.

Large mounts are made of upstanding feathers, arranged exactly as an Indian chief puts on his feather headdress before going to hold a palaver. The feathers reach nearly round the crowns of the hats, and are kept in place by embroidered motifs, to match in colour.

Then there are wings of every size and shape, mostly of mammoth proportions. It is all "large" this year.

Of course side by side with these garments you have the modern motor coat, voluminous with capacious sleeves, and worn with a bonnet of the second Empire period, 1852, frilled inside like a baby's cap, tied under the chin with broad ribbons, and a floating motor veil. I can dimly remember my mother in bonnets like these. They are, however, in danger of being cut out by the capuchin cowl for motoring purposes, and I think ere long we shall revert to the porkpie hat, with one wing, like Millais' "First Sermon" picture, or a wide Alsatian bow, mounted on a scrap of foundation, for wearing at matinees.

The matinee hat is coming again to the fore, and it is a moot question whether managers will not have to provide better accommodation in their theatres for ladies removing their hats. Those in use are absurdly inadequate. Especially when one considers the price of seats and programmes. And, again, the rush to get home after a matinee, when the entire stalls and dress circle would fight for the first turn at a looking-glass. Frenzied attendants are unable to cope with the situation; for naturally it is no light thing to remove a hat and put it on again without due looking-glass accommodation. Still there it is. At present if you go to a matinee and the women wear these huge hats no one but the front row will see anything of the stage.

Sleeves.

The sleeve has dwindled from a very important point in women's dress to a close-fitting counterpart of the mere man's sleeve. It must be perfectly cut and perfectly put into the armhole, or it loses all its cachet. For blouses the tight sleeve, of course, must be worn under a coat, and some of the models I have seen are very severe indeed.

Fortunately, the coats are worn with hemstitched jabots and frills at the sleeves coming up a little way on the outside of the arms, just where in a man's coat they put buttons and button-holes. It smartens up a quiet tailor-made coat very much.

Modes Modified.

And though all this talk about Directoire sounds very elaborate, as if you would have to look up prints of the period and all that kind of thing, as long as your skirts are skimpy and come up above the waistline, and your sleeves are tight, you are quite in line with the fashion. When the time comes for normal waistlines the little bit of extra length is taken off at the waist, and the skirt dropped to its normal height. For evening dresses, provided you put in a perfectly tight-fitting guimpe with long tight lace or net sleeves, and bring the skirt up at the back, put on a folded belt and bring in sash ends at the side, you have fulfilled all the leading requirements and do not look out of date. The kimono blouse is still worn with Directoire skirts. Indeed, they have had to modify the Directoire bodice in this direction, and there are not many prettier things than a well-cut and trimmed kimono blouse with a high-waisted skirt. Stole ends falling back and front help one out of the difficulty. I have seen them on the freshest and most exclusive autumn models. The polonaise is steadily coming in and made in soft stuff, crepe de chine edged with a thick jet of fringe with shot put inside the hems to keep the downward folds, you can modify a last year's skirt wonderfully well. It is always easier to modify out of plentitude of material than the other way round. And last year's skirts and sleeves were large.

The Theatre.

The theatres are doing at this moment record business; in fact, there are not theatres enough to go round just now. All the new pieces seem to be doing well. Meanwhile it is rather nice to think that the two women managers, Miss Lena Ashwell and Miss Evelyn Millard, have been so far perfectly successful in their choice of plays and in the attendances at their theatres. It had to come to this, actresses were more or less only acting as "feeders" to actor managers. Plays had to be written to fit men, and the clever women we had were wasting time from their point of view. Nous avons change tout cela. Another significant thing in connection with the stage is the downfall of the morbid school of drama. The Bernard Shaw epoch is over. He plays only in the provinces now, and here and there on the Continent, where socialism has a more eager following.

E. E. Hill, Bridgetown, W.A., writes:—"From personal experience I can testify to the efficacy of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Last winter I was troubled with a very bad cough, and tried Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which quickly cured me. Now I keep a bottle on hand, and take a dose at the first symptom of a cold, and have never since had a cold or cough."—Advt.

STRAITS SETTLEMENTS.

PENANG AND SINGAPORE.

GERMAN TRADE INCREASING.

(BY HAROLD M. MACKENZIE.)

I.

It is marvellous the number of Germans one meets in the Straits Settlements, and more especially at Penang and Singapore—in fact, you meet Germans everywhere in the Far East. The commercial strides made by this nation are causing Britons uneasiness in Singapore and throughout Malaya. Whole fleets of small coasting steamers have been bought up from British shipowners by the Germans who trade throughout the peninsula, and also to Siam and Borneo. It is said that the Dutch Indies, which now lie like logs in the highway of commerce, and have done so for the past 300 years, are the prizes which Germany at no distant date hopes to possess. More improbable things than this have happened in the world's history, the Dutch being a slowgoing race, with one of the wealthiest regions of the globe as yet only in the initial stage of development. "Made in Germany" is an old cry; yet, all the same, a cry that is increasing in commercial strength in the Far East. Our steamer from Colombo to Singapore was German, and almost all the passengers seemed to speak English, while but very few of the English passengers on board could speak German. This aptitude on the part of the Germans may in a measure account for the progress that the nation has made in a commercial sense, for many of the clerks in German houses, at Hankow, for example, and other ports in China, speak Chinese. The number of Englishmen in China who speak Chinese are few and far between.

FIRST IMPRESSIONS OF PENANG.

On clambering up the Penang jetty you simply have to fight your way through cordons of sweating coolies, yelling "'Shaw, 'shaw, 'shaw; take 'shaw." Amid this din and confusion I was bustled somehow into a rickshaw, and whirled away from the smelly wharf to a fine hotel. It is a true saying that nothing brings a place so vividly before your mind afterwards as its smell. Eastern towns seem to have their own special bouquet. Penang has a world-famed odour, similar to its durian fruit, which is quite as notorious as Limburger cheese.

There are no buildings of particular interest in Penang, but splendid rides and drives all about, well-watered streets, lined with cool-looking shade tree. Chinese swarm! Wherever I looked I saw a pigtail, and everything that could be conveniently carried on in the street was done, in that imperturbable way peculiar to a mixed Eastern crowd. Clothes hung out to dry on lines suspended across the street, barbers shaving and haircutting on the sidewalks, cooks serving out greasy messes, mothers suckling babes, hawkers ringing bells and yelling their wares for sale. All was din, dirt, and jabber, in many tongues. The Malay temperament is dreamy, while the Chinese is active and on the alert; consequently the latter rakes in the dollars; while the former goes to the wall. The Chinese, as a fact, have all the trade of the Straits Settlements in their hands simply because the Malay is too indifferent to protect his own interests.

Penang has steam trams which puff vile smoke in your face so that the best and least nerve-racking conveyance is the rickshaw, which glides along beautifully on the red, level roads, the pullers not seeming to exert themselves much, though every pore is in an active state of perspiration. About six in the evening is the time to see Penang at its best, when the ladies in dog-carts, motor-cars, and some on bicycles make their appearance. Unlike the Dutch ladies in Batavia, or the American in Manila, the British ladies wear hats at sundown, generally solar topees, and a more unbecoming piece of headgear cannot be imagined. While on the subject of clothes, it is just as well to know that a man may wear a white duck coat buttoned up to the throat with a jersey underneath, which is not enough to debar you from Penang society, but such a garment in Calcutta is an unpardonable offence, and so it is among the elite of Hongkong. In Calcutta, for example, when paying an afternoon call you go in a frock coat and silk hat, putting the latter under the seat, then when the supreme moment comes you exchange your helmet for the "topper," and enter the house cum dignitate. Calcutta is nothing if not the glass of fashion.

To return to Penang. This British possession is on an island, a fact which some Britons are not aware of; also, that the name Penang means betel-nut. Moreover, Penang is the capital of Prince of Wales Island, just as Victoria is the capital of Hongkong Island, there being no city of Hongkong. I don't know whether these facts are worth mentioning, but still, there they are.

PRESENT-DAY PENANG.

The Malay States at the present are going through hard times, almost every article of export having gone down in price. At one time tin was the rage, the export of this commodity amounting to three-fourths of the world's output. Tin at the present time is a dead letter, Gambior, pepper, and spices of all kinds have also received a severe setback, and recovery seems doubtful. Pineapples, however, do well, the canning of this delicious fruit being one of the chief industries.

Another severe blow that seems about to be dealt the Straits Settlements is the abolition of the opium traffic, from which trade the greater part of the revenue is derived. It is questionable, however, whether the opium-farmers, who are licensed by Government to sell it, will calmly sit down and let this lucrative business slip through their fingers, as the Chinese will have opium by hook or by crook, and if the drug is not honestly admitted through the front door, it will be smuggled in through the back, thus making confusion worse confounded.

Penang, or, rather, Prince of Wales Island, is one of the five Federated Malay States, the remaining four being Malacca, Singapore, Dindings, and Province Wellesley. It is perfectly safe for travellers to go anywhere, and the roads in many parts are just the thing for motoring, there being touring clubs both at Penang and Singapore. Sportsmen will find in the Malay States abundance of game of all kinds, and if they penetrate into the more remote regions they will find tigers, jaguars, leopards, and, perhaps, the worst enemy of all—malarial fever. There is hardly a portion of the Malay Peninsula at the present day that boasts of hostile tribes, though not many years ago it was unsafe for a white man to explore some parts, just as it is in Borneo to-day.

Two thousand seven hundred feet is something of a climb in heat such as Penang boasts, still you have not done Penang unless you scale the crag. The crag is Penang's salvation, so to speak, as invalids after a week or so on the summit of this delightful peak find themselves fit and strong again. The climb is not so laborious, either, as a very good road has been made winding round the hillside with seats placed at intervals where you can rest your weary bones before renewing the exertion. On the summit, delightfully screened by cocoanut and other tropical trees, is the Crag Hotel, where you throw yourself into a long chair, and cool off before tiffin.

BRITISH-CHINESE.

British-Chinese is a peculiar sounding title, but it is one that conveys a true meaning of the ever-increasing population of the Straits Settlements. They are British in all but their pigtails, and these appendages are held sacred. Some "barbarians," especially those who have returned from the United States, Australia, and Honolulu, have cut theirs off, but these people are held in contempt by their countrymen. The badge of subserviency to the Manchu dynasty is one that will die hard, irrespective of the great transformation that has recently come over conservative China.

The better class of Chinese in Malaya speak good English, and are employed in banks, mercantile houses, and other branches of commercial life; in fact, their integrity in responsible positions is undoubted, few cases of dishonesty occurring. Still, the Straits-born Chinaman is an intolerable creature, his mode of speech being to use very long words when short ones would answer the purpose. To give an example. I was cashing a draft one day at a bank, and asked the teller for sovereigns, not dollars, when having counted them he handed them with a smile, saying, "I presume that you will find the British currency correct." He is likewise a very vain creature, constantly trimming his nails, an inch long, when talking to you, and looking at himself occasionally in a pocket-mirror. With all his foibles, however, he is wonderfully smart, and has a patronising manner towards the real Chinaman who was born in a country that he has never seen.

There are, happily, to the credit of the Briton, rare cases of intermarriage with Malays or Chinese, the half-caste not obtruding itself, as you will find in the Philippines, for example, where Spanish blood is mixed with Filipino. This conservatism on the part of John Bull will do more to preserve respect and dignity than anything else, as nothing breeds familiarity so quickly as yellow or black blood mixed with white.

Both Chinese and Malays in the Straits Settlements have full liberty. There are splendid schools, religion is not in any way interfered with, property is protected, vice is suppressed, as far as possible, sanitary laws have been made; in a word, the British subject in Malaya has every advantage, but intermarriage is frowned upon, and the white man who takes unto himself a Malayan or Chinese wife, be she never so devoted, loses caste, and is quietly dropped in a social sense. The squaw man is tabu.

STRATEGIC VALUE OF THE STRAITS.

The Straits of Malacca, through which the steamer passes on her voyage from Penang to Singapore, are without exception the most perfect from a strategic view-point that can possibly be imagined. No ship with hostile intentions could get through them into the China Sea. The fortifications, mines, and quick-firing guns at Singapore would make her passage almost impossible.

The Dutch held all this part of the world a couple of hundred years ago, and were a power to be reckoned with, having driven out the Portuguese from Malacca, and practically undone all the work that the immortal Francis Xavier accomplished in the way of conversion. The second era for Malacca was worse than the first, the Dutch being at that time commercially lazy, and even at the present day not too "hustling." No doubt this don't "hurry, worry, scurry" temperament is all very fine, but it is hard for a nation with so many fine possessions to sit back and take it easy when nations like America and Germany are bustling about the Pacific looking for dollars.

When England turned her attention to the Malay Peninsula she arranged matters with the Dutch by exchanging a settlement she had in Sumatra for Malacca, and on the further condition that Holland was to have no hand whatever in the colonisation of the peninsula. So ended the last of Dutch rule in this country. Sumatra is all Dutch-owned and a magnificent possession, but in parts unmanageable. Acheen, for example, is very similar to holding a tiger by the tail, the Acheenese being warlike and rebellious, not unlike the Moros in the Philippines.

APPROACHING SINGAPORE.

Entering Singapore roads, the port having no harbour in the strict sense of the word, the steamer dodges in and out between numerous islets, beautiful little gems, emerald-green and bursting with tropical luxuriance; for Singapore is never without rain, its appearance being that of just having had a bath. In the early morning such a sight is refreshing, but when the merciless sun gets to business it is time for the two-legged animal to seek shade.

HOT ALL THE YEAR ROUND.

The geographical position of Singapore is but sixty miles, or one degree, north of the line, and heat is the order of things all the year round. Other hot places, like Calcutta, Rangoon, and Shanghai, are blessed with a winter, when top-coats and fires are acceptable, but Singapore knows neither. The difference between sunrise and sunset in summer and winter, so to speak, is not more than half an hour, the sun rising all of a sudden and going down with a bang, twilight being a thing unknown.

WONDERFUL PROGRESS OF SINGAPORE.

When Sir Stamford Raffles first set foot where the fine city of Singapore now stands it was nothing more than a paltry fishing village, with Malays gliding about in their proas. What a marvellous change has come over things! The population is over 200,000 of all classes, creeds, and colours, and this within the memory of old people now living—that is to say, four years after the battle of Waterloo (1819). Singapore was proclaimed a British possession by Sir Stamford, but it was not proclaimed a Crown colony until 1867. Its natural productiveness of soil is the cause of its prosperity, and now that the tin market is in such a depressed state Singapore has only her own agricultural wealth to keep her going.

RUBBER PROSPECTS.

The cry just at the present moment is "rubber," vast tracts of good land being taken up and cleared for this purpose. The amount of capital invested in Malaya for rubber purposes is immense, great confidence being placed in the future of this valuable article. There are sceptics, however, who are inclined to think that the rubber-tree will in course of time be supplanted by an artificial substitute, just as German aniline dyes have taken the place of indigo, when prices must come down with a "run." The cry of "wolf" is often heard in this respect, but during the last twenty-five years experiments have not achieved the desired end, so that prospects of naturally-cultivated rubber are still bright. Artificial rubber has been made, and looks all right, but it is not the true sympathetic rubber. Rubber is nothing if not opaque and non-porous, two qualities that the artificial substitute lacks. The man who can manufacture resilient synthetic rubber equal to the Hevea brasiliensis or Para rubber tree need never worry about his future.

THE ABUSE OF HOSPITALS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Re "P. B. P.s" remarks on this subject—he was lucky. So was I! Let me relate my experience. Nearly six years ago my wife fell ill. Local doctor, being doubtful of diagnosis, called in Macquarie-street specialist, at my expense (five guineas). Removal of patient to local doctor's private hospital for operation ordered (four guineas weekly, plus anaesthetic fee, chemist's bill, etc.). After three weeks of this local doctor, still doubtful of real complaint, more operation suggested; this time at (then) Prince Alfred Hospital, as my pockets were now empty. Armed with medical missive, visited this public hospital one hot Sunday morning, and asked for medical superintendent. Through a warder's error in stating this official was "round the wards," I waited nearly three hours in a lofty, lonesome corridor, feeling like a guilty pauper. At length found medical superintendent was away on holiday, and was told to call at night to see deputy official. I interviewed latter, and submitted to "P. B. P.s" inquisitorial inquiries. After stating my ability to pay a guinea weekly, I stipulated that the proposed operation should be conducted privately, my wife being sensitive about presence of medical students. My proposal was flatly rejected by deputy official, and negotiations snapped off suddenly. A written detailed complaint to hospital authorities evoked no reply, and I was in despairing mood. But this is where my luck—and the wife's—comes in! Nearly six years have elapsed. The abandoned operation has remained abandoned to this day, and—my wife has maintained excellent health all the time! Yes, many of the hospitals, private and public, are certainly abused, but they often deserve it. I am now in a lodge. That's all.

I am, etc., H. M.

DIGESTIVE ORGANS DISARRANGED.

SLEEPLESSNES.

Mr. James Bell, bootmaker, of 16 Parramatta-road, Petersham, is not one of the fortunate ones who escaped the invasion of influenza which was experienced in this country a few years ago. Speaking on the subject to our reporter, Mr. Bell said:—

"Influenza is a complaint that has singled me out for attention more than once. The heavy, burning pains in my head were something terrible, for they had the effect of making me so despondent that I could find no pleasure in life at all. My mouth was dry and parched, and there was a feverishness right through my body, which was most distressing. Not one of my limbs was free from aches that were positively painful, and when I stood upon my feet my legs felt as if they would collapse beneath me. Together with these discomforts was a feeling of restlessness."

"It would not take much exertion to tire you, and you'd be glad to get to bed at night?"

"Well, for all the sleep I got, I might just as well have been up and about, as although I felt so feeble and tired that I could have dropped anywhere, yet when I retired to rest I found so much difficulty in getting to sleep. And I had gone on in a very bad way for a considerable time, when I happened to be put on to a medicine that altered the whole aspect of my affairs. An old employer of mine explained how ill he had been from the same complaint as mine, and said that he had been quite fixed up by Clements Tonic, at the same time strongly urging me to get some."

"And you put his advice into effect?"

"I am pleased to say I did, and I consider it about the best step I ever took in my life. I don't think I said anything about the dizzy feelings I used to have, neither did I mention the unsettled state of my nerves, which had become quite unhinged, and my appetite had left me long ago. The lowness of spirits was something terrible, and I hadn't enough energy to try and shake it off. My digestive organs were altogether disarranged, too. Pains affected me about the shoulders and the loins, and in the chest there was an unusual heaviness, that testified to the undigested condition of my food. But I came to the turn in the road when I began to employ Clements Tonic, which is easily the best medicine I have ever had any experience with. Clements Tonic is the thing. It added strength to my enfeebled system with each dose; it invigorated my nerves in a way that astonished me; it brought sleep to my hitherto restless nights; it provided the appetite that enabled me to eat; and, finally, it restored my internal organs to that state of healthfulness which enabled me to digest whatever food I did take. Report these facts for others' good."

RHODES SCHOLARS.

AT OXFORD.

(BY P. HALSE ROGERS.)

In the annals of Greater Britain an outstanding name is that of Cecil John Rhodes. Too short a time has passed since he was laid to rest in the Matoppos for history to have pronounced a verdict upon his life-work, but for himself he has built a unique memorial, and being dead he yet liveth. Great men make their dreams materialise; and an ever-present body of more than 150 men, representatives of two empires and a great republic, is the material presentment of a great idea. That idea was the establishment of more friendly relations between the branches of the Teutonic race, and in the future a world at peace under the hegemony of the Teuton. The whole scheme was thought out piece by piece. It suggested itself in the first place as a means of drawing more closely together the bonds of empire; and from that beginning it extended, so that after a time it was to be a means of cementing Anglo-Saxon friendship, and finally of bringing to a good understanding the three great Teutonic peoples. So it comes about that to-day at Oxford men drawn from the four quarters of the world form a living memorial to Rhodes. He needs no tablet of brass nor column of stone to perpetuate his memory, for in his name there stand men, and ever more men, all in a sense his trustees, working for the realisation of his ideas.

At its inauguration the scheme attracted considerable attention, and many eyes have been turned towards Oxford in the last few years; and now that the scholars are actually established at the old University people are asking whether Rhodes' purpose is being successfully accomplished. That, however, is a question which cannot be answered now, or in this generation, for the term at Oxford is but the beginning, the period of education, and it is on what happens in the years that follow that the success or failure of the scheme turns. But even at this early date it is not unfair to ask two questions, viz.: What influence has Oxford on the Rhodes scholars? And what influence, if any, have they on Oxford?

On the first of these questions it is not easy to generalise, for so much depends on the individual temperament. To some Oxford is a delight from the moment they first catch sight of its spires. "Where'er they tread 'tis haunted holy ground." The city itself, the cottages with their strange medley of medieval and modern, the beauty of the quads and gardens, and the glory of the High—all these come to them with a charm and fascination that is instant and undying. There are others, however, of a more practical turn of mind to whom Oxford, at first, seems so steeped in medievalism as to repel rather than attract; its conservatism is something new, and the point of view from which life is regarded is not easily understood. To these, perhaps, the first term or two at Oxford were not pleasant, on account of the unaccustomed environment. But in the long run Oxford wins; and during three years I never met a Rhodes scholar of a year's standing who was not in love with the place and the life.

But one may yield to the fascination of the new surroundings without becoming Anglicised. It would mean that the Rhodes scheme had failed if the scholars lost the distinctive traits of their own nationality or country, and conformed exactly to the type which happened to predominate in their own immediate vicinity. New views in modification of old views, new ideas as correctives of old conceptions, are worth striving for; to abandon the old self is a confession of weakness. But the temptation to mere imitation does not come to many. Most of the scholars are men who have graduated in their own country, and go to Oxford more mature than the Englishmen whom they meet in their own freshman year. They have another academic experience to compare with that through which they now pass, and the result is that though Oxford may charm it does not hypnotise. There is much to see and learn, but the temptation to lay new foundations for life is not great; one is content to build on those which are laid already. So the Australian who spends three years in the old university city is not for that reason less an Australian at the end of his time; he should, indeed, be a better one, for there is no reason why he should have lost any of his feeling for his own country, and in the meantime Oxford has given him much.

To the question as to how far the Rhodes Scholars influence Oxford one is tempted to reply at once "Not at all." But perhaps that is a pessimistic view. Outwardly, of course, the influence cannot be traced. The men from abroad quickly conform to the manners and customs of those around them; they take their place quietly in the colleges, and are soon absorbed. An Oxford man of six or seven years' standing returning this term would find no change from his own day. He might pick out the Americans and colonials by differences of feature or of speech, but he would not find them a disturbing element; the social life is still the same. And in the politics and thought of Oxford there is no trace of a new influence. The Union debates, curiously enough, fail to prove attractive; the subjects of discussion and the very style of debating are alike uncongenial to colonials and Americans. But, though public influence is non-existent, it is not too much to suppose that the private friendships of the men in their colleges, and the part they take in college life, may influence an individual here and another there to a better understanding of things Anglo-Saxon and yet not English, just as three years' social intercourse makes the Englishman better understood by those who have been brought into contact with him.

The advent of the Rhodes scholars was viewed with a certain amount of fear and trembling, and as one don put it, there was something terrible in the thought of "Cornstalks stalking in 'The Corn'" (one of the principal streets). But this feeling of apprehension did not make the welcome any less hearty. On all sides the friendly feeling was most marked; the undergrads made the newcomers feel at home at once, and for the most part the dons were sympathetic. Many a college rule bears hard on men who have had experience of university life under less stringent discipline. But college rules must be observed by all alike; they are as the law of the Medes and Persians. The trouble with many, at first, was to know what the rules were, for the code is unwritten, and only transgression brought knowledge. But after a time even these came to be observed as a matter of course. The dons wisely made it plain at the beginning that no distinction as to rules was possible, even though the Rhodes men were senior; and when they saw that this was recognised they did all in their power to make the men at home and comfortable in Oxford.

In the work and play of the University the Rhodes scholars are doing their share. They have not yet had a representative in the boat-race, but in athletics, cricket, lacrosse, swimming, tennis, and boxing, they have appeared against Cambridge, and two years ago they supplied half the members of the "rugger" team. They are to be found in almost all the college teams, in the boats on the river, and in the various clubs within the colleges. In examinations—or "schools," as the Oxford term is—they have won many honours each year. It is unfair to take them as a body, and compare their results with those of any other body, for they are more mature, and supposedly picked men; but results show this much at least, that they have been able to adapt themselves readily to Oxford methods in "schools" as well as in sport.

A frequent question is whether the Rhodes scholars keep to themselves and form a kind of clique in Oxford. The answer is emphatically in the negative. If they did they would be acting contrary to their own interests, and in opposition to the spirit of the bequest. There is no Rhodes Scholars' Club in Oxford. The Americans certainly have a club with permanent rooms, and this may have prevented some of them from joining the Union—the centre of intercollegiate life—and perhaps tended to bring them too much together; but they are generally popular men in their colleges. The colonials have not a club with a settled abode. Most of the men are members of the Colonial Club, which meets four times a term for the discussion of Imperial and colonial topics. Practically the only occasion on which all the men come together as a body is the dinner which the trustees give once in each year. The avoidance of any spirit of clannishness does not in any way prevent the men from forming a very happy family. Naturally a scholar quickly makes friends with other scholars; there are so many interests in common. And the friendship of colonial with colonials and with Americans is quite an important element in the three years' education. They have much to learn from one another and many ideas in common; in fact, the community of ideas is a strong bond between the newcomers until they have learnt to know the men of their own college. The colonials are not as a rule brought much into touch with the German scholars, but from the tone of their speeches at the annual dinner it would seem that they, too, have fallen in love with Oxford, have come to understand English men and customs, and will go back to their own country determined to try to bring the two nations to friendship; and as they are picked by the Emperor with a view to the diplomatic service their efforts may be of importance in the future. For the rest, the distribution of the scholars among all the colleges, gives a man an opportunity of meeting men in every college, and so forming a large circle of friends; for through his friends among the scholars he gets to know other college men, and so the circle widens.

For the man who obtains a Rhodes Scholarship the lines have fallen in pleasant places. He is sure of a good time at Oxford and in the vacations—which amount to 28 weeks in the year—he has opportunities of seeing not only Great Britain but also some of the countries of Europe, and of seeing them not as a tourist, but as one who may dwell for some time in each. Of course, if he does this he cannot save money out of his scholarship; but he was not intended to save money, and he would be foolish in any case to neglect so good an investment as travel. In the long run the Oxford degree is the least important result of his three years' stay; the education of student by student, and the broadening effect of foreign travel, count most in making up the main account.

The time slips by all too rapidly, and Oxford days are soon over; and as has been remarked, it is not by Oxford experiences in work or play that the success or failure of the scheme must in the future be judged. In Cecil Rhodes' mind the scholarship was not to serve merely as the goal of an academic career, it was to what lay beyond that he looked. In his will he wrote: "I consider that the education of young colonists at one of the Universities of the United Kingdom is of great advantage to them—for instilling into their minds the advantage to the colonies as well as to the United Kingdom of the unity of the Empire." It was with the larger ideal in view that he included Americans and Germans. The machinery of the scheme is at work, the men are coming and going, and Oxford is doing her part. When our term is over and we come to look back the question arises, "Is there any likelihood of success." There cannot be a definite answer, for these things are on the knees of the gods. The omens seem favourable, for Oxford, apart from its climate, is an ideal place for the sowing of the seed, and the seed is well sown. But the fruit cannot appear for a generation or longer.

Meantime, year by year, half a hundred men leave Oxford for every quarter of the globe. Of all these, perhaps, the Americans are most fortunate, for Universities and colleges are numerous in their country, and many positions are open to them on their return. Almost without exception the students from America go home when their three years are at an end, and, in a majority of cases, they immediately fill academic positions. This is only the second year of the exodus from Oxford, and yet already they are to be found in the many Universities from New England to the Pacific slope. In order that distance shall not terminate entirely the friendships which they formed during their term they have established an association of American Rhodes scholars, with the object of keeping themselves cognisant of one another's doings and of keeping in touch with succeeding generations of scholars. Already they can boast of a bright little periodical called the "Alumni Magazine," and they have planned meetings at various centres at fixed intervals. For the most part they have taken a keen interest in the idea of the founder, and are working as far as is in their power to realise his aims.

Of the colonials, likewise, a majority return to their own countries on the termination of the three years, but the proportion is not as great. A certain number find more to attract them in England itself or in branches of the Imperial Service. Of the whole number the Australian contingent loses heaviest in proportion. Of those who have finished their course up to the present only about half seem likely to return, but that is perhaps a mere chance, and cannot be made a ground for speculation as to the future. It seems certain that Rhodes' idea was that in most cases the men should return, but that is not made even an implicit condition, and when brighter prospects appear in the old world it is natural that they should stay. Most of the men who remain would prefer to return, but they have their position in the world to make, and sentimental considerations cannot count so heavily as some others with young men who have yet to establish themselves. It would seem better to return, if possible, and it would be more in accordance with the founder's idea; but those who do not return are still completing the circle of friends which stretches round the world. Wherever a Rhodes scholar travels he is almost bound to meet men who have shared the same privileges and lived the same life that he has led. In Great Britain and on the Continent, in America and Canada, in Australia and South Africa, in India and the various small colonies they are to be found. They have gone forth to the ends of the earth, young men and unknown; some few of them may realise their ambitions, and some few, perhaps, may help to make a reality of the dream of Cecil Rhodes.

THE TROUT SEASON.

DELEGATE, Friday.

Trying for trout in the river a few miles below the town on the first day of the season Mr. Ralph Liddle landed five fish, of which some went over 2lb weight. Mr. Liddle says there were no more rising, although that part of the river has generally been considered good trout water. In other parts of the stream they have been rising in good numbers. Anglers in Craigie or Little Plain River some miles from here are reported to have been successful.

MOSS VALE, Friday.

The prospects here point in every way to a successful season. During the past three years yearling and fry have been consistently liberated in the Fitzroy Creek. Some good catches have been made, and in Weir's Creek (Belmore Falls) trout up to four pounds have been caught, as well as great numbers of smaller ones. This creek, which is about 14 miles distant by a good road, winds its way through some fine scenery so that the tourist is afforded a double pleasure. The Kangaroo Valley stream, which is within easy reach in a day's journey, and is generally recognised as one of the best perch streams in New South Wales, is reported to be in good order.

TENTERFIELD, Friday.

No reports are to hand of any trout caught this season, despite the fact that young trout have been liberated in the creek from time to time. Nothing further has been heard of them. They appear to have vanished. No attempts have been made at trout-fishing here, as the creek at times is very low owing to filling with sand.

CIRCULAR QUAY TRAFFIC.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Whilst on my usual Saturday afternoon trip to Manly this afternoon I could not help noticing the congested state the ferry traffic was in in the vicinity of Circular Quay, and the consequent danger that existed to the passengers. The boat I was travelling by (for obvious reasons I will not name it) narrowly averted a collision on two occasions. My object of writing to you is to place before you a scheme I have had on my mind for some time past that will no doubt meet with the approval of not only the general public, but also the members of my profession. What I suggest is:—

1. That the ferry services to the close-at-hand suburbs, such as Mosman, Neutral Bay, Milsons' Point, and Lavender Bay, be as far as possible eliminated.

2. That in their stead an underground tramway service be constructed beneath the harbour, the same as is done in London, New York, etc.

3. That the whole of the Circular Quay, extending from Dawes Point right round to Fort Macquarie, be converted into docks to accommodate and centralise the deep-sea shipping as much as possible.

The advantages of the foregoing scheme are as follows:—

1. Direct transit communication between the centre of the city and the suburbs mentioned in suggestion 1.

2. The casualties and injuries occasioned to passengers from time to time would be considerably diminished.

3. The obvious advantages and conveniences that would be felt by merchants and others in having the deep-sea shipping centralised in as small a space as possible.

Of course in expressing the above views I have just given a brief outline of my suggestion, but would be pleased to go into the matter in greater detail if necessary.

I have travelled all over the world, and have never met a locality that I consider requires greater improvements than the traffic between Sydney and its waterside suburbs. I am, etc., ENOCH GINN, M.E.

SEVERE HEMORRHOIDS.

With Sores and Eczema Accompanied by Terrible Itching—Well-known Remedies Failed and Doctor Thought an Operation Necessary—Then Cuticura Proved its Great Efficacy.

"I am now eighty years old, and three years ago I was taken with an attack of piles (hemorrhoids), bleeding and protruding. The doctor said the only help for me was to go to a hospital and be operated on. I tried several well-known remedies but did not get much help. During this time sores appeared which changed to a terrible itching eczema. Then I began to use Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills, injecting a quantity of Cuticura Ointment with a Cuticura Suppository Syringe. It took a month of this treatment to get me in a fairly healthy state, and then I treated myself once a day for three months, and, after that, once or twice a week. The treatments I tried took a lot of money, and it is fortunate that I used Cuticura. J. H. Henderson, Hopkinton, N. Y., U. S. A., Apr., 26, 1907."—Advt.

THE FIFESHIRE WRECK.

MASTER AND FIRST MATE.

CERTIFICATES SUSPENDED.

JUDGE'S SEVERE REMARKS.

In the Marine Court yesterday, before Judge Docker and Captains A. Hay and Boldchild, in connection with the wreck of the barque Fifeshire at the Gilbert Islands on August 21, Captain John Nichol, master of the vessel, and Stephen Rowe, first mate, were called on to show cause why their certificates should not be cancelled or suspended. In giving its decision on Tuesday the Court found that the wreck was due to the gross negligence and careless navigation of the master. It also concluded that Rowe from his drunken habits was unfit to have charge of the ship. Mr. Robison (Crown Law Office) appeared for Captain Henry Newton, Superintendent of Navigation; and Dr. Brissenden (instructed by Messrs. Marshall and Marks) for the captain.

Dr. Brissenden said most serious allegations had been made against the captain. It had been suggested throughout that a conspiracy existed to wreck the ship. The evidence of Evans had had its effect on the mind of the Court. The Court would be able to form its opinion as to the nautical capabilities of Evans. He did not tell the Court that when he went on the look-out he saw anything to show the rock on which the ship struck. It was quite possible for rocks to exist which gave no indication of their presence. Evans believed a conspiracy was in progress, yet he took no bearings which would have fixed beyond doubt the place where the ship went ashore. The evidence of the crew in the main supported the captain. On the course the captain took it did not follow that he was guilty of careless navigation. According to the evidence, including even Evans, the master for half an hour prior to the wreck ran clear away from the reef. At most the captain's action could be called an error of judgment. He asked the Court to believe the evidence of the master, supported by another British shipmaster.

Mr. Robison said it was not his intention to address the Court on its finding, but to draw attention to some inaccuracies that had just been uttered regarding the evidence. Evans's evidence had been corroborated by several of the others. It was only reasonable to expect that Captain Nichol would have taken as much care of the logbook as he took of the letter given him by the captain of the Brunner. Could the Court say it was merely an error of judgment when there were no soundings taken, no look-out kept, no checking of the carpenter's soundings, and no attempt to get the vessel off?

Judge Docker announced that the Court saw no reason to alter its decision that the loss of the ship was due to the reckless navigation of the master in taking the ship into a position he knew to be dangerous. The Court was entitled to look at all the surrounding circumstances both before and after. Afterwards the master showed reckless disregard of the pecuniary interest of those concerned. He showed gross negligence with regard to the loss of the log, seemingly having been more anxious to secure the whisky. He acted in a reprehensible way with regard to the disposal of the wreck. The evidence was not sufficient to allow the Court to conclude that the ship was wilfully cast away. At the same time there were many suspicious circumstances. The Court had decided that the master's certificate should be suspended for 12 months from August 21, 1908. The Court also found the allegations of intoxication against the mate proved at Newcastle, on the high seas, and on the island, and decreed that his certificate should be suspended for six months from the same date.

DAYLIGHT SAVING.

SHOULD AUSTRALIA FOLLOW?

WHAT IT WOULD MEAN.

On Saturday the sun would have set at 7.42—if New South Wales had a Daylight Saving Act. As it is, the sun set at 6.22.

To-day people will work till 5 or 6 p.m., and have sunlight for their cricket until 6.23. If the Daylight Saving Act were here the sun would not set until 6.43. As it got towards Christmas the sunlight remaining after their work was done would increase until they had from 2½ to 3½ hours of it. In a letter published below Dr. Arthur states that if the Commonwealth Government does not bring in a Daylight Saving Bill he will do so himself in the State Parliament.

A Daylight Saving Bill does not really command the sun to stand still. It merely moves back the hands of the clock. Last Saturday there was given in the "Herald" a full account of how it is to be done in England, where they will get sunlight till about 10 p.m. in summer if the bill, of which the Commons has approved the principle, goes through committee. In the article it was briefly pointed out what would be the effect of the bill if it were applied in Australia.

In England early in the morning of each of the first four Sundays in spring—at a time when practically no trains or business or anything else is moving—the clocks are to be put on 20 minutes. By the end of that time the man who thinks he is getting out of bed at 6 a.m. (because his clock says so) will really be getting up at 4.40, and using the morning daylight, which he at present sleeps through, and having for leisure the evening daylight, which he at present works through. He gets the benefit of all the sunlight through the summer; but as it gets towards winter, and the sun rises later, the hands of the clock are put back again to their present time.

In Australia the clock would have to be put on first in September. Each of the first four Sundays in September it would be advanced 20 minutes; each of the first four Sundays in April it would be put back. Practically no trains at all run here during the earliest hours of Sunday morning—far fewer than in England.

Supposing the clock had been advanced this September, sunset would have changed as follows:—

Sunset this spring would have been altered from the present system as follows:—

1908. Sunday, Sept.	Sunset on present system.	Sunset as altered.

On Christmas Day he would set at 8.27 instead of 7.7.

On Saturday, April 3, he would set at 7.10 instead of 5.50. Next day they would begin to alter back the hands of the clock to the present system as follows:—

1909. Sunday, April	Sunset on present system.	Sunset on altered system.
11	5.38	6.18

by which time the clock would be at normal time again for the winter months.

Sunrise is not so important. It would be altered as follows:—September 6, from 6.8 to 6.28; September 13, from 5.58 to 6.38; September 20, from 5.48 to 6.48; September 27, from 5.38 to 6.58. On Christmas Day the sun would rise at 6.2, instead of 4.42, as at present. And on Saturday, April 3, the day before the change, at 6.8 instead of 7.24. On April 4 (first change back) at 6.10 instead of 7.10; April 11, at 6.14 instead of 6.54; April 18, 6.20 instead of 6.40; April 25, back to the right time, 6.25.

LEGISLATION SUGGESTED.

Sir,—We have not the long twilight here in summer that they have in England, yet the sun rises between 5 and 6 a.m. or earlier for several months. If we could gain an hour and a half of daylight during summer what a boon this would be to persons who cease work at 5 or 6 in the afternoon. They would be released from their workshops, offices, etc., at 3.30 and 4.30 p.m., and would thus have time for recreation and exercise before darkness came on. And it would be a great thing to get some of the work of the day over in the early morning before the temperature has mounted up.

I think the Commonwealth Government should consider this matter seriously, and if no one else will do it, I will introduce a bill into the State Parliament, so that the question can at least be discussed.

I am, etc., RICHARD ARTHUR.

Mr. Charles Millyard writes:—Let us take advantage of our sunlight, instead of lying in bed and missing in summer about three hours of glorious sunlight, which is also the coolest and best part of the day. If our clocks were put on 1½ hour everyone would gain 10½ hours' daylight a week. Our gas bills would be reduced by at least one-third. Compulsory military training will take up a big percentage of Saturday afternoons. The Daylight Saving Act would far more than make up for that. Cricket would greatly be benefited. What a chance, too, for surf bathing! People would have the chance of an hour in the surf of a week-night. Finally, let us have more "beauty sleep."

SUBURBAN ROBBERIES.

Further suburban robberies were reported to the police yesterday. The rooms of Miss E. Hodgson, and Miss D. Payten, at the Hotel Mansion, Bayswater-road, Darlinghurst, were entered on Tuesday. Jewellery, valued about £50, was stolen.

Mrs. A. Croker's house in Great Northern-road, Five Dock, was also entered on the same day, and money and jewellery valued £10 were stolen. Entrance was gained by forcing a window.

Two pages of the current issue of the "Sydney Mail" contain some excellent pictures of the Opening of the Trout Season, accompanied by a special article.—Advt.

THE REASON WHY.

When the kidneys and liver are inactive or diseased, certain waste poisons are retained in the system, and we suffer from

RHEUMATISM	GOUT
INDIGESTION	BILIOUSNESS
NEURALGIA	LUMBAGO
SICK HEADACHE	GENERAL DEBILITY
BACKACHE	SCIATICA
ANAEMIA	BLOOD DISORDERS
GRAVEL, STONE AND	BLADDER TROUBLES

The reason why Warner's Safe Cure cures all these disorders speedily and permanently is that they all arise from an indifferent action of the kidneys and liver. Warner's Safe Cure restores the kidneys and liver to health and activity, causing the waste poisons to be eliminated from the system in a natural manner, when pain, due to the presence of such poisons, is necessarily at an end.

In addition to the regular 5s and 2s 9d bottles of Warner's Safe Cure, a concentrated form of the medicine is now issued at 2s 6d per bottle. Warner's Safe Cure (Concentrated) is not compounded with alcohol, and contains the same number of doses as the 5s bottle of Warner's Safe Cure.

ON THE LAND.

FARM AND STATION.

THE GENIUS OF HUSBANDRY.

Even allowing for an occasional drought, there is no reason why any man of ordinary intelligence and average industry should not make a success of agriculture. "Everything depends on the season," says someone. On the contrary, everything depends on the man. Aided by a succession of good seasons, the indifferent farmer may succeed; the capable, resourceful man will do so, even though he has to weather a drought once or twice in every decade. The difference is vital. In this country there is no probability of an unbroken succession of propitious seasons in the great inland areas devoted to agriculture. It is easy to urge people to "go on the land," but the man who accepts the advice without enthusiasm and a predisposition in favour of the life is not likely to do much good at agriculture. Some men are born tillers of the soil. The pungent, wholesome smell of moist, newly-turned earth; the aroma of freshly-cut hay; and the balmy scents of ripening native grasses are like incense to them. The true husbandman experiences keen, personal interest in everything about the place—and particularly in the germinating seeds, growing crops, and stock—his labour among the things he is producing engages his mind no less than his physical faculties; from dewy dawn to the serene hours which bring cessation from toil he is intent on the tasks in hand, and the time flies with that stealthy swiftness which is one of the marked features of all creative work. It is scarcely necessary to say that this is not the type of farmer whose fences are tumbling down; who spends one-half of his time criticising the Government or railing at the bad seasons, and the "hard luck" of the man on the land, with the chance passer or a neighbour of congenial spirit for an audience; and is always in a chronic state of "going to do something to that broken gate" or the long-standing leak in his primitive dwelling.

It is a fallacy to suppose that experience is absolutely essential to success in the great rural industries. Of course, it is always very valuable, but industry, adaptability, application, and, above all, enthusiasm and belief in one's work, will do wonders without experience. It is true that those fine institutions, the experimental farms, are doing great work —the full effect of which may not be appreciated in the present generation—but it is to a large extent because of the fact that they are attracting the sons of the well-to-do classes, raising the tone of agriculture in the popular estimation, and bringing about a manifestation of the brighter aspects of the primary industries than because of the necessity of the practical experience gained in the period of probation. Like the successful commercial traveller, or insurance agent, or poet, the true agriculturist is born, not made or developed, by a regular training system. One of the most hopeful and best auguries of our time is the growing tendency of people of good social position to send their sons into the primary industries. For many years there had been a prejudice against the life on the land among the majority of city people. The absurd idea was that the tiller of the soil was of no more social or industrial importance than the mere labourer; that there was no dignity, or pleasure, or profit, or a full measure of the things which in the aggregate are taken to mean success in life for the man who devoted himself to the pursuit of agriculture. In a more enlightened age, the utter folly of that view is becoming more and more apparent, and it is now quite a common thing to find city men sending their sons "on to the land" directly or through the educational avenue of the experiment farms. At last agriculture is coming to its own. With a better perspective the public is beginning to perceive that, either from the point of view of the State or the individual, there is no industry more essentially dignified, satisfying to the senses, or adapted for true success in the case of all having an instinct for the most natural life under modern conditions, than that which has primary production for its base.

One of the prime factors in preventing agriculture from becoming as popular as it should be has been the widely prevalent and tenacious idea that practical experience was indispensable to those who went on the land. The truth, however, is that some of the most successful agriculturists in this country have been men who started with no experience and without even the advantage of having ever lived in the rural centres, where the receptive mind may assimilate knowledge in a subconscious way without effort and without being actually engaged in or associated with the industry. A man who has made a fortune in bee-keeping was, in the first place, practically driven into the country because he wearied of the drudgery of serving daily behind a city shop counter. One of the best all-round agriculturists in this State spent most of his life in a bank before taking up his present calling; another was a city music-seller until fairly late in life. Probably the most successful orchardist, considering the whole of the circumstances, was a school-teacher. He is making £700 or £800 per year at Batlow from the culture of fruit on less than 40 acres of land. Yet he started without experience or capital. The writer has in mind another remarkably successful agriculturist who was a wheelwright, and who was impelled to try the life when the financial crisis lost him his billet. These few instances could be multiplied. Given the taste for the work, and industry and application, and there is no valid reason why any man should not succeed on the land. If he starts with some practical knowledge, so much the better, but it is not absolutely essential.

ITEMS.

Mr. M. F. Morton, M.L.A., recently requested the authorities to suspend the provisions of the Dog Act in districts where a hardship would be imposed by the enforcing of registration. The department, in reply, stated that the police are instructed that the provisions of the law should not be rigorously enforced in country districts where settlers have to keep a number of dogs for the protection of their property against vermin.

Red rust is reported from some centres in South Australia, but it is not considered that the wheat crop will be damaged to any extent.

During the past year 30 new suppliers were added to the Berry Central Butter Factory. The quality of the cream received was generally good, highest Sydney market rates having been realised for practically the whole output, only ten boxes being classed as second grade.

Experiments in viticulture are being conducted in New Zealand with resistant stock on the lines adopted at the Howlong Farm. Mr. Ellis, late of the Howlong Farm, is looking after the work.

Cape weed is thriving along the South Coast this season, and causing some concern among far-seeing dairy farmers. In the Kiama district the taint is readily discerned in the milk. The council employed men in each ward to eradicate the weed on the roadsides, but the futility of the work was apparent when only a short distance away the paddocks were gay with the prolific blooms. The Mayor has since instructed the inspector of nuisances to issue circulars to all landholders in the municipality to rid their holdings of Cape weed, thistles, etc., within 14 days.

At Mount Horeb station a 350-ton silo has been erected by Messrs. Davies and Kershaw. They intended building two additional silos the same size, but have been strongly advised by Mr. Vallder, of the Agricultural Department, to build smaller ones, and more of them, in preference. Extra large silos are a mistake.

Although maize is a much-neglected crop in Queensland, a farmer in the Wondai district has just taken 1734 bags off 110 acres, the amount paid being £1306. Thirty acres averaged over 30 bags to the acre, but the heat affected other portions of the crop. In two seasons the same farmer has taken 2300 bags off his farm of 160 acres, the area under crop last year being only 40 acres. The net value of the two crops was £1600.

Some few years ago the Danes tried a few Jerseys, says a writer in the "Live Stock Journal," which evidently stood the test to their satisfaction, for their numbers have steadily increased, and now the latest news informs us that the largest consignment (400 Jerseys) on record has just been shipped from the island to Denmark. The animals have been selected chiefly for their dairy qualities. Not show points, but big yields of butter, are sought by the Danes.

A good deal of Darling pea is in evidence just now in the Inverell district, and farmers and graziers find it necessary to keep a sharp eye on the stock. The weed, however, is not nearly so prevalent as it was a few years ago. The stock have eaten it out considerably, particularly the cattle, which tear it up by the roots. The disastrous effects, too, have been mitigated largely by the discovery of an excellent antidote in lucerne. Farmers have found that by frequently changing the sheep and big stock from pea country on to lucerne they suffer no ill-effects.

During a discussion in the Kiama Council on the subject of noxious weeds and the blackberry pest, the Mayor related an instance where a man some years ago obtained a Government selection in the Robertson district, cleared the land, and built a residence upon it. He was offered £35 an acre, but refused it. The blackberry shortly afterwards appeared, and was allowed full sway. To-day it had overrun the property, rendering it practically valueless, for recently it was submitted for sale by public auction, when the highest price offered was £3 10s per acre.

THE WOOL TRADE.

STRONG AMERICAN POSITION

Again there has been an excellent demand for the best descriptions of the staple; large offerings have been submitted, and excellent clearances have been effected, especially on the first two selling days of this week. On Wednesday the keen demand for lines suitable for America was as pronounced as at any time this season, but there was some irregularity for lower quality greasies and for scoureds. Six catalogues were presented, aggregating 26,962 bales, of which 23,982 bales were cleared at auction. The Continental section, with operators on American account for the best lines, have made the market, and with the Presidential election in the United States settled upon a satisfactory footing to the bulk of commercial houses in America, the good tone from across the Pacific in Sydney tends to brighten the outlook as the season advances. A recovery is taking place in America, which is reacting on the Continent, and now being reflected in the Australian wool markets. How well things are shaping in the United States is alluded to in the "Wool and Cotton Reporter" of October 1. That American journal remarks that "it has been a long time since there was such a healthy, well-balanced wool market as is found at the present time. Wool is shipping out in small lots compared with recent past years, but the small business, so-called, is just what gives the market its healthy tone. Not a few dealers have sold out their early purchases at a reasonable profit, and of late receipts at a higher cost are being held for the prevailing range of prices, and there is no reason why the present prices should not be low for the season, and on staple wools and the better classes of clothing wools a price advance is fully as probable as a decline. The west is pretty well cleaned up, and in the fleece-growing States there was never a time in the past six or eight years when the country was so well cleaned up. This condition, with the small stocks at the mills and the high price of foreign wools, when compared with similar grades of domestic, all point to a fairly good future." Summarising the position, it seems that stocks are so light of the home grown clip that outside purchasings on a liberal scale are imperative, and it is this factor that is so reassuring for Australian growers at the present time. The Yorkshire section in the Sydney market is playing a waiting game; it paid last season, but may not be so profitable during the currency of the present one. Reverting to the "Reporter," it says that "it is a recognised condition that our three hundred million pounds of domestic wool is about one hundred million pounds short of supplying the American mills, and the difference is made up with foreign wool. During the years 1905, 1906, 1907, it is probable that of the domestic clip, eighty million pounds of scoured wool were applied to worsted production, and about fifty-three million pounds of foreign wool, on a scoured basis, was necessary to supply the worsted spinners. This year, assuming that we have our average eighty million pounds of domestic scoured worsted wools—and the quantity is generally correct, as the present clip will run about the same as last year—we would have an accumulation if the regular quantity of foreign wool was brought in. But right here is where the domestic wool gains in strength, as instead of fifty-three million scoured pounds, we have only brought in what will make twenty-five million scoured pounds, so that instead of having one hundred and thirty-three million scoured pounds for worsted production, we have but one hundred and five million scoured pounds, a loss of about 22 per cent., so that production of worsteds can be reduced 22 per cent. before conditions can be compared with those of last year."

BARE OF STOCKS.

How greatly users need supplies in America is evident, for as the aforementioned journal remarks there is very little wool in the mills, and the light stocks in manufacturers' hands appear to be an insurance against lower prices, as nothing suitable can be bought abroad to compare with the domestic staple so far as price goes, and not a day passes but what the large consumers come closer to a realisation of this fact. When the 1907-8 season closed last summer the local market was bare of staple wool, and the carry-over supply, estimated all the way from fifteen to fifty million pounds, was of the clothing grades, and in a broad sense not the best selections, as the lofts had been pretty well picked over before the close of the season. The new clip of clothing wool will weigh up about the same as a year ago, and the new and old combined will prove a burden to carry unless the woollen goods branch of the industry takes on new life. From inquiry and actual trading in clothing wools during the past two weeks the woollen manufacturers are getting some substantial business, and the higher-grade clothing wools are selling to good advantage wherever they are of sufficient staple to be put on to the combs.

HOW THE SALES PROGRESSED.

During the course of the local sales this week 816 bales were passed in on Monday out of 8289 bales catalogued. On Tuesday 705 bales were withdrawn out of 9084 bales submitted; while on Wednesday, the closing sale day for the week, 1472 bales were withdrawn out of 9610 bales presented. On the opening sale day this week the offerings comprised all descriptions, and while occasional super lines were included there was a large proportion of faulty parcels. Heavy, wasty, and tender descriptions were considerably in evidence. The market was buoyant at previous improved rates; the Continental section appropriated the bulk of the offerings, and operators on American account were keen for all the light, free parcels catalogued. Yorkshire again marked time. The top price for greasy was /12½, secured for 25 bales 1st e of RJ/ Mundooran, from Yass. In scoured, the top price was /18½, paid for 13 bales A e of Bladensburg/MHM, from Winton, Q. On Tuesday the selection comprised a large proportion of well-grown, useful wools, with several super parcels and a considerable showing of dusty and burry lines. Again the demand was keen, and parcels suitable for American requirements commanded extreme rates. A further record price for greasy was made. Last week it was Berthong; this week it was Plumthorpe, from Barraba; 19 bales A h realised /12, and 22 bales A /12½, a stylish wool of fine quality, soft handling, fairly well grown, bright, and in good condition. Another line close up was SW/Mayvale, from Barraba, 22 bales 1st com w made /12½, and 14 1st com h /12½. In scoureds a parcel from Queensland realised to /19½. On Wednesday the selection was an attractive one, but the market lacked that extreme animation that marked the preceding sale days. Super wools suitable for America were strongly competed for, but there was some irregularity in the rulings for faulty parcels, while scoureds were a shade weaker. The closing sale day last week finished strong, while the concluding sale day this week was not so satisfactory. The highest price in the grease was /12½, realised for 4 bales 1st com h e of FFG, from Grenfell, while 17 bales super com of D rev. M conj./Kayuga, from Scone, made /12½.

INTERSTATE MARKETS.

On Monday last the third Adelaide series were held. The market was a firmer one than its predecessors, especially where the American competition was exerted. There were almost record offerings; 31,257 bales were catalogued, and about 29,000 bales were sold. The "Register" says that the offerings included a fine selection of fleece. In addition to the fine wools there were the typical shafty South Australian merinos, which, as expected, attracted American competition. Both America and Yorkshire were more strongly in evidence than at the two preceding series. In the Melbourne market the sales have proceeded on the opening lines; long-stapled, sound wools are scarce, and the proportion of short, wasty staple is far greater than for a good many years. The short-tender wool is selling but indifferently; and medium crossbred is at a low level. A large shortage is estimated in the quantity to be offered in Melbourne and Geelong this season. Large catalogues will be submitted in Brisbane to-day. Over 50 brands range from lots of 100 to 500 bales of greasy, while the selection of scoureds is an important one.

AUSTRALASIAN EXPORTS.

Dalgety and Co., Limited, have compiled the following figures showing the wool exports from July 1, 1908, to October 31 last, compared to the corresponding period last season:—

Decrease: 37,565 bales.

NEXT WEEK'S SYDNEY ROSTER.

There will be only three sale days next week, when about 26,000 bales will be offered. The public holiday on Monday next will be observed. As sales are to be held in Brisbane to-day, next week's arrangements by opening on Tuesday fit in with the best conditions for local selling interests. The roster for large lots next week is as follows:—

Tuesday, Nov. 10.—(1) Hill, Clark, and Co.; (2) Schute, Bell, and Co.; (3) John Bridge and Co., Ltd.
Wednesday, Nov. 11.—(1) Co-operative Wool and Produce Company, Ltd.; (2) Australian Mortgage, Land, and Finance Company, Ltd.; (3) Pitt, Son, and Badgery, Ltd.
Thursday, Nov. 12.—(1) Harrison, Jones, and Devlin, Ltd.; (2) Pastoral Finance Association, Ltd.

BRADFORD TOPS.

According to our cable message of yesterday's date the Bradford top market was unchanged so far as quotations were concerned. There was a better tone, but little actual business. The following table shows current quotations, etc. The principal variations in the prices for tops on the Bradford market after the slump in the early part of May last, when super 60's were quoted at /21 per lb, common 60's /20, 46's (medium xbd) /10, and 40's (coarse xbd) /8 per lb.

	Oct. 30, 1908.	Oct. 2, 1908.	Sept. 25, 1908.	Aug. 14, 1908.
Sixty-fours	/23	/23½	/23½	/24
Super 60's	/22½	/22½	/22½	/23
Common 60's	/21½	/21½	/21½	/22
Forty-sixes	/11½	/11½	/11½	/12
Forties	/10	/10½	/10½	/10½

With regard to tops on the Continent on September 30, Messrs. Wens and Co. say that the favour displayed for crossbreds at the beginning of the month was fully maintained during the past fortnight, and the turnover again consisted mostly of low grades at previous rates. During the last few days, however, more attention has been directed towards merinos, especially medium sorts, for which prices remained also unchanged. In noils, the fine qualities continued in good demand, whereas the ordinary ones were neglected. The supply in the combing mills was meagre, as usual at this time of the year.

SYDNEY WOOL RECEIPTS.

Wool continues to arrive very freely. There is still a shortage by rail compared to the corresponding period last year, but that is nearly counterbalanced by the increase in receipts by boat. The aggregate for the present season amounts to 438,517, as compared to 440,000 for the corresponding period last season. According to the daily wool manifests, the receipts by rail and boat are as follow:—

CHOU MOELLIER.

The "Victorian Journal of Agriculture" has drawn attention to the Chou Moellier, which is considered a valuable summer and winter fodder plant. It belong to the kale family, grows 4ft to 5ft high, yielding a heavy wealth of succulent foliage; the stalks are solid and fleshy, and have not the woody fibrous texture of the ordinary cabbage. The leaves can be stripped off about five times during the season, and the whole plant can be chaffed and fed to the animals with absolutely no waste. The plant has proved to be a rapid and vigorous grower, highly nutritious, and eagerly sought after by stock. It can be sown after the first autumn rains, to the end of October, and is both frost and drought resistant. Sown thinly in rows 2ft apart, those plants that show too thickly can be transplanted. Cultivation between the rows is necessary, also hilling up of the plants. In a test crop four tons of foliage to the acre were taken off at three months, and an equal quantity three months later.

THE "HALF-PAST SIXER."

Mr. Munro Hull writes to the "Brisbane Courier:"—"One evening in October, three years ago, a night singing bird took up its quarters in a camphor tree in my garden, and was so regular in his home coming that we christened him 'Half-past Sixer.' For some weeks this solitary bird called plaintively all through the night, and then left us. As he came again on October last year, I wrote the Field Naturalist Club on the subject, to see if I could ascertain the name of this stranger. It was peculiar that the bird should come back again within a day or two of a year to the same tree, and at the same time, but judge my surprise and pleasure when at 6.30 o'clock this evening (October 30) I heard the plaintive notes again. This time he is some weeks late, but this may be accounted for by the lateness of the season. It is interesting to speculate where this bird has been during the past year, and it is remarkable that he should come back to the same tree for three years in succession."

MILLTHORPE DISTRICT.

Millthorpe is a good agricultural district, with a rich chocolate soil on most of the country. The average rainfall is sufficient to guarantee fair if not good crops every year. The district is closely settled, and every acre put to use. Settlers are fortunate in being able to get two crops a year. The potato crop, which is sown any time during September and November, is taken out of the ground sufficiently early to allow a crop of wheat or oats to be sown. The potato crop is the main one, and the average yield is about two and a half tons to the acre. In good new ground the yield sometimes reaches 10 tons to the acre. The average grain yield is about 30 bushels to the acre, although as much as 120 bushels of oats have been grown to the acre during the past two or three seasons. From this time forward as the settlers get their holdings secured from rabbits, it is expected that the yield will be far greater. Last year one farmer who had his holding surrounded by a rabbit-proof fence reaped between three and four tons of hay to the acre, while his less fortunate neighbours had to be content with from a ton and a half to two tons. The farmers mostly go in for mixed farming and some have a few sheep, and nearly all go in for dairying. Last year the outward tonnage from Millthorpe was over 27,000 tons (nearly all agricultural products), and was in excess of any other railway station west of Lithgow. Millthorpe district is a splendid example of the benefits of closer settlement.

USING WINKERS.

"Ah Lak" writes on an old subject:—"Winkers are ugly, useless, and cruel; because of them there is hardly a horse in Sydney over 6 years old with good eyesight. They are dangerous, and have been the cause of fatal accidents."

MISTAKEN CATTLE TICK.

It was recently reported that the Queensland cattle tick had made its appearance in the Ballina district. Inquiry made by direction of the Minister for Agriculture showed that it was the ordinary bush tick, not the cattle tick, that had made its appearance.

CLOSER SETTLEMENT.

FORBES.—At the monthly meeting of the Forbes branch of the Farmers and Settlers' Association a resolution was passed for presentation to the Minister for Lands:—"That this branch of the F. and S. Association, apart from price consideration, wish to convey to the Government its disapproval of the acquirement of the Daroubalgie estate as a closer settlement area, on the ground that a large proportion of these lands are within the municipal area, and at present an annual tax of ½d per acre, being 4½d in the £ on an unimproved value of £3 per acre, with a probability of an increase to 6d in the £, or is 6d per acre. This in addition to the Crown payments would increase the annual payments of the incoming settler altogether above the productive value of these lands, situated as they are in a district of irregular returns."

WORKING MEN'S BLOCKS.

TAMWORTH.—The Department of Lands has decided to set apart about 500 acres of the resumed portion of the Peel River Estate for working men's blocks. The land to be selected is along the Gunnedah road close to the town, and is to be cut up into small areas and made available under the provisions of the Closer Settlement Act.

FARMERS' MEETINGS.

BATHURST.—At the ballot held on Thursday for the committee of the Agricultural Association 53 were nominated, and 45 elected. Several new names were added to the committee, and four old members were left off. Messrs. Makepeace and Glasson were elected auditors.

PASTURES BOARDS.

COOMA.—The board has resolved to insist on the payment of overdue instalments on wire-netting, which the Department of Lands will not allow to accumulate. Inspector Blomfield's monthly report showed that sheep are in good condition. Cattle are still poor, but improving. The water supply was sufficient for present requirements. The rabbit inspector's report was very encouraging, showing very few rabbits in many places, and that they were generally far less numerous than at any time the past eight months. Some Monaro country was difficult to deal with, as the poison-cart cannot be used. Trapping had proved successful in some parts, but the best results were with carts. Lamb-marking was now in progress, and good percentages had been obtained.

THE CROPS.

TENTERFIELD.—There was a thunderstorm, accompanied by heavy rain, on Friday afternoon, and the outlook for the potato and maize crops is brighter. Additional showers will be necessary to assure feed for the summer months. The present outlook is not too promising.

THE HARVEST.

MOLONG.—Another week has gone, and practically no rain has fallen. During the interval hot windy days have prevailed, and in consequence the crops have suffered to a considerable extent. In the Manildra and Cumnock districts nearly all the wheat crops have been ruined, and several farmers are cutting them for hay, while others are not even that forward. Stock were turned in on them. In the immediate neighbourhood of Molong the crops are holding their own very well, considering the adverse conditions prevailing, but if rain does not fall within the next week the wheat crop will absolutely fail. Mr. Harry Betts' (Copper Hill) crop, which a few weeks back gave promise of returning 40 bushels to the acre, is being cut for hay, while several other promising crops are being similarly treated. The outlook is extremely disquieting. Large areas are now being prepared for corn, sorghum, and cow peas.

PARKES.—Crops around Tichbourne, which looked promising a few weeks ago, are drying up rapidly, and will now have to be cut for hay or be abandoned to the stock. Stock generally are in fair condition.

THE SHEARING.

MOLONG.—The record shearing for Molong for many years past was accomplished by 12 contract shearers at Mr. S. P. Reynolds's Burrawong station, near Cumnock. In one day they put through over 1800 sheep, and shore about 20,000 in less than three weeks. All the sheds in the district have "cut out," with the exception of Nandillyan station.

DISTRICT ITEMS.

MOSS VALE.—A meeting of the local land board was held on Wednesday and Thursday, before Messrs. Finch (chairman) and John A. Badgery and David Morrice.

COULBURN.—A report from Parkesbourne, a considerable fruit-growing area, states that the crop promises to be plentiful, but the early cherries will be later in ripening than they were last year.

CABMAN FINED.

OVER-STATING A FARE.

William Greathead, a licensed cabman, was proceeded against at the Water Summons Court yesterday for not stating when asked by the hirer of his cab the correct fare, as required by the regulations, on October 20 last. Constable M'Gannon stated that he was at the Central Railway Station, and saw a Chinamen, named Mahomet, approach defendant, and heard him ask what was the fare to Duke-street, Woolloomooloo, to which defendant replied that as the box the Chinaman had weighed more than 56lb the fare would be 4s 6d. Witness told defendant that the fare for the man and his box was 2s 6d, but defendant said he would not take him for less than 3s. Defendant was fined £2, ordered to pay 6s costs, or in default 14 days' imprisonment.

GERMANY AND GREAT BRITAIN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I have been a subscriber to your paper for over 25 years, and this is the first time I have written to your paper. In this morning's issue I notice a letter from a German re England and Germany, and his assertion that during the Boer war Germany saved England from annihilation. Ye gods, you yourself do not seem to have noticed the point. I am, etc.,

Camden, Nov. 5. W. C. BRADSHAW.

O-CE-O-LO, the shampoo, will cleanse the scalp and hair better than any other compound made. Not only does it thoroughly cleanse, but it adds life and vigour to them.—Advt.

Photographs of Mooltan, Peru, Lord Nolan, Maranui, Tulkeroo, Iolaire, Brookong, some well-known racehorses, appear in the "Sydney Mail" this week.—Advt.

Odol is the first and only preparation for cleansing the mouth and teeth which exercises its antiseptic and refreshing powers NOT ONLY during the few moments of application, but continuously for SOME HOURS afterwards.

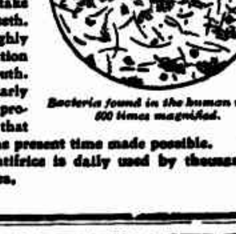

Odol, as has been scientifically proved, penetrates the interstices of the teeth and the mucous membrane of the mouth, to a certain extent impregnating them, and thus securing a safeguard and preservative for the teeth such as no other dentifrice can provide, not even approximately.

When one thinks of the fact that not millions, but milliards, of microbes and bacteria—of which this actual photograph of a minute drop of tooth moisture forms a specimen—are living in a neglected mouth it seems nothing less than disgusting to allow such destruction to continue in our mouths and teeth.

It is simply incredible that there still exist many educated people who refuse to realise that it is an absolute necessity, not only for the preservation of the teeth, but also for the general health, to take regular care of the mouth and teeth.

Odol arrests most thoroughly and effectively all fermentation and decomposition in the mouth. Everyone who uses Odol regularly every day insures the greatest protection for his teeth and mouth that scientific discovery has up to the present time made possible.

Bacteria found in the human mouth, 500 times magnified.

This liquid antiseptic dentifrice is daily used by thousands of doctors and dentists themselves.

SOCIAL.

Summer has made itself perceptibly felt by everyone during the past week, and has been found more trying than usual coming after such delightful spring weather. Tuesday was most oppressive, and the heat did much damage to the flowers which are now out in such profusion in all the gardens. Sydney people have been very quiet, many making preparations for their annual holiday visit to the mountains or other country resorts.

His Excellency the Governor and Miss Rawson, who have been the guests of their Excellencies the Governor-General and the Countess of Dudley in Melbourne during the past week, are expected to return to Sydney to-morrow.

At the meeting of the National Council of Women held recently, Miss Rawson and Miss Rose Scott said they had received letters from the Countess of Aberdeen, president of the International Council of Women, in which the Countess expressed her pleasure that four delegates from Australia had been present at the Geneva Conference. Lady Aberdeen also said that she had seen the Countess of Dudley before her departure for Australia, and was sure her Excellency would be interested in the work of the council.

The marriage of Ralph Mate Thompson, youngest son of the late Henry Thompson, of Camden, and Mrs. Henry Thompson, of Marama, Burwood, with Maud, second daughter of Sir Philip Sydney-Jones, of Halsbury, Strathfield, took place on Wednesday, October 28, at Trinity Church, Strathfield. The officiating clergymen were the Rev. George Littlemore, assisted by the Rev. Walter Matison, B.A. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a beautiful dress of ivory chiffon satin, made in Empire style, the bodice having a deep yoke of tucked net, outlined with Valenciennes lace, and sewn with pearls, which formed a deep V at the back, held in place with a large tassel of silk and pearls. Her wreath of orange blossoms was arranged beneath a Limerick lace veil, and she carried a shower bouquet of choice white flowers, which with a diamond and ruby marquise ring was a gift of the bridegroom. She also wore a diamond pendant and pearl and diamond earrings, her father's gifts. The three bridesmaids were Miss Rubie Sydney-Jones and the Misses Muriel and Edna Lloyd-Jones, nieces of the bride. The eldest bridesmaid wore ivory ninon over satin, made in Empire fashion, and trimmed with soutache braid and filet lace, the bodice having a vest of Irish crochet lace; her hat was of black satin, swathed with tulle, and she carried a shower bouquet of pink roses. The two younger bridesmaids wore fine white muslin frocks over satin, inlet with malines lace, and small lace caps with choux of pink ribbon on their heads; they carried posies of pink bebe roses, and wore pearl and turquoise brooches, the gifts of the bridegroom. Mr. Lionel Thompson was best man. After the ceremony a reception was held at Halsbury, where Miss Sydney-Jones assisted her father in receiving the guests. The wedding breakfast was served in a marquee erected on the lawn, and later in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Thompson left by motor car for the South Coast, the bride going away in a coat and skirt of blue Shantung, strapped with black satin, and a hat to match, with green wings. There were about 150 guests present, and many handsome and useful presents were received.

The new Methodist church at Strathfield was the scene of a wedding on Wednesday, October 28, when Miss Lucie Murphy, second daughter of Mr. Stephen Murphy, chamber magistrate, was married to Mr. Robert H. Nesbitt, second surviving son of Mr. T. H. Nesbitt, town clerk of Sydney. The church, which was beautifully decorated by the girl friends of the bride, was filled with guests and spectators, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. C. T. Newman. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a handsome white silk over chiffon glace, richly appliqued in floral design of filet net and soft silk braid. Her Brussels lace veil, arranged over a coronet of orange blossoms, was the gift of Mrs. T. H. Nesbitt, mother of the bridegroom. The bride carried a beautiful shower bouquet, and wore a diamond cluster ring, the gifts of the bridegroom. She was attended by three bridesmaids—Miss Elsie Murphy (her sister), Miss Cissie Nesbitt (sister of the bridegroom), and Miss Marie Bowden (the little niece of the bride). The two former were in white embroidered muslin over glace silk made in Empire style, with white chip hats trimmed with net and ostrich feathers. They carried bouquets of sweet peas and small white kid prayer-books, and wore cable bangles, the gifts of the bridegroom. Miss Marie Bowden wore a frock of white Swiss muslin, with Dutch bonnet to match, and carried a basket of sweet peas, her gift from the bridegroom being an enamel and pearl brooch. Mr. T. C. Nesbitt, elder brother of the bridegroom was best man, and Mr. H. de Courcy Dutton acted as groomsman. Before retiring to the vestry to sign the marriage register, the officiating minister, the Rev. C. T. Newman, on behalf of the trustees of the church, presented the bride with a handsomely bound Bible and hymn and tune book, this being the first marriage celebrated in the church, the presentation being made in accordance with an old-established Methodist custom. Whilst the bridal party were in the vestry a solo was given by Mr. Leslie Newman. After the ceremony, a reception was held at Wrangthorn, Redmyre-road, the residence of the bride's parents, where the bride and bridegroom received the congratulations of their numerous friends. Amongst the invited guests were the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress of Sydney (Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hughes), who were unable to be present owing to their absence in Melbourne), Alderman and Mrs. Allen Taylor and Mr. Foster Taylor (who telegraphed congratulations from Fremantle), Alderman and Mrs. S. E. Lees, Mr. E. K. Bowden, M.P., and Mrs. Bowden (sister of the bride), Mr. and Mrs. R. M. McC. Anderson, Miss Aincoats, the Misses Bowes, Mr., Mrs., and Miss Blackwell, Mrs. Bruce, Mr., Mrs., and the Misses Bowden, Mr. and Mrs. Barton, Mr. and Mrs. J. Neale Breden, Miss Beattie, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Brodrick, Miss Clinch, Mr. and Mrs. Collins, Mr. and Mrs. Davies, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Dawson, Mr. R. Dougan, Mr. and Mrs. J. Ewing, Mr. and Mrs. H. Elliott, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. England, Miss England, Mr. and Mrs. C. Brunsdon Fletcher, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Gordon, Mrs. and the Misses Hicks, Misses Harper, Mr. and Mrs. Julius, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. and Miss Josephson, Mr. R. E. James, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd, Mrs. Lucas, Mrs. and Miss Lane, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Layton, Miss Martin, Mr. and Mrs. A. Noble, Rev. C. S. and Mrs. Newman, Misses Newman (Strathfield), Misses Newman (Balmain), Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Noake, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Nesbitt, Miss F. C. Nesbitt, Mr. and Mrs. Offner, Mr. and Mrs. J. Parker, Miss Parker, Mr. and Mrs. S. Parker, Mr., Mrs., and Miss Richards, Mr., Mrs., and Miss Star, Mr., Mrs., and Miss Sack, Mr. and Mrs. Solomon, Mr. and Mrs. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Swyney, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Turner, Mr. J. P. Webster, Mrs. and Miss Withers, Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox, etc. Later in the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Nesbitt left for the South Coast, the bride wearing a cream striped Sicilian coat and skirt, with Tuscan hat trimmed with red roses. The presents were numerous and costly, and included many handsome cheques.

In the "Merry Widow," which is scoring such a success at Her Majesty's Theatre, Miss Ohls, who is now playing the part recently taken by Miss Carrie Moore, sings sweetly and sympathetically, and has already found much favour with the Sydney public. Her voice is not very strong, but it is clear and true, and she acts in a dainty and refined manner. Our Melbourne correspondent states that the cloaks seen at the races in the southern capital during the week form a prominent feature in the dress of the day, and it may here be mentioned that the beautiful evening cloaks of satin charmeuse worn by Miss Ohls and Miss Florence Young in the last act of the "Merry Widow" are well worthy of special notice. The former is of a delicate pale pink, almost cream-colour, lined with pale blue, and falls in ample folds round the wearer, and matches her dress and hat perfectly. Miss Florence Young's is of emerald green, with touches of gold galon on the yoke, and is exceedingly handsome, and matches the green cloche hat she wears.

The first ball held by the Delegate Golf Club was a pleasant and successful function and it is probable that the club will in future make the ball an annual event. Visitors from various parts of Monaro were present, amongst the ladies being Mrs. J. Olsare, Mrs. Jeffreys, Mrs. Hensleigh, Mrs. Underwood, Mrs. Dobbie, Mrs. Newton, Mrs. A. E. Newton, Mrs. Boys, Mrs. Earle, Mrs. Wright, Miss E. Dawson, Miss Cummins and Miss M. Cummins, Miss Hensleigh, Miss Wildash, Miss F. Wright, and Miss Walsh.

The Royal Alexandra Hospital for Children has met with great success in connection with its system of cot endowments. In response to an appeal from that institution the ladies in a number of suburbs, under the presidency of the Mayoress of the district, have raised the £30, the amount required for the annual endowment of a cot, such cot being at the disposal of the sick children of that district. A meeting was recently held at Camperdown, presided over by the Mayoress of that district, Mrs. D. Gilpin. A branch was formed, with the Mayoress as president, Mrs. R. B. Preston secretary, and Mrs. Sanbrook treasurer. Mr. Clarence R. Moss addressed the meeting on behalf of the hospital, and as a result £43 14s was raised in that suburb, representing over 550 contributions. The Ryde branch also held their meeting last month, when a further sum of £30 was handed to the hospital for the endowment of the Ryde cot for a second year. Other meetings are being convened, and it is expected before long that each suburb will be supporting its own cot.

CANCELLED PARADES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—May I crave a small space to bring under the general public's notice the injustice that is about to be done to the Australian Army Service Corps? The men of this corps were ordered into camp for 16 days' continuous training with their brigades. Under the impression, of course, that camp pay would be paid for that time; but through someone's economic schemes they were only paid for 11 days, and promised the rest in a fortnight or so after breaking camp. Now, to meet this the officer commanding has to cancel all parades for remainder of the year; the review, of main parade of the year, is to go by, and the Nos. 1 and 2 Companies, A.A.S. Corps, are not to take part, through the blundering of some official, and wait to the end of the year before receiving what is due and honestly earned. It is no wonder that the members of the military forces are not of the class the public would like to see, when this treatment is meted out to them, as men worthy of the name would not stand it. It will be about five months' interval before officers and men will see one another, almost requiring recruit drill again. I am, etc.,

THINGS WE LIKE BEST.

WHY IS IT THEY SO SELDOM AGREE WITH US?

What's the reason the things we like best so seldom seem to agree with us? Maybe it's because we overeat of them. Then follows a fit of INDIGESTION. Only lasts a day or two perhaps. But it's a most uncomfortable day or two. If we disregard consequences and indulge our appetites the certainty that we must suffer spoils the pleasure. We don't mean to abuse our stomachs, but we all do it more or less. We see things we want, and can't resist the longing for them. When it's too late we regret our rashness. But there's a way to escape the consequences of such indiscretions. A dose of a good digestant like DR. SHELDON'S DIGESTIVE TABULES, which digest what you eat, will relieve your trouble at once. That is a sensible remedy.

These TABULES are sold everywhere at 2s 6d for a tin containing 80 TABULES. Buy a tin, eat a good square meal and then take the TABULES according to directions, and note the result. You will forget all about it if you are not careful, for there will be NO PAIN or disturbance, and the food will be DIGESTED just as it used to be when your STOMACH was WELL and STRONG. Furthermore, your stomach will soon be restored again, if you keep on taking them, just as thousands upon thousands of other stomachs have been by the sole and exclusive use of DR. SHELDON'S DIGESTIVE TABULES. Sold EVERYWHERE.—Advt.

SCOTT'S EMULSION.

"My son, Lauran, 12 years, seemed to be just wasting away, and everything I tried seemed useless. However, after the first bottle of SCOTT'S Emulsion his he slept much better, and began to take an interest in his lessons; all the listlessness vanished, and he looked and felt a different boy. I continued SCOTT'S, and he is now quite strong and well.

"THOMAS H. COLLINS."

30 Hereford-street, Glebe Point, Sydney, N.S.W., 2/5/'07.

ABOVE IS THE PROOF IN THE FACTS!
HERE IS PROOF IN THE REASON WHY:

SCOTT'S alone was able to save this lad because SCOTT'S differs from all competitive Emulsions in being always made of high-grade Lofoten cod liver oil by the original perfected SCOTT process, which secures pleasant taste and complete digestibility. The result is an intense nutritive energy, unattainable by any other means. SCOTT'S Emulsion has dragged thousands from death's door. Therefore, when purchasing, if you desire the SCOTT'S Emulsion result, don't ask for "Emulsion;" ask for and get

BRITISH SUPREMACY.

A SHIPBUILDER'S VIEW.

INDUSTRIAL CRISIS PASSING.

BAD EFFECT OF LABOUR TROUBLES.

"I have never known a depression so severe in the history of British shipbuilding as that we are just passing through. I have never seen so many empty berths—such stagnation as that of the past 12 months."

This was a statement made by Mr. F. J. Stephen, of the well-known firm of A. Stephen and Sons, Limited, of Glasgow, who is now visiting Australia. He arrived here a few days ago by the new Canadian-Australian mail steamer Makura, built by his firm to the order of the Union S.S. Company. A large number of favourite passenger steamers as well as a fleet of cargo boats employed in the Australian trade have come from the yards of A. Stephen and Sons. Prominent in the list of Australian-owned vessels built by this firm are the A.U.S.N. steamers Wyandra and Wyreema and the Howard Smith liner Cooma. The Aberdeen steamers Marathon and Miltiades, employed between Sydney, Capetown, and London, were also constructed by this firm, and the British-India liners Uganda, Umta, and Wardha, frequent visitors to this port, were built at the same yards. Among the older vessels built for Sydney were the North Coast Company's City of Grafton and Burns, Philp, and Co.'s Titus.

"But do not exaggerate the meaning of what I say," Mr. Stephen continued. "It has not been a real crisis. It has not been anything to threaten the shipbuilding supremacy of Great Britain, or to permanently affect the industry. Things have been very bad. Orders have been difficult to get, and freights, not merely in England but all over the world, have been very bad.

"England is not experiencing the depression more than any other country. The German yards have been just as hard up for work. Periodically bad times come. There is a cycle of bad times, one of the features of which is over-production.

"The capacity of the British yards to turn out ships nowadays is enormous. It was overdone a few years ago. Then the big financial crisis occurred in America, and it soon made its effect felt in an industry in which there was already over-production.

"But there is no justification for people getting into their heads the idea that other nations are beating us in shipbuilding. Bad as things are, we are still maintaining our relative position, and if we get a fair chance we can maintain it.

"In saying this I am not blind to the fact that some other countries are also pushing ahead. Germany is competing with us very keenly, and although as a general rule the Germans cannot beat us—that is, we can turn out more cheaply than they can—sometimes they do get under us in price.

EXTRAVAGANT DEMANDS OF WORKERS.

"There is one thing that is causing business men a good deal of anxious thought. It is the industrial troubles. Unquestionably strikes are one of the factors in producing the present depression. We have had a most troublesome period. The unions have made extravagant demands, and the consequence is the serious dislocation of industry. Whilst we have had this period of what may be called industrial war, Germany on the other hand has had a period of comparative peace.

"It is not surprising, therefore, that it is pushing on, and if we are to maintain our lead it will be necessary for those who in the past have been responsible for industrial troubles to change their policy. We must have peace. We must have continuity of operations. We cannot compete with people who are united industrially whilst we are at war with one another.

"Of course, I have no reason to suppose an indefinite prolongation of industrial trouble. I hope that everyone will realise that peace between capital and labour is a necessity. A policy of moderation should characterise the methods of labour people, so that we may have a fair chance. Given those conditions I am not afraid of the future.

RETURN OF PROSPERITY.

"I think that signs of renewed prosperity are already appearing. People are beginning to speak more hopefully. Some new vessels of cargo-carrying type were ordered just before I left England. The renewal of prosperity is usually indicated by orders for that class of vessel. I suppose that people began to realise that prices had got down to bed-rock, and it was time that they began to prepare for the good time coming. Bad as things have been, I regard the present outlook most hopefully."

AUSTRALIAN SHIPBUILDING IMPOSSIBLE.

Mr. Stephen was questioned as to the possibility of developing the shipbuilding industry in Australia. He shook his head and said:—

"I am afraid it would be very costly to build ships here—very much more costly than in Great Britain. At present we build ships in England, competing in the open market with the world. I don't know whether they could build a ship more cheaply in Japan than in England. There are no data to go on. We cannot say the actual cost of building a ship in Japan, but we in England get our orders from the markets of the world, and on that basis I say, we compete successfully with the world.

"How, then, do you expect that Australia—which has not the complete industrial organisation of England, which has not its army of skilled mechanics, which has not the hundred and one little industries necessary for the successful exploitation of such a big industry on a large scale—could possibly compete with the old-established yards of Great Britain? No, it could not be done—not at present, at all events.

"The British climate, too, is admirably adapted for the work of shipbuilders. I almost fancy that a man working under the mild conditions of Great Britain could do more work than would be possible under the sweltering climates of some other places, and everything counts in the question of price.

"No, I see no inducement at present for a British firm to establish big yards in Australia. Of course, I know nothing about the naval yards, and would not presume to speak for them. But I see no justification for a big shipping company to come here, although we do look to developments in the Pacific with the greatest interest, and interest increasing every year.

COMBINATION OF BUILDERS.

Asked what would be the effect of the combinations of builders of vessels and marine machinery, Mr. Stephen said:—

"There have been some rearrangements, I believe, in England. I don't know that the effect of combination will be to diminish the cost of production, but it will diminish competition.

"As competition in the past has been something fearful, the effect of an amalgamation or combination of interests would be a better division of orders, and in so far as that is the case it would be in the interests of all parties."

ARMIDALE DISTRICT SCHOOL.

EXHIBITION OF WORK.

ARMIDALE, Friday.

Armidale District Public schools having arranged a monster exhibition of work and physical culture display, opened the proceedings yesterday afternoon on the Armidale showground, when there was a large gathering of parents and pupils to witness the combined efforts of various schools throughout the district. THE MURRAY WATERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Now that the interstate agreement is ready to be submitted for ratification to our local Parliament, I desire that you may kindly insert the following few comments, with the object that they may serve as suggestions to hon. members, and assist them in deciding whether they should vote for or against such ratification.

The first amendment agreed upon at the last conference of Premiers is that South Australia is to get at her eastern boundary the quantity of 60,000 million cube feet, provided that in addition to it the total off-take of the two other States shall not be less than 365,000 million cube feet per annum.

The second alteration agreed upon is that after the river has been improved by navigation locks, it shall be capable of being navigated by vessels drawing 5ft of water, or, in other words, the river can't be much less than 6ft deep.

To compare how these conditions are compatible with actual facts, I allow myself to illustrate them with my gaugings of the year 1882-3, which was an average medium low year, as the gauge showed a fluctuation from 1ft 6in to 10ft above zero at Overland Corner; therefore, a fair criterion to base calculations on. In that year the river discharged close on 106,278 million cube feet, which is not quite one-third of the stipulated off-take; consequently, South Australia would have been entitled to one-third only of her allowance—that is, 20,000 million cube feet. Before investigating what South Australia could do with that quantity should a similar year repeat itself, it is necessary to examine the regime of the river when once locked.

The river has a length of 235 miles from Blanchetown to the boundary of the three States, and rises in that distance 30ft. By the locking process the river becomes a level lake, and to overcome that rise the river will have to be divided in, say, 10 sections, each about 23 miles long, which will be the distance apart between each lock. Such a disposition of locks recommends itself by reason of their economic construction, and the not too wasteful amount of water. Each basin of the length of 23 miles must have a depth of 6ft at its upper end for navigation purposes, and on account of above fall the depth at the lower end will amount to 9ft 2in, and each section will therefore have a mean depth of 7ft 7in. Or, what comes to the same thing, that will be the mean depth of the 235 miles, which for an average width of 600f: will require a quantity of 5643 million cube feet. The river below Blanchetown to the ocean is not so long, but it is wider, and should a barrage at the Murray mouth be provided, which more likely than not will have to be done, Lake Alexandrina will also have to be supplied; considering all these factors, it may reasonably be assumed that an annual consumption of 10,000 million cube feet will be required; and making another necessary allowance of 100 per cent. for evaporation and percolation then the allotted navigation allowance is reached. We, therefore, see that the allowance to South Australia of 60,000 million cube feet at her eastern boundary is not to be objected to; it will be ample for navigation purposes in most years, but for irrigation purposes she will have next to nothing in low years.

However, there is one thing in this clause that jars against one's reasoning power. That is, the double condition in giving the total quantity and the depth—60,000 million cube feet, or anything as low as a third, will always give South Australia 6ft of depth when the river is locked; but the case may happen that a series of droughty years may follow each other, and it may then be impossible to store in Lake Victoria and other compensation basins sufficient to maintain a depth of 6ft. The eastern States under those circumstances would be able to supply South Australia her rightful share in cube feet, however, not the depth; and yet South Australia would have a sound legal claim to the latter, and the two eastern States would be legally compelled to supply something which they have not got, and consequently have no power to give. The drafting of this clause is a sort of mathematical "reductio ad absurdum." Because a delivery of 60,000 million cube feet will make the river navigable it does not follow that there shall always be water enough for vessels drawing 5ft. which, as shown above, may at times be impossible to accomplish. And yet this agreement was consented to by the legal luminaries of the three States, and supported by the representative engineering talents. With all due respect to those legal and engineering authorities, I think it highly advisable in the interest of all three States that this 5ft clause should be expunged before ratification is granted.

Here I may as well be permitted to remark that the cutting down of the South Australian original demand by 15,000 million cube feet was not a very generous action initiated by Victoria, because in low years it will benefit nobody, while in flood years this small quantity could well be spared for the less fortunate sister of South Australia. The whole affair has more the appearance of a false alarm raised by Mr. Swinburne with the object of diverting the attention of New South Wales from the more weighty problem of division between her and Victoria.

The next and more important question to New South Wales is the division of water between her and Victoria after the stipulated quota has been sent down to South Australia. It would be occupying too much of your valuable space to demonstrate from actual facts adduced by the Victorian Government how much each of the two States contributes towards the flow of the Murray; consequently the off-takes should be in the same proportion as the discharges. I have proved this on very frequent occasions through the medium of the press; therefore it is unnecessary for me to repeat the demonstration of those figures, and I will confine myself exclusively to their results. The gauging observations for an average of 15 years show that to 1 part discharged by Victoria 2.10 parts are discharged by New South Wales. Out of those 15 years, viz., 1887 to 1901, only two years—that is 1889 and 1898—show a proportion a trifle under 1 to 1.5; in 1890, when both States had maximum discharges, the proportion was 1 to 2.16, and in 1891 it was 1 to 3.87, which last figure means to say that in that year for every cube foot discharged by Victoria into the Murray very nearly four cube feet were discharged by New South Wales.

From these facts the following conclusions can be drawn for the purpose of ratifying the agreement by the Parliament of this State:—The off-takes between Victoria and New South Wales shall be in the following proportion:—If Victoria receives 1 part, then New South Wales shall receive in years of low discharges 1.25 parts, in years of medium discharges 2.00 parts, and in flood years 3.00 parts. Such a division of waters is by no means niggardly; on the contrary, Victoria is allowed a liberal share, because the mother State treats her offspring quite generously.

I am, etc.,
S. POLLITZER.

Nov. 1.

ENGLAND'S SCHOOL SHIPS.

TWO SHORTLY DUE AT SYDNEY.

Of all the ships now making their way towards this port from the mother country it is fairly safe to say that none are more interesting than the two ocean-going school ships, Port Jackson and Mersey. For the third year in succession the Port Jackson, owned by Messrs. Devitt and Moore, has been despatched from London to Sydney, and on each voyage she has served as a training school for youngsters destined for the mercantile marine. The Mersey, the newly-instituted cadet ship, owned by the White Star line, is now on her maiden voyage in this interesting occupation. Doubtless when she comes to anchor she will be visited by a good number of those who are interested in the training of gentlemen midshipmen, whose future sphere of service shall be the navigating bridge of ocean liners.

The four-masted barque Port Jackson is now due to arrive. Her last Australian voyage terminated in June by her arrival in London, and considerable celerity was displayed in loading her up for her present voyage. Sailing from the Thames on August 1, she had a good run down the English Channel. It is interesting to recall the changes which have taken place in the training scheme carried out on this splendid old clipper. On her first voyage to Sydney as a training ship she carried exactly 100 young British lads, who were sent for the round trip by the Marine Society. Under the command of Captain G. P. Ward the experiment was undoubtedly successful, so far, that is to say, as the training was concerned, for all those lads obtained employment in other ships when the Port Jackson came back to England. But financially it proved a heavy expense to the originators of the scheme, who, on the ship's second voyage, did not see their way to send out more than 50 of these lads for the Australian voyage. As there was plenty of spare room in the ship's huge deck-house, the owners sent a number of premium midshipmen, who are trained to become officers under the scheme originated 18 years ago by Lord Brassey. On her present, or third, training voyage the Port Jackson carries cadets only, and of these she has on board 30. Thus, by degrees, she has passed from being a training ship for boys destined to become able seamen, for service before the mast, and is now purely an ocean-going school ship for midshipmen, who, if they continue in their profession, will become officers.

It is worthy of note that there has been very little change amongst the officers of the Port Jackson, and those who visited her during her last sojourn in Sydney will be pleased to welcome back a number of old friends. Captain Maitland, her genial commander, is still in charge of the ship, and Mr. Jackson sails with him as chief mate. The writer of the present article had a number of conversations with Mr. Jackson during the ship's stay in London, and no one could have been more interested in the training scheme carried out or in the general appearance of the vessel. Dr. Farmer, the surgeon, and Mr. Brakenbury, the instructor in navigation, are again on the ship's articles. Her second mate was in her last voyage, whilst all the petty officers—the stewards, carpenter, boatswain, and sailmaker—who were in her last voyage are again members of her company. Even amongst the seamen in the forecastle there are some eight or nine who sailed in her on her previous trip.

During the time that the Port Jackson lay in the Thames some important structural alterations were made in her deckhouse, so as to afford the most comfortable quarters possible for her cadets. It may be mentioned that one or two of these young fellows are 6ft high, and to accommodate them extra long bunks were installed. Not all these cadets have their homes in England. One is a native of this port, another hails from Truro (Ontario), whilst a third has his home at Kincolith, on the northern coast of British Columbia. This last-mentioned cadet is a first-voyager, who first heard of the Port Jackson and her system of ocean training through the medium of an illustrated advertisement in a London newspaper which had reached his home. Determining to enroll himself on the ship's articles as a midshipman, he crossed the American continent and the North Atlantic and came to London, where he duly apprenticed himself. In the cabin the Port Jackson carries three passengers, who are making the voyage for the sake of their health. When she left London she carried a company all told numbering 60, all of whom were British. The Port Jackson is expected to take her departure from this port homeward bound towards the end of the year, and is likely to arrive home in London in March or April next.

The Mersey, the other English cadet ship now on her way to this port, differs from the Port Jackson in that the cadets she carries are trained for service in steamers belonging to the White Star, Leyland, Dominion, and Atlantic Transport lines. She is a steel full-rigged ship of 1713 net tons, and was acquired by the White Star line some months ago specially for the purpose in which she is now employed. For over a dozen years the Mersey flew the well-known house flag of Messrs. James Nourse, Ltd., and during that time was engaged in conveying coolies from the East Indies to the West Indies. Vessels engaged in the coolie trade were always kept up in the best conditions, and the Mersey, although she has had a good many years' sea service, is practically as good as when she was launched. It may seem somewhat strange that at this period one of the leading steamship companies should purchase a sailing ship to serve as a training school for the young men who are to become their officers. The fact of the matter is, however, that it is generally recognised by shipmasters and shipowners that those lads who have served for three or four years on a square-rigged sailing ship are much more desirable as steamship officers than those who have only had experience on steamers. Hence the acquisition by the White Star line of the Mersey, which on her present voyage is carrying for training purposes over 40 cadets.

The command of the Mersey was looked upon as an important appointment, and those interested in shipping matters were not at all surprised when it became known that Captain F. W. Corner, Lieutenant R.N.R., had been chosen for the post. Few sailing ship captains are better known in Australian waters than Captain Corner, who, as officer and master of ships owned by Messrs. Devitt and Moore, has made many voyages to the Antipodes. Captain Corner served his time on the ship South Australian. Afterwards he served as officer on the John Rennie. His first command was the ship Rodney, well and favourably known in the Australian trade some years ago. Following this he was master of the Harbinger, one of the big sailing ships on which cadets were carried under Lord Brassey's scheme. From the Harbinger he was transferred to the Macquarie, that famous old ship whose picture is known all over the world. In the Macquarie Captain Corner made six successful voyages to Australia, always having a full complement of cadets. In 1903 he went into "steam," and not long afterwards was appointed master of the single-screw steamer Norfolk, owned by the Federal Steam Navigation Company. Probably one of the most trying experiences of his life happened whilst he had the Norfolk. In June, 1906, when this steamer was on a voyage from Capetown to Albany for orders, she lost her propeller in the Indian Ocean. Captain Corner then rigged her with an outfit of sails made from tarpaulins and awnings, and under great difficulties managed to sail her safely into Fremantle Harbour. The broken-down steamer covered a distance of 980 miles in 11 days under sail. This act was recognised by underwriters, Captain Corner being presented with a handsome cheque. The nautical head master is one of the White Star officers, Sub-lieutenant F. C. Cross, R.N.R., who has recently been engaged for over a year as an officer in H.M. Navy. The chief officer of the ship is Mr. F. F. Steele, whilst the surgeon is Dr. P. Carter, who served in the Royal Naval Medical Corps during the war in South Africa.

The Mersey sailed from Liverpool on August 20, so it is probable that she will arrive early in December. Although she carries cargo, she is primarily a cadet ship, and there is no need to "drive" her with a view to making a quick passage. As a matter of fact, it need occasion no surprise if she takes something over the usual time to make her voyage. The handling of ships' boats is one of the things in which her cadets will be fully instructed, and, as likely as not, the captain of the Mersey will every now and again back his mainyard and send a boat away, so that the midshipmen shall become thoroughly expert in handling boats at sea.

These two training ships will probably be lying in Sydney Harbour at the same time, and it may be supposed that the cadets will fraternise and entertain each other when the work of the day is done. The heartiest welcome will be accorded the officers, cadets, and crews of the Port Jackson and the Mersey, and doubtless when they tow away to sea again those on board will carry away a lively memory of the reception they received during their visit to Sydney.

THE CHURCHES.

Speaking of the work attempted and accomplished by the Sunday School Institute, at the annual meeting, Archdeacon Gunther said there was great cause for thankfulness. Teachers were shown what to teach, and how to teach. It was a most valuable institution, and those workers—ever at the post of duty—ought to be held in honour and respect. He told of evidences of direct and indirect results, but they all felt there was room for improvement, and that new methods needed to be studied. He appealed to those who were present not to be discouraged, much less to despond. The seed sown would assuredly bear fruit. He appealed to the educated classes to follow the example of churchmen in England. Public men there of the highest attainments thought it a privilege to give religious instruction to the young, and more than one Lord Chancellor had been a Sunday-school teacher. They needed much a minister of education and inspectors for their schools, and ought to promote associations for the young and gatherings of old scholars. He was glad to hear of movements to beautify the city, to sweeten and brighten human lives. Sunday-school teachers were working for the city of God, and they had in trust a gospel which permanently sweetened and brightened the children of men, and would produce in the best sense of the words a white Australia.

The annual parish fete in aid of St. Mary's Church of England, Waverley, was opened by Mrs. J. W. Macarthur Onslow on Friday, October 30, and concluded the following day. A variety of stalls was maintained, and the whole affair was very successful, about £127 being realised.

Mr. Robert G. Moon, late organist and choirmaster of All Saints' Anglican Church, Woollahra, who is now occupying a similar post at the Presbyterian Church, Petersham, was given a farewell presentation on Thursday at the rectory, by the male members of All Saints' choir.

In order to recognise the kindly offices of the officials of the Peakhurst Methodist Church in granting the free use of the church building for meetings, the Peakhurst Progress Association organised a concert programme which was brought off on Wednesday evening, before a crowded audience. The compliment extended by the progress association was acknowledged by Rev. J. A. Waddell.

Cardinal Moran administered the Sacrament of Confirmation on Wednesday afternoon at St. Augustine's Church, Balmain East.

On Sunday last an ordination was held at St. Patrick's Ecclesiastical College, Manly, by the Right Rev. Dr. Olier, S.M., Bishop of Tonga, who was deputed by Cardinal Moran to perform the ceremony. He was assisted by the president of the seminary (Very Rev. Father H. McDermott) and the Rev. Father J. Bowers. The following were promoted to orders:—Sub-deaconship, Rev. James Fitzpatrick (Sale); deaconship, Revs. James Murtagh (Rockhampton), Matthew Smith, M.S.H., Edward Drohan, M.S.H., James Gilbert, M.S.H., and Richard Graham, M.S.H., all of the Sacred Heart Missionary College, Kensington.

Four young priests for the archdiocese arrived in Sydney by the Ortona—the Rev. Fathers Bernard O'Farrell, Michael O'Connell, Daniel O'Sullivan, and John O'Reilly. They came from All Hallows' College, Dublin. The following changes and appointments have been made:—Rev. Father Edward Hanrahan has been transferred from Araluen to Cobargo; Rev. Father M. M'Namara goes from Cobargo to Araluen; Rev. Father William Barry, of St. Mary's Cathedral, has been appointed administrator of the parish of Newtown until a new parish priest has been appointed in the place of the late Dean Slattery; Rev. Father R. Murray has been removed from Bega to assist Father P. J. Walsh at Wollongong; Rev. Father Thomas Vaughan goes from Bulli to assist at Bega. The priests who arrived from Ireland a few days ago have been distributed thus:—Father O'Reilly, assistant to Father J. P. Dunne, at Bulli; Father O'Farrell, assistant at Balmain East; Father O'Connell, assistant at Erskineville; and Father O'Sullivan, assistant at Moruya. Rev. Father R. O'Regan, jun., has been transferred from Moruya to St. Mary's Cathedral.

Rev. J. G. Wheen has just returned from Melbourne, Adelaide, and Ballarat, where he has been doing Methodist deputation work, in company with Rev. S. Ray Rooney, of the Solomon Islands. The main object has been the raising of the fund to provide the new mission boats for Solomons and New Guinea work. In South Australia the State Governor presided over the inaugural meeting, and definite promises were made of £700, which the State Foreign Mission Committee hopes to bring up to £1000. In Victoria nearly £500 has been raised, and it is hoped that at least £750 will come from this quarter altogether. Pretty well £2500 is required.

Next Wednesday the Rev. M. L. Johnson, B.A. (chairman Congregational Union), will visit Milton on the occasion of the welcome to Mr. C. S. Olver, who has accepted a call to the Congregational Church, Milton. The Rev. J. M. Sands, B.A., of Unley, S.A., has accepted a call to the Congregational Church, Rockdale. The foundation-stone of the new Congregational Church at Cessnock will be laid on Wednesday, 25th inst. The Rev. J. Marshall Brown has been called to the Congregational Church at Katoomba.

Mrs. W. Deane, wife of the Rev. Wallace Deane, B.A., of Fiji, reached Sydney by the Atua, having been ordered rest and change. She will return to the Methodist mission station at Kandavu. Mrs. G. O. Cocks, wife of the Rev. G. O. Cocks, of Montague-street, Balmain, who has been suffering from a paralytic seizure, has been in a critical condition, but hopes are held out of her recovery.

Regarding the proposal of the Congregational School Union to invite Rev. W. Melville Harris, M.A. (of England) to visit Australia to advise as to the reorganisation of their schools, the secretary (Mr. N. M. Morley) states that Mr. Harris was appointed in 1906 by the Congregational Union of England and Wales to report on the state of the schools in the homeland. Mr. Harris early proved himself to possess the qualities necessary for the position, and the report of his investigations forms one of the most interesting and useful books yet published in connection with Sunday-school work. In the course of two years he visited many schools, large and small, backward and advanced, in all parts of the land, and it is the experience resulting from this inquiry that the union is endeavouring to avail itself of in Australia.

A meeting of adherents and friends of the Auburn Baptist Church Mission at Sefton Park was held on Thursday evening in Thomson's Hall, the Rev. A. J. Waldock presiding. The chairman reported that after prolonged delay he had received the title for the land upon which it was proposed to erect a church. Already they had about £40 towards the amount of £50, and upon obtaining the balance, say, £10, they would be able to get a sufficient sum from connexional funds to proceed with the erection of the church. Plans of the building were submitted to and approved by the meeting, and it was resolved to hold a church social on December 7 in aid of the building fund, towards which several contributions were handed in during the evening.

The annual floral services in connection with the Unitarian Church were held on Sunday. The building was profusely decorated, and was well attended both morning and night. Rev. George Walters conducted both services, speaking in the morning upon the topic "Thorn-crown and Flower-garland," and in the evening on "The Mystery of Love."

Mr. Fred. T. Saunders will commence work with the Church of Christ, Lismore, on December 6. He will be succeeded as evangelist in the Wagga district by W. B. Hayes, of Merewether. A tent mission is being conducted at Belmore. Thomas Hagger is the missioner. The Church of Christ at Marrickville is about to erect a more up-to-date brick chapel. Hurstville will have the labours of J. Ernest Allan, a student in the Bible College, Melbourne, for a short term, commencing November 29.

Thos. Hagger, Home Mission organising secretary of the Churches of Christ, will leave for a trip to the Richmond and Tweed Rivers in the interests of the work on November 18.

Preparations are being made for the Federal Conference of Churches of Christ in Australasia, and the centennial celebrations of the publication of "the declaration and address" by Thomas Campbell, which will take place in Sydney next April. Among the visitors from over the seas, it is more than probable that Charles Reign Saville, "the prince of modern evangelists," will be found.

The statistical particulars included in the English Y.M.C.A. Year Book show an increase in the membership of England, Ireland, and Wales from 85,709 to 92,048. Ten new buildings are shown, and the increase in values is from £728,756 to £774,998. In Scotland there is a slight increase both in centres and membership, the former now standing at 233, and the latter at 24,464; while the buildings number 33, and are of a total value of £162,315—an increase of £22,000. The gross membership of associations, auxiliaries, and associated unions in Great Britain is 144,960, compared with 138,338. The American Year Book shows an increase of 8854 in the United States membership. Sixty-seven new buildings have been added during the past 12 months, of a total value of £1,300,000.

Next week for Y.M.C.A. members will be a "week of prayer." Meetings for united prayer will be held in the building each evening from Tuesday, and there will be midday gatherings, while to-morrow afternoon the general secretary will deliver a special address on the "Lord's Prayer." A circular of subjects such as "The World's Alliance, work in Africa, America, and Australasia, has been issued, the idea being for members to follow the list.

Special meetings in connection with the world's Y.W.C.A. Week of Prayer have been arranged at the Sydney Y.W.C.A., as at all other Y.W.C.A. centres during this week. The first special gathering will be on Sunday, November 8, and will be addressed by Miss Heard, president of the National Y.W.C.A. of Australasia.

Recognising the need of men to take charge of new fields which are constantly being opened, the recent Melbourne Y.M.C.A. Conference passed a resolution in favour of establishing secretaries' training courses next year, in places to be decided by the national committee.

The eleventh summer conference and ninth business convention of the Australasian Student Christian Union will be held at Kiama from January 1 to 8 next, and will be attended from all the States and New Zealand. Last conference was at Mount Barker (S.A.), and was attended by 127 delegates, but the previous one at Healesville (Vic.) attracted 182. Missions and social problems are prominent in the list of subjects for discussion. From December 17 to 23 next a New Zealand conference will be held at Sheffield, Canterbury. Special reductions in travelling rates have been secured. The union, with its 2100 members, claims to have one-third of the University students of Australasia in its ranks, and to promote interstate feeling, as well as to stem materialism and train volunteers for various fields.

The committee of the New South Wales auxiliary to the British and Foreign Bible Society has just issued its annual appeal to all the Protestant ministers throughout the State, asking them to observe Sunday, December 6, as "Bible Sunday," and to preach special sermons on that date bearing on the world-wide work of the Bible Society. Last year the society issued 5,668,281 copies of the Holy Scriptures, the highest total recorded except in 1895, when the issues were only a few short of six millions. Of this total, 2,282,889 books were put into circulation by the 900 colporteurs employed by the society. The circulation in China reached the large total of 1,212,409, the highest on record. With the three new languages added last year the Scriptures have now been published by the society in 412 distinct languages and versions in use in every quarter of the globe, and versions in 12 other new languages are in course of preparation.

Mr. W. P. Shepherd, who last month tendered his resignation as organist and choirmaster of St. Stephen's Church of England, Newtown, upon an occupancy of four years, was, together with Mrs. Shepherd, tendered a social and presentations by the choir on Tuesday evening at the Robert Taylor Memorial Hall. The oldest member of the choir, Mr. G. Nicoll, presided, and made presentations to Mr. and Mrs. Shepherd.

THE NORTH-WEST MAIL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Referring to the letter in your issue of the 4th instant from Mr. J. M'Ilveen, I would point out that he appears to be under a complete misapprehension in regard to the questions which should be considered by the opponents of the early train, and also in regard to the position taken up by us. We do not contend, nor have we ever for a moment contended, that Inverell and the districts beyond Narrabri should not receive their fair share of consideration from the Commissioners in arranging the North-western timetable. Mr. M'Ilveen has been led into a misconception if he believes that there is an agitation proceeding to prevail on the Commissioners to revert purely and simply to the old timetable. The position we do take is one the reasonableness of which, I think, even Mr. M'Ilveen cannot fail to realise when he properly understands it, despite his warm, and doubtless quite proper, championship of his own district.

We quite admit that Inverell's claims to such a railway service as they desire may be very reasonable, and that they are so may now be taken for granted, since the Commissioners have acceded to the request from that district for an early train. We now come to the crux of the whole position. Inverell has obtained certain concessions, but those concessions have been granted at the expense of the district from Werris Creek to Narrabri, and this has been the cause of the agitation. We of the districts who have been aggrieved maintain that we comprise a community quite as important as, and equally entitled to consideration with, the people of the districts who have obtained concessions at our expense. Further, we say that, having regard to all the circumstances of the North-west, its wealth, capabilities, the financial results which have attended the construction of a railway system, and the length of line, which naturally creates the most important and diverse interests, we are entitled to have these diverse interests considered by the Railway Department in adjusting the timetable.

If the interests of the districts from Narrabri to Inverell are best served by a passenger train leaving Sydney at 3 p.m., and are sufficiently important to prevail on the Commissioners to grant this service, then we maintain that the district between Narrabri and Werris Creek is also of sufficient importance to be granted a service best suited to its requirements—that is a late mail train. The North-western district has now grown too large for its railway service to be conducted on the principle of "robbing Peter to pay Paul," and though Paul may say such a system appears satisfactory to him, Peter, who is robbed, and all disinterested spectators will be clear in their condemnation. We are not agitating for a recall of the concessions granted to Inverell, but are fighting to obtain the recognition of the vast interests of the district which is not properly served by the train leaving Sydney at 3 p.m., and, incidentally, we take the position that if the Commissioners erroneously decide that the North-western traffic is not sufficient to call for two trains per day, then the question for decision is, What hours of departure from Sydney for a single train per day will best suit the requirements, not of Gunnedah, Narrabri, or Inverell, but of the whole of the North-west, in its business transactions with the capital of our State and the outside world? We are satisfied that the answer to this question must be in accordance with the position taken up by the whole mercantile community, namely, that a single daily mail from a capital to a remote part of the State must leave at such an hour as enables it to carry and distribute the record of the day's happenings and business. Agitation may hurry or delay this answer, but will never alter it.

Though we admit that the present service by goods train is better than none at all, we do indeed object to it, and with good reason.

First, it is a worse service than we are entitled to—an injury.

Second, though the district is rapidly increasing in importance, it is a worse service than we have had for years past—an insult.

Third, on three different occasions already has the mail carried by this train for important centres gone astray owing to lack of mail and postal facilities on the train.

The service is not up to our requirements; it is not fair or reasonable; it is better than nothing.

Again, in the letter under review, Mr. M'Ilveen says: "Mr. Rowling cannot tolerate the thought of having to travel occasionally, perhaps, in a mixed train. He is perhaps unaware that beyond Moree travellers to and from Inverell are compelled to always travel thus. The centre of which he is the presumed mouthpiece enjoys a daily express train with all its accompanying comforts, and in addition a second train bringing all the late mails. One would think that being favoured in this manner he would have some consideration for the comfort of passengers on a line which materially helps to make the North-western railway such an important one."

Well, suppose passengers between Moree and Inverell do travel by mixed train as stated, what has that to do with the matter? Surely the statement is not adduced as an argument that because one has to travel somewhere by mixed train all should travel everywhere by the same sort of conveyance. And, further, I am unable to understand how the fact of our travelling by goods train between Werris Creek and Gunnedah is going to add to the comfort of the traveller in another goods between Moree and Inverell. Though I have reiterated time after time that it is not so, Mr. M'Ilveen does not seem to be able to rid himself of the suspicion that the importance of Inverell is being attacked. Nobody is saying or doing anything derogatory of Inverell. Admitting, for the sake of argument, that the terminus had a grievance, we say the department adopted an absolutely wrong principle in attempting to remedy it. They should either have accelerated the mail, or run an additional train without interfering with the mail at all; instead of which they just beggared one part of the line for the sake of another, and have now attempted to remedy the initial mistake with an arrangement that has not worked, and cannot work, satisfactorily for reasons already stated.

In conclusion, I may say that Mr. M'Ilveen's statement that my "residence in the North-west only extends over some 12 months" is, doubtless quite unintentionally, not even approximately correct.

I am, etc.,

If Your Lungs are Weak

"It Fortifies the System in a marked degree."

Dear Sir,—Some time since I became a victim of phthisis and rapidly lost weight. When, however, on the advice of my Doctor, I availed myself of Angier's Emulsion, my health began to mend and I quickly put on flesh. The Emulsion is suitable to the most delicate stomach; my digestion was never hindered nor my appetite lessened by its action. Its influence upon the pulmonary organs is most beneficial, while it certainly fortifies the system in a marked degree. Thanks to Angier's Emulsion I have found alleviation in my suffering, and I may say that no medicine I have hitherto taken has been so efficacious. Unlike other emulsions it does not offend the palate, its flavour is delicate and I was able to take it with relish. (Signed) J. S. SHERIDAN.

THE MOST PALATABLE OF ALL EMULSIONS.

The writer of the above unsolicited testimonial is a widely known journalist whose statements with regard to the efficacy of Angier's Emulsion will undoubtedly carry great weight with all consumptives. Patients with any form of lung trouble will find Angier's Emulsion the very best remedy because it not only heals and strengthens the lungs, but it keeps the digestive organs healthy and has a wonderfully invigorating influence upon the general health. It is pleasant to take and agrees perfectly with delicate stomachs.

"Decidedly the best Emulsion I have used."

Dear Sirs,—About five years ago I had a severe attack of pleurisy which left my lungs in a very bad state. I spent six months in a sanatorium but was not cured. After trying several different emulsions I started with Angier's and I am delighted to say I found it did me more good than any other. It is decidedly the best Emulsion I have used; it is both palatable and easily digested, and I can take it in the Summer months when I could not possibly take any other. The fact that I have used Angier's Emulsion off and on for the last four years and at the present time am taking it regularly speaks for its good qualities. I always strongly recommend it for I know it is a good thing. (Name and Address furnished privately.)

Happy is the Home

where the children are well—where joyous hearts and smiling faces greet us every day. But in how many homes is there not at some time or other a mother who watches and worries with anxiety over a fretful child, fearful lest the threatening shadow of ill-health should descend? Probably the cause of the dull unnatural spirits which possess the child and which the mother in her great love for her little one magnifies into some serious illness, is nothing more or less than a constipated condition of the stomach and bowels. A mild, gentle corrective is all that is needed. Do not give the child anything which is drastic in action—which purges or gripes, do not give it anything that you are not sure of. California Syrup of Figs is a pleasant laxative remedy, wholesome, pure and truly beneficial in effect, and which is known for its absolute efficacy to throughout the world.

California Syrup of Figs is a natural remedy. It assists nature by gentle methods. It encourages regular habits, strengthens the weakened bowels, cleanses the blood of impurities and stimulates the liver and kidneys to an extent which enables its use to be gradually discontinued and the functions performed naturally without its aid.

Not the least of its excellent qualities is its pleasant taste, which is an important thing with children. They will take

NEW SOUTH WALES AT THE FRANCO-BRITISH EXHIBITION.

COOPER AND FOX'S SADDLERY EXHIBIT AGAINST THE WORLD.

Read the following Extract from the "Australasian Leather Trades Review," October issue:—References to the Franco-British Exhibition at Shepherd's Bush, London, published in the English Trade Press, comment favourably upon the exhibit by Messrs. Cooper and Fox, Manufacturing Saddlers, Redfern, Sydney, New South Wales. This included a stockman's outfit, consisting of Wagga saddle, double-rein bridle, breastplate, Carrington leggings, valise, pouch, leathers, irons, and girths. Our Walsall contemporary, "Saddlery and Harness," in alluding to the exhibit, remarks:—"The entire outfit is well finished, and looks capable of standing a good deal of hard wear and tear, to which it is subjected when in use. Amongst other exhibits of this firm are a set of full lined gig harness, with Yankee collar and saddle cloth, a set of best spring-cart harness, a black demi-Scotch cart collar, a brown Liverpool cart collar, a light harness collar of Australian pattern, and an English park or hunting saddle. These are neatly arranged in a showy case, and look very attractive."

We shall be glad to answer any further inquiries re our late successful contribution to the Exhibition.

COPPER MINING.

A VOLCANIC REGION.

SMALL BUT RICH LODES.

UNDER THE SNOW LINE.

(BY OUR MINING REPORTER.)

I.

There must have been pretty lively times awhile ago—say a million years—when the hoary head of Mount Kosciusko was pouring out his treacle-like lava ove rthe country for many miles, covering it to a depth of anything from a few to 200 feet, obliterating forests of timber and ferns, smothering up rivers, and altogether acting in a similar manner, but on a larger scale, to the great eruptions that destroyed the Pink Terraces in New Zealand, that smashed up Martinique, or blew the island of Krakatoa into the sea.

The region around Mount Kosciusko must be very ancient—geologists say it is the most ancient in the world. It certainly must have taken a long time for a river to be covered with clayey material, from which sprung a forest of timber and a growth of ferns sufficiently dense to form a seam of lignite 30ft thick, when it was flattened out and covered with the 200ft of lava ejected from Mount Kosciusko and his satellites in that region.

This, for instance, is what one sees has taken place at Kiandra. The Snowy, Yarrangobilly, and Tumut rivers doubtless flowed along entirely different courses in ancient times. Possibly the ancient river-bed which has yielded a large quantity of gold at Kiandra was once the bed of the beautiful Snowy River of to-day. Within the memory of man a landslide turned the course of a New Zealand river in a few hours. Had it not been witnessed, and the rock-face of the slide become discoloured by weathering, people would have wondered at the existence of the dry river-bed which yielded a large quantity of gold.

Then what an immense amount of time it must have taken to errode the huge valleys of the fearfully precipitous country between Kiandra, Lobb's Hole, the Talbingo Mountains, and Mount Kosciusko. Possibly some of these hills were elevated by volcanic energy, because strata originally laid down horizontally has been tilted to an acute angle, rendered all the more acute by the shrinking and sinking of the earth in other places. But doubtless much of the mountainous country was made by the extraordinary eroding effects of wind, rain, snow, ice, and glaciers in that tempestuous region. So great has been the erosion that it is just possible the copper lodes being worked in the valley of Lobb's Hole, about 3000ft below the level of the township of Kiandra, may have originally outcropped 3000ft above their present surface, or even higher. If so, then their downward persistency is remarkable.

But we come back again to the volcanic energy once exerted in this remarkable region, and are forced to the conclusion that the horse-power capable of being developed by harnessing the Niagara Falls to drive turbines or dynamos would be a trifle compared with the energy exerted by old Kosciusko when sending out his immense volumes of lava, and tossing the earth about like a Lisbon or San Francisco earthquake, or the submarine explosion that blew Krakatoa into the air.

The immense thermal action of this region of volcanoes has been responsible for the formation of many fissures that have, by the operation of nature's laboratory, been filled with various metallic solutions. These solutions have been deposited either as copper, silver, and silver-lead bodies, some of the latter being associated with arsenic, zinc, and bismuth. The country is so fearfully difficult of access in places, and the snow so heavy during a great portion of the year, that prospecting work is very difficult. A true estimate of its value as a metallic-bearing region will not be known for many years.

So far, the copper lodes discovered are small, but very rich, being mostly chalcopyrite (copper pyrites) so clean and solid as to contain, in some cases, 33 per cent. of copper, 33 per cent. of sulphur, and 33 per cent. of iron. Whilst it is quite true that the value of the rich ore in the Lobb's Hole and Lobb's Hole Central copper mines is discounted by the narrowness of the ore bodies, ranging as they do from a few inches up to 2ft in short splices, as against the 70ft lode in the Great Cobar, Limited, it must be remembered that whilst it takes 33 1-3 tons of the Great Cobar ore to make a ton of copper, it requires only 3 1-3 tons of the best Lobb's Hole ore to do the same.

Of course, as against this fact, is the knowledge that a ton of 3 per cent. ore can be broken much more cheaply from a 70ft lode than from a 9in vein, besides opening up other considerations as regards the greater expense entailed in keeping shafts, winzes, and levels ahead, in the case of a small lode, as compared with a 70ft ore body. It is on the principle that a chemist may starve, though he make a profit of 11d out of a shilling, whilst a broker may grow rich on ⅛ commissions. In this and the following article it is proposed to deal with the more advanced copper and gold mines of the Southern and South-western portions of the State, and to show the difficulties under which some of the copper propositions are being operated under the snow line.

THE KYLOE COPPER MINE.

RICH LODE OF FAIR SIZE.

Though this mine has only come into prominence during the last few months, its lode was discovered between 30 and 40 years ago by a Mr. Reynolds, on his land, some 2½ miles from the township of Adaminaby. The lode, which runs a few degrees north of west and south of east, was found outcropping on a hill by Mr. Reynolds, who sunk on it 70ft, and sent a parcel of ore to Sydney. The cost of carting it to Goulburn was so great that it did not pay, and work was abandoned until about six years ago, when the lode came into the hands of the Schaffer Brothers, of Adaminaby, and was ultimately leased under the Mining on Private Property Act. Two shares in the mine were sold to Messrs. Forsstrom and Patterson, the former being one of the party that had previously successfully developed the Lobb's Hole copper mine. The lode was followed down by the shaft to 110ft, and partly stoped to the north. Subsequently another shaft was sunk a little further south on a splendid body of carbonates. These carried down 30ft, and then changed to bornite and black ore worth 52 per cent. The average value of the six to eight ton ore parcels despatched each week was between 18 and 20 per cent., and paid the party very well. The lode was stoped for some distance north and south above the 110ft, or bottom level, when the mine was sold to the Kyloe Copper Company about Christmas of 1906.

The latter started work by sinking the shaft from the 110ft level. On reaching 200ft, a west crosscut reached the lode at 9ft, whilst at the level above it was cut at 5ft, showing that it is going down almost perpendicular. The shaft was then continued—it was down 280ft at the time of my visit—the object being to crosscut for the lode at 300ft.

Just after starting to sink from the 200ft level a new copper vein a few inches wide entered the shaft, and has not only gone down vertically to 280ft, but has widened out to 2ft, and averages from 6 per cent. to 18 per cent. copper. It is practically a parallel lode to the main ore body, and is probably about 12ft to 15ft apart from it. Only sinking operations will show whether they will continue parallel, or form a junction. If they do junction, and the main reef is correspondingly improved in width, it will be a most important development.

At the No. 1 level, the reef has been driven on 180ft north and 213ft south. In the latter she averages from 3ft to 4ft of good yellow ore, and at the time of my visit the lode was 18in wide. The north end was not looking so well as it formerly did, a break having come in; but the fact that the lode is showing in Mackay's shaft further north proves that the ore channel is continuing north. Indeed, the lode has been traced on the surface by costeens for 1320ft north of the shaft, which implies that she is not going to cut out altogether where the break occurs.

GOOD BLOCK OF ORE.

That there is a good block of ore already proved is shown by the fact that Ducker's winze from the 110ft to the 200ft level has gone through good ore all the way, whilst a rise and winze nearer the shaft have done the same. These winzes and rise have proved a block 90ft deep by 200ft long. The ore body has also been proved beyond Ducker's winze at the 110ft level; but the face at present was not so good as the ore some distance back from it.

That an equally good block of ore exists between the 200ft level and the 300ft level (the latter has yet to be driven) is shown by the fact that two 5ft winzes going down from the 200ft level carry a full body of ore, without either of the walls being disclosed. This shows that the reef at 230ft is considerably wider than at the 110ft level. In one of these winzes the 5ft of ore shows stone worth 26 per cent. of copper, whilst the other carries 2ft 6in of ore, worth 22 per cent., the balance of the 5ft being good milling dirt.

It has been shown that in the 110ft level south the lode has averaged between 3ft and 4ft for a distance of 218ft. She maintains that average in the next level below (No. 2), which is in 67ft further south than the No. 1 level. In driving this south level 280ft a regular and payable ore body 3ft to 4ft wide was disclosed, with 2ft 6in of ore in the face, varying in value from 2 to 3 per cent. for the milling material, and to 18 per cent. for the copper pyrites. Going the other way (north), 92ft were driven. The first 70ft were in payable ore, but the last 22ft pinched considerably, as was the case in the level 90ft above. Such variations in widths is characteristic of most fissure copper lodes.

SURFACE OPERATIONS.

Before Mr. A. J. Dunstan, the present manager, took charge a little while ago it was officially announced that within a month the mine would be producing 10 tons of copper per week. The last report to hand yesterday shows that this estimate is more than being carried out. The mine is fairly well equipped with a winding plant, reverberatory furnace, and M'Murtry roasting pot. A blunder was no doubt committed in the past in the endeavour to concentrate the milling dirt by a Krupp ball mill. It was a failure.

That portion of the lode other than the clean, solid, yellow ore carries a good percentage of copper which will pay well to concentrate, and a portion of the concentration machinery is on the ground. The charges for the reverberatory furnace are made up of 2cwt limestone carted from Cooma, 35cwt of roasted ore from the M'Murtry pot, also from the open roast, as well as green ore. A 55 per cent. matte is made, and is carted to the Cooma railway station at a cost of 22s 6d per ton. The quality of the wood used for smelting is poor, hence it takes a cord and a half to smelt a ton of ore, the cord costing 10s a ton.

FUTURE PROSPECTS.

To sum up, the mine possesses a good lode, which is carrying down strong, and with splendid values. The position will be much strengthened when the 200ft north level is extended and picks up the reef again, also when the lode is proved to be a continuous body by the 300ft level. Of that there is very little doubt. In addition, the full benefit o the mixed ore material will not be secured until the company erects an effective concentrating plant. When this is in operation, and the lode opened up at the 300ft level, the management will be in possession of a mine that will yield a large amount of copper. It was not possible to glean officially an idea as to the cost of producing a ton of copper. It has been figured out unofficially that the cost must be something like £30 per ton on the mine. A report to hand yesterday contains the important announcement that the vein in the shaft is 27in wide, and that in cutting hitches for the timbers another 9in of ore was exposed, making 36in, without reaching both walls of the vein. One side of the latter assays 7.1 per cent., and the other 20.6 per cent. of copper, showing that the ore body is going down undiminished in value.

CADET CAMP.

FIRST BATTALION UNDER CANVAS.

The cadet encampment at Middle Head has assumed a businesslike appearance. On Thursday a number of non-commissioned officers repaired to the camping ground and erected the tents, and had all in readiness for the reception of the cadets. By nightfall yesterday the whole of the 1st Battalion Senior Cadets, under the command of Major Wynne, were under canvas. Major Dove, S. O. Cadets, has been in charge of the arrangements. Colonel Paul will visit the camp to-day.

The N.C.Os.' camp will be held from November 10 to 13. Special travelling arrangements have been made for the country cadets, who will assemble at the Customhouse, Circular Quay, on Tuesday, November 10, and a steamer will convey them to Middle Head.

SATURDAY HALF-HOLIDAY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Would you kindly allow me space in your valuable paper re the universal Saturday half-holiday. I notice they are all blowing about the way it will benefit suburban places. No doubt it will suit most classes of businesses; but, Sir, can you point out to me how it will benefit the barber? Now, if a man gets a shave on Friday night can he possibly be clean on the face till Monday? He cannot get a shave on Saturday morning, as he will be working, and the saloon closed at the same time as he finishes his work. It will mean that every man will be shaving himself, and if he has to do that on Sunday he will do it all through the week. Mind you, I believe in everybody having a holiday, but I fail to see how the change will benefit hairdressing. I would suggest that barbers' saloon remain open on Wednesday all day, and have Thursday half-holiday. Wednesday is one of the principal days for a barber, as everyone likes a shave in the middle of the week. Close the usual time on Friday nights —7.30 p.m.—and let them close Saturday at 6 p.m. That would give everybody time to have a shave and a clean face for Sunday. It would be more beneficial to the employee, as his hours would be shortened, and still have his half-holiday and Saturday night to himself. I am sure it would suit the public better, and give a small shop a chance to live. It seems ridiculous to expect a barber to serve the same amount of customers in two hours and half extra on Friday night, for which, under the old conditions, he has all Saturday afternoon and night. I hope some more able pen than mine will take this matter up before it is too late. Mind you, I am referring to barbers' shops only.

I am, etc.,
BARBER SHOP.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Will you kindly permit me to present another phase of the evil of the proposed Saturday Half-holiday Bill now being agitated for, which is ostensibly for the sole benefit of employees. What about the small shops, who employ no one, grocers, and others. They are mostly kept by aged couples, too old for manual labour, or widows with families, who manage to eke out a bare existence, and whose customers are of the poorest class; dealers, who spend their all on a Saturday morning to buy the goods they wish to sell during the day, and have no money till sold out; casual labourers, perhaps make a start on Friday morning, after being idle all the early part of the week, and finish on Saturday afternoon, when they get paid; and many others. Where are they to get their goods for Sunday if this proposed bill becomes law? These same people would not go into the big shops for their small purchases, even if they were open. A large number of the small traders procure their goods from the large retail shops, their orders not being large enough for the wholesale houses to deal with. Again, to be consistent, in this proposed measure, if any person induces any shopkeeper to serve them after hours when the shop is closed by calling at the back or side door the purchaser should be penalised as well as the seller. As the law is carried out now, if not served, some of the customers will take away their custom, because the risk is all the shopkeeper's. The customers are getting obliged at no possible loss to themselves. This measure being for the benefit of the employees, let them have their half-day, as desired; but let the small shops, with no employees, keep it on Wednesday, as now, provided their turnover does not exceed a certain fixed amount. Otherwise they will be crushed out, the proprietors eventually having to rely on the State to help support them. I can enjoy a holiday as well as anyone, but not on the best day on which I solely rely to keep my head above water.

I am, etc, SMALL SHOPKEEPER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Knowing your love of freedom and fair play I wish you would insert in your paper a few lines in regard to the compulsory Saturday half-holiday. The ruin it would cause to the suburban and small shopkeepers cannot for a moment be doubted; but there is another phase of the question I have not seen touched. Under the present closing Act there is not one in one hundred keep it. It is impossible for a small shop that wishes to be honest to keep it and live. Poor people come home late, after earning a few shillings scrubbing or washing, and send their children for a loaf of bread and a candle to see to eat it, and if the honest shop does not serve them they must go where they can get it, and so the honest shopkeeper must close up. And what will it be under the Saturday compulsory closing? I am surprised at the ministers of the Evangelical Council entering into an alliance with any party to compel the people to become criminals, for such must certainly follow, and as for filling the churches, they never did a thing that will more effectually empty them, as the people will go away fishing and hunting on pleasure bent.

I am, etc, RICH. COSBY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—As an old employee in the shops, when I waited for the Town Hall clock to strike 11, and fearing to miss the last 'bus home, would hurry away from work, my hours of standing and trying to please having been from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily, and 11 p.m. on Saturdays. Now, there is no night work, except the one, and girls are on their way home at 6 p.m. instead, all shops sharing alike in the daylight hours of labour. But where there is any reason for compulsory closing at 1 o'clock I fail to see, for, according to the classification of labour, so must the hours of working be. We wouldn't expect the trams to cease running at 1 p.m. on Saturday to give the men the same privilege of a half-holiday as the shop assistants. Yet the latter would derive their pleasure from the work of the others, and not give them a thought. Shops, like trams, are a necessity and a public convenience to all classes of a large city, and I think should be open daily from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. (no need for any night work at all), and employers to give their employees their weekly half-holiday without closing their doors to do so. I am, etc.,

THE ISHMAEL OF NATIONS.

CASTRO OF VENEZUELA.

A BITTER CHARACTER SKETCH.

In "Everybody's Magazine" appears an article by George W. Crickfield, entitled "Castro the Tyrant," in which he gives his opinions, based upon personal observations in Caracas of President Castro, of Venezuela, who has been variously described as the "International Pest" and the "International Nuisance," and who only three days ago was reported in the cables to have seized another British vessel. In the course of the article the following passages occur:—

"Thousands of the very best of citizens of Venezuela have been imprisoned, tortured, and terrorised by the present Venezuelan despot. The motives are various. Frequently Castro, or some one of his coterie, wants a man's property. Ofter the victim has failed to join the band of maudlin man-worshipers who fawn upon the vain-glorious dictator with extravagant and disgusting sycophancy, and this is construed into hostility. Or, the victim may have spoken in reprobation of some of the unnumbered outrages committed by the military adherents of Castro. But hundreds of the best citizens of Venezuela have been imprisoned for no known cause at all; at one time it was stated that more than 1500 of these unfortunates were incarcerated in various dungeons throughout the country.

"The filth is utterly horrible, without sewage of the commonest sanitary provisions. The walls are a slimy paste of bacteria, damp and dark. Starvation, thirst, and infectious diseases, including leprosy, are among their daily horrors.

"He was elected by the machete. Now, a machete is a knife about two feet long, kept sharp and trusty, and in Venezuela this instrument takes the place of the Australian ballot-box. Every Venezuelan knows how to use a machete, women as well as men. I have seen a peon cut down a small tree at one or two strokes. So you see it is small wonder that there are many heads and limbs lost in an election in Venezuela.

"Ciprina Castro was a cattle man in the Tachira district (known as the eternal slaughterhouse of Venezuela), and he was a specialist in his occupation. His business consisted in getting up revolutions in some section on the border-line between Venezuela and Colombia, and then running other people's cattle from that section into the adjoining country, where he would sell them.

"Ever since the moment when the usurper, at the head of his licentious 'army,' overthrew the constituted authority and seized the reins of power, a saturnalia of graft and diabolism has prevailed throughout Venezuela. One may judge of its horrors from the fact that the regular 'army' is still a savage aggregation made up of unlettered peons, a mixed breed, in which Indian and negro blood predominate. When a man assassinates another in Venezuela he is not hanged nor imprisoned, but is given a Mauser and a machete and put into the army, where he becomes a pillar to support the ruling power.

"In April, 1901, the English sloop Maria Theresa was burned and plundered by a Venezuelan gunboat, and her crew was shamefully maltreated. At about the same time the British vessel Sea Horse was assaulted and its crew maltreated by a Venezuelan guardacestas. The British vessel In Time was destroyed in April or May, 1902, at Pedernales by the Venezuelan gunboat General Crespo. Outrages of the most revolting character were also perpetrated upon British subjects at the same place. This was the sort of thing that caused the blockade of 1903.

"When the atrocities became unendurable, when prayers, entreaties, and protests had proved of no avail, an array of foreign battleships reared their grim turrets in the blue waters off La Guayra, Puerto Cabello, and the Gulf of Maracaybo. A blockade was declared.

"Then Ciprino Castro did a thing that showed the calibre of the man. He issued a decree to his generals to arrest and imprison every Englishman, German, and Italian in Venezuela, to seize and confiscate their property, and, in the event of any mortality resulting from the blockade to assassinate every one of these prisoners. Scenes of the wildest disorder ensued. Seizures were made of all the resident citizens of the three nations mentioned, and, under escort of a lawless soldiery, surrounded by jeering, frenzied mobs, respectable business men of the highest standing were thrown like common felons into the hideous dungeons.

"The State Department at Washington should receive due credit for having acted once in its history decisively and with promptness. John Hay, Secretary of State, gave the American Minister and Consuls in Venezuela peremptory orders by cable to take under their protection the citizens of the three Powers named, to raise Old Glory over their stores, warehouses, and residences, and in stern and positive terms to inform Castro, his generals, governors, and local officials that any murder of English, German, or Italian citizens would call for condign punishment at the hands of the United States. Thunders of artillery from the warships in the harbours also had a salutary effect on the military rabble. When a German warship stood at sea beyond the range of vision, and, after a few preliminary shots, knocked Fort San Carlos into smithereens, the awestruck Venezuelans cried 'Caramba!' and fled.

"At the time of the blockade the revolution of Matos was practically triumphant. It controlled vast sections of Venezuela, and had the sympathy of every decent man. Had the blockade continued for a short period, the success of the revolution and the reasonable prospect of good government would have been assured. But through the mediation of the United States, the Power that Castro had insulted and now defies, the European nations were induced to withdraw their fleets, and Castro once more became firmly seated in power.

"Another way in which the United States was used to further Castro's ends appears in an incident reported, about the time of the blockade, from Ciudad Bolivar, on the Orinoco River. General Matos had held this city and adjacent territory, and had governed it for about a year. Castro had attacked Matos several times, and each time had been severely defeated. The wily dictator now decided to use 'diplomacy.' One fine morning a warship, under Castro's orders, steamed up the Orinoco flying the Stars and Stripes. The band was playing American national airs. The populace, not only men, but women and children also, streamed out along the water's edge to greet el tio Samuel. Without a moment's warning, Castro's ship hauled down the American flag, and opened a broadside of artillery and small arms into the crowd on shore. Hundreds of innocent spectators were murdered. A general engagement followed, and it is said that about fifteen hundred persons lost their lives. What did the United States do about this insult to the flag? Nothing! And the reign of plunder and cruelty went on unchecked.

"To-day Castro is a millionaire—the only millionaire in Venezuela. As a fair illustration of his methods with foreign corporations, the case of the United States and Venezuela Company may be cited. This American concern invested six hundred thousand dollars, gold, in a railroad and other works, on the faith of a contract, every word and syllable of which had been carefully examined by Castro several times, and signed by his Minister of Public Works, on his orders, after full and free discussion in his Cabinet. When this company's money had given employment to thousands of Venezuelans, made a great river navigable, and opened up a vast and trackless wilderness to settlement, Castro declared invalid the contract that he himself had made, on the ground that it had not the approval of his alleged congress. Every member of this congress had been appointed by himself, every member of it would have faced imprisonment upon refusal to obey his slightest wish.

"To look at Castro, one would regard him as the last man in the world to occupy the centre of the international stage. In stature he is short. In personal appearance there is little or nothing to suggest the type of man he really is. He left the Andean province that was his home with scarcely the rudiments of an education. He has never been outside of the limits of Venezuela, except on one trip to Curacoa, a little Dutch island off the Venezuelan coast. To him, Caracas was a wonderful revelation, and the change from his mountain hut to the seat of power in the "Yellow House" was one well calculated to make him dizzy. The hordes of camp followers, flatterers, and sycophants that greet every upstart military chief whose star seems to be in the ascendant, soon turned his head.

"As he had absolutely no knowledge of the world, his diplomatic dealings with foreign Governments assumed much the same tone that he would use with his mule-drivers. He believed, and still believes, that his band of macheteros could whip the United States and all civilization.

"As to whether Castro is personally a coward, there are differences of opinion. When there was an earthquake in Caracas, he was so frightened that he ran and jumped from a verandah on the second story, breaking his arm in the fall. He forgot all about his wife and the other members of the household, leaving them to take care of themselves. Those who do not belong to the Castro worshippers cite this as an example of personal cowardice, and they also call attention to the fact that he obviously fears assassination, for no one can get into his presence without securing every kind of guarantee from those immediately in his confidence, and running the gauntlet of a long line of soldiery. It may be said for him, however, that in battle he has successfully led his soldiers, so that even though a moral, he probably is not a physical, coward.

SUBURBAN NEWS.

BALMAIN LIGHTING.

The Electric Light and Power Supply Company has expended over £6000 upon their scheme for lighting Balmain by electricity, and erecting the garbage destructor. The latter is now in full working order, and the borough's refuse is being disposed of efficiently. The official opening of the destructor is to be celebrated on Tuesday next. At the last council meeting it was resolved to return the company's deposit of £500.

OFFICIAL ROBES.

Ever since the present Mayor of Balmain took office he has worn his robes at all council meetings, as well as at nearly every important outside function. Now another departure has been made. The town clerk (Mr. Goodsir) has been provided with a gown at a cost of £2 10s, and in future he will wear it on all official occasions.

BARBED WIRE FOR SUN-BATHERS.

Residents in the vicinity of Elkington Park baths have made repeated complaints of young men deporting themselves on the tops of dressing-sheds on the harbour side of the baths insufficiently clothed. The matter was discussed at the council on Tuesday night, and it was decided to put a stop to the practice by covering the sheds with barbed wire.

PROGRESS OF ROSEVILLE.

The annual meeting of the Roseville Progress Association was held on the 3rd inst., under the presidency of Mr. Eden Babbage. The report stated that the committee had been successful in inducing the shire council to carry out many necessary improvements. The committee kept in touch with the council, and had been consulted generally in reference to roads and other improvements. The rate struck by the council last year was 2d in the £, amounting to £574 9s on a capital value of £70,200, of which £508 11s 10d was collected. As a result of representations made to the Inspector-General of Police, through the shire council, a resident constable had been appointed to Roseville. During the year 60 additional trees had been planted. Reference was made to the improvements carried out at Roseville Park, and as some of the new discoveries were on Crown lands, the Minister was being requested to reserve certain sections from sale. The residents of Roseville, Chatswood, Lindfield, and Killara had generously responded to the call of the trustees, some £75 having been received in subscriptions.

CROSSING THE LINE.

Residents of the western suburbs between Croydon and Burwood railway stations have about half a mile stretch of railway line cutting off one section of residents from the other almost as effectually as a river. Alderman Sanders drew attention to this fact at a Burwood Council meeting recently, and said that there should be a road under the line at a suitable place between Croydon station and Shaftesbury-road, where the line is on an embankment above the surrounding country. A letter has now been received by the council from the Railway Commissioners stating that in the event of any alterations to the line being made the matter would receive attention.

BEXLEY'S MUNICIPAL ESTIMATE.

On the assumption that a threepenny rate, together with incidental items of revenue, amounting to £160, would yield a return of £2216, Bexley Council on Tuesday, proceeded with its estimates for 1909, which embraced the following items:—Daymen and carters, £1000; street lighting, £600; kerbing and guttering, £200; overdraft, £200; brick footpaths, £200; salaries, £191; Government roads, £150; interest on loan, £108; unforseen contingencies, £100; stamps, stationery, advertising, £75; Fire Brigades Board, £95; pipes and timber, £55; tool repairing, £40; casual labour, £30; bank interest, £30; auditors, £12; office cleaning, £11; assessment, £10; metal screenings, £10; water and gas, £8; a total of £3168.

ILLAWARRA RAILWAY WANTS.

Complaints were recently made by Bexley Council regarding the erratic running of trains on the Illawarra line between 1 and 2 p.m. on Saturdays, and also in regard to the bad lighting of the evening trains. The Commissioners have replied that the traffic out of Sydney on Saturdays during the time stated is very brisk, and when race meetings are held additional trains have to be put on. It is therefore not practicable to avoid some delays. The matter is one which is having special attention. Arrangements for lighting had lately been strengthened by the installation of improved incandescent mantles, and their use was being extended to suburban stock generally.

MUNICIPAL MATTERS AT BEXLEY.

At Alderman Wiseman's request, the Hurstville Council is to be asked by the Bexley Council to immediately mitigate the nuisance caused by drainage coming from Botany-street to Fleet-street, Carlton, in which vicinity two cases of diphtheria had occurred within a week. The Mayor reported that £350 arrears of rates had been gathered in. He hoped to increase the amount to £400 before the end of the month.

PARK WANTED AT SOUTH ANNANDALE.

The Petersham municipality is not overburdened with parks. It has one comparatively small park, which has been turned to the best possible advantage as an attractive recreation area during recent years, but Petersham is a largely populated area, and one park does not comply with the recreative needs of the people. The finance committee of the council has recommended that £2750 be raised for the purchase of a park at South Annandale, where there is sufficient land available, and that the Government be asked to grant £2000 towards the desired sum. The project has been heartily supported throughout the district.

A PETERSHAM LOAN.

The Petersham Council, which controls a borough whose solvency is unquestionable, has decided, on the motion of the Mayor (Alderman Percy Hordern), to make application to the Minister in accordance with section 176 of the Local Government Act, for permission to obtain a temporary loan, not exceeding £2000, in order to carry out necessary municipal work. The Mayor was authorised to attach the corporate seal to the application, and also to arrange with the bank for the loan. The proposal does not indicate any financial straits on the part of the council, but is by way of a financial adjustment of a temporary character to tide over expenditure until the next year's rates fall due, when it is expected to be repaid.

ARNCLIFFE PROGRESS ASSOCIATION.

At the meeting of the Arncliffe Progress Association on Tuesday evening, under the presidency of Mr. A. E. Martin, it was decided to invite the attention of the Railway Commissioners (through the Illawarra Progress Association's Council), to the want of a tram to meet the first train in the morning from Oatley; also the want of seating accommodation on No. 14 platform at Sydney station. It was also agreed to call the attention of the Inspector-General of Police to the excessive speed of motor cars between Arncliffe Public School and Cook's River-road.

SHIRE COUNCILS.

COOMA.—The Monaro Shire Council has erected a bridge over the Cooma Creek at Mittigang, on the road from Cooma to the pleasure resort on the Murrumbidgee River.

DUMARESQ (Armidale).—At the usual monthly meeting the annual balance-sheet showed receipts to be £2148 19s 7d, and the expenditure £2552 14s 4d. Mr. F. J. Foster, M.P., advised the council that the Postmaster-General had no intention of generally limiting or reducing the inland mail service, but on the contrary he was disposed to grant reasonable facilities where none now existed. The council decided to request the Minister to defer the operation of the Width of Tyres Act till 1914, as if suddenly put into operation it would be a great hardship on most men.

GOOBANG (Parkes).—The shire council have again affirmed their decision not to support the amalgamation of the P. P. boards with the shire councils at the present juncture. A proposal that the council acquire the powers under the Public Gates Act was defeated on the casting vote of the president, who pointed out that the Act was practically obsolete, and would probably be wiped off the statute book before long. Three cases of scarlet fever have been notified within the shire area since the last meeting. The amount of outstanding rates has now been reduced to £240. The question of providing roads of access to Tullamore railway station has been deferred until the shire engineer and a Government surveyor can visit the locality for the purpose of mapping out the required roads. Various sums, totalling over £450, have been voted for new works in various parts of the shire. A special grant of £350 has been received towards the new bridge at Tichbourne, and a further grant of £300 will be available when the work is sufficiently advanced.

GILGANDRA.—The council has accepted the tender of J. C. Ryan for the erection of new shire offices at £570. The council decided to obtain a report from the engineer of water supply regarding a service for the township. Mr. T. Pridham, engineer of the country towns for sewerage and water supply, accompanied by Mr. K. Beaton, engineer for Wingadee Shire, made an inspection of Gulargambone township with a view to reporting upon the most practicable scheme either from an artesian bore or by pumping from the river.

GUNNING.—The council has decided to invite applications for the position of inspector of noxious weeds destruction. The council decided not to co-operate with Wenomara shire in asking that the powers of the pastures protection boards should be transferred to shire councils; also that all public gate-holders be required to register and number their gates within three months.

GUNDURIMBA (Lismore).—The council has collected rates for the year as follow:—A Riding, £1064 19s 4d; B Riding, £803 16s 1d; C Riding, £985 10s 8d.

HORNSBY.—At the last meeting of the council it was agreed,—"That this council co-operate with the Kuring-gai shire in its effort to prevent the establishment of a consumptive home on the North Shore line."

MULWAREE (Goulburn).—A letter was received from the Works Department in reply to a communication from the council respecting allowances to councillors for attending meetings, stating that there was no "set price" per meal to be paid to councillors in connection with attendance at meetings. The ordinance, it was added, provided clearly that what was to be paid was "actual out-of-pocket expenses" for sustenance, i.e., meals and sleeping accommodation. Councillor Styles moved to apply for the powers under the Local Government Act for the prevention of the pollution of natural watercourses. He said that the discharge of fluid matter from Goulburn was a disgrace, and a danger to people living on the Mulwaree River below Goulburn. Below the junction of the Mulwaree and Wollondilly it was a matter of death to drink the water for a period covering 24 hours. It was proposed that the co-operation of the Tallaganda, Gunning, and Crookwell shires and of Goulburn Municipality be sought, and the resolution was carried.

TINTENBAR (Ballina).—At the last council meeting it was stated that the approximate rating per head of population of the shire was £2 2s 4d. The council decided to call tenders for the erection of a timber beam bridge over Emigrant Creek at Cumbalum.

WALGETT.—At the shire council meeting on Saturday it was resolved that uniforms be purchased for the Walgett fire brigade. In two instances it was decided to oppose application for special leases on travelling stock routes. Application is to be made for a bi-weekly mail service from Walgett to Carinda. The shire clerk's salary has been increased to £250 per annum. The credit balance up to October 3 was £3351.

YARROWLUMLA.—The financial statement showed a credit balance of £721. The clerk submitted particulars of rates in his financial statement as follow:—Unimproved capital value: A Riding, £235,446; B Riding, £216,326; C Riding, £158,410. Total, £610,202. Rates: A Riding, £981; B Riding, £901; C Riding, £660. Total, £2542. Rates paid: A Riding, £918; B Riding, £813; C Riding, £576. Total, £2307. Arrears now outstanding: A Riding, £64; B Riding, £85; C Riding, £88. Total, £235. A letter from the Rev. Father Kenny, of Bungendore, was read, asking that the R. C. Church lands at Captain's Flat be exempt from rates. After discussion, it was resolved, on the motion of Councillors Keeffe and Falconer, that the matter be referred to the Minister for Works for his advice, and that the correspondence be forwarded to him.

MR. DEAKIN'S DILEMMA.

Those who least sympathise with Labour tactics will have a good word to say for the frank and plain way in which Mr. Fisher has now ended the situation which has for so long prevailed in Federal politics. The Deakin Government, representing a helpless minority in the House of Representatives, has clung to office on the terms indicated from time to time by Mr. Watson or Mr. Fisher. Such a position should long since have proved intolerable to any Government that had possessed the true spirit of constitutionalism, and no doubt the ordeal has been as severely felt by Mr. Deakin as by his critics. Now it is definitely ended, and by the same power that has kept it going all along. There is nothing lacking in Mr. Fisher's declaration. We must suppose it was not made until the determination to break with Mr. Deakin was irrevocable. Federal politics have given us many surprises, but it is hardly credible that the step now taken can be revoked, or that it can be looked on as other than a prophecy of doom for the Deakin Government. Mr. Fisher hesitated when he was asked did he propose to take any other step. After hesitating, he replied in the negative. But that can convey only the feeblest consolation to the Government. Mr. Fisher is free to act. Why has he publicly, ostentatiously almost, proclaimed that freedom, if it is not going to be a weapon of offence? And we know very well, quite apart from this new protection matter, that Labour in politics is being driven by the party outside to take the offensive or lay down the command. We need not doubt, and Mr. Deakin need not hope, that now Mr. Fisher is free he will remain a beneficently passive spectator of Mr. Deakin's efforts.

But it matters little who is to give the final coup de grace, whether Mr. Fisher or another. Whatever else happens, the plain fact is that Mr. Deakin cannot carry on. He may wait for a formal vote of no confidence; but failing the almost impossible eventuality of a party of Liberalism, including Mr. Deakin himself, Mr. Reid, and Sir John Forrest, he cannot carry on. And so Mr. Deakin can only save what dignity is left by resigning at once. We hope for his own sake, and still more for the sake of the reputation of Parliamentary institutions in Australia, that he will do so forthwith. But what follows? Will either Mr. Reid or Mr. Deakin agree to put Mr. Fisher into office? On the other hand, is it thinkable that Mr. Reid or any other Liberal leader, could accept support from Labour? But this exhausts the possibilities, and only one thing remains. That, of course, is dissolution. The root trouble has been that the last general elections returned a House in which reasonably sound party government was unworkable. The pseudo alliance between Labour and Mr. Deakin gave a false air of working efficiency to the Government; but no more than a false air. Now, even that is gone, and the impracticability of the party situation is made manifest. No one of the parties, no one of the leaders, actual or potential, can command a majority of the House. No fusion or coalition which would be acceptable in and out of Parliament is in sight to save the situation. No new leader, such as Sir John Forrest or Mr. Irvine, seems in the least likely to do so. Well, then, there is only one constitutional, only one honest, only one straightforward course, and that is to dissolve. On the electors let the responsibility be thrown of ending a position that is as injurious to our political prestige as it is to the practical efficiency of government.

THE INDIAN JUBILEE.

Australians, as well as all other citizens of the outlying portions of the Empire, must share in the interest aroused by the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the assumption of control of Indian affairs by the British Government. In one sense our outlook on India is different from that of the people of Great Britain and Ireland. It is a thing that strikes the imagination, said Mr. Morley, in one of the last of his election speeches, that a small Scottish community of shipbuilders, artificers, craftsmen, and shopkeepers should have been responsible for setting him as the ruler of many millions of Asiatics. The electors of Australia have no such responsibility, and the Parliament has no opportunity of criticising the Minister's actions. The influence of India on our politics, however, is none the less considerable because it is indirect. Whenever any scheme is proposed for closer union within the Empire, it has to be remembered that whereas Canada, South Africa, and Australia are self-governed, and almost independent, two hundred and eighty millions of British subjects are controlled by a bureaucracy. Our internal politics are to some small extent influenced by the fact that many of the aliens whom Australians, Canadians, and South Africans refuse to admit are British subjects, as we are. India, moreover, is the pivot of the whole of British foreign policy. The possession of Egypt, with the attendant risk of a war with France, the successive protests against Russian encroachment, our alternate friendship and enmity with Turkey, are all the consequences of what is an Imperial obligation in the truest and strictest sense of the term.

But it is not merely or mainly because of the influence of India on ourselves that Australians are bound to be interested in the recent celebrations. The British government there furnishes the chapter in the history of our race of which Anglo-Saxons have most reason to be proud. The foundation was laid by the great soldiers, by Clive and Wellesley among the commanders, and by Hardinge and Dalhousie among Governors-General, whose work was saved from destruction by Canning, Outram, Nicholson, Havelock, and Campbell, and a host of brave men at the time of the Mutiny. But the severest test has been supplied by the work of consolidation. Metternich has laid it down that you can do anything with bayonets except sit on them, but the British would have gained little from their bayonets had it not been for their powers of administration. It would be difficult to set a higher value on any feat of arms than on the work of civilisation achieved by Outram among the Bheels, by McPherson among the Khonds, and by John Lawrence in the Punjab. These men and others like them were pioneers. Not the least valuable part of their legacy was the tradition of hard work and self-sacrifice which they bequeathed to their successors. The work of the Indian Civil Service in all its branches is different in character now from what it was when new provinces were being settled. But though it is less picturesque, it is none the less arduous. In more settled districts many of the duties of an administrator have been made necessary by the establishment of order and of respect for human life. It is no doubt a mistake to suppose that famines were unknown under native rulers because nothing was heard of them. Famines are bound to occur in those parts of India which in some years are left without rain, owing to the variable nature of the monsoons. But clearly the mortality has increased because the population has been allowed to grow, unchecked by predatory raids.

It is in combating these periodical famines and the visitations of plague that the Indian Civil Service of late years has done its finest work. It has well earned the blessing invoked on those men who make two blades of grass to grow where only one had been before. The irrigation colonies in the Punjab are a monument of engineering of the first order in conception and execution and of competent administration. Railways, canals, and bridges, in addition, testify to the wisdom of officials who, though their expenditure has been as liberal as that of the Mogul emperors, have never been suspected either of corruption or of carelessness. Medical and sanitary science has been advanced where it was previously unknown; the reign of law and justice has been substituted for that of oppression and arbitrary taxation. One promise contained in the Queen's proclamation has been completely fulfilled. "We will show," it runs in the stately language of Lord Derby, "to all alike the equal and impartial protection of the law, and we do strictly charge and enjoin those who may be in authority under us that they abstain from all interference with the religious belief of our subjects, on pain of our highest displeasure." A great deal has been done to fulfil the promise implied in the succeeding clause:—"It is our further will that so far as may be our subjects, of whatever class or creed, be fully and freely admitted to any office the duties of which they may be qualified by their education, abilities, and integrity to discharge." Many natives of India have gained high rank in the Civil Service, the people have been made familiar with the working of representative institutions, and with the business of legislation in the local and provincial councils, and Lord Morley has now proved that race will not prevent any man from attaining the highest offices by appointing two British Indians to the Council of the Secretary of State. Nevertheless, it remains true that the evidences of discontent in India are as great now as they have been at any time since the Mutiny. The clamour for complete representation, and even for the expulsion of the British, is louder now than ever. For Englishmen it is enough to remember the medley of races, creeds, and climates of which India is composed; the anarchy out of which it has sprung, and into which it would return if abandoned. But that is no answer to the agitators, [illegible] est or self-seeking. It is not enough to point out to them the futility of attempting to weld a huge unwieldy mass into one political personality. Their bitterness, as Lord Morley has suggested, is probably in its origin racial, not political, though it find its most natural outlet in denunciation of a political system which provides a broad target for all the many varieties of discontent. If this is so, the task of the British is all the harder, because it is of a class to which they have not been accustomed. Their success now depends on their ability not merely to impose on their subjects what they conceive to be for their good. They have to make it their aim to understand and realise the thoughts, feelings, and sympathies of men of another race, which have been largely inspired by the contact of British political doctrines with Eastern needs and Eastern inexperience.

SYDNEY TWENTY-FIVE YEARS HENCE.

The remarks of Alderman Allen Taylor on his return from Britain and Europe regarding municipal questions are indicative of the broadening influences of travel upon men's minds. Separated as we are by thousands of miles from the heart of the white world, we are rather inclined to regard our local horizon as defining the limits of the world in general. Thus we are often apt to get things more than a little out of focus, and to believe that we bulk very much larger in the scheme of things than we really do. That we are suffering from this obsession is evidenced by much that we do in all departments of life. But in particular it is evidenced in our politics, Federal, State, and municipal alike. The national conceit and confidence which such a spirit creates is good in so far as it makes us ready to try experiments; but it is bad in so far as it makes us indifferent to the experience and the achievements of the great world outside. Owing to our comparative freedom from the restraint of tradition, we have struck out in new directions, and our action, at first ridiculed, has in a few not unimportant instances become precedents to be quoted by progressives in countries in which the movement of public opinion is slower. But in many other respects Australia pays the penalty of her isolation in being a long way behind. And in nothing, perhaps, more behind than in civic conceptions and achievements. In the past, the citizens of Sydney, for instance, have been too content to rest their city's claims to regard upon the beauty of its natural surroundings, quite oblivious to the fact that the city itself in many respects has not been worthy of its unrivalled setting.

Alderman Taylor will do a service to the cause of municipal reform by showing his fellow aldermen, as also the public, how very much Sydney falls short of municipal ideals, as illustrated by the modern capitals of the world. The palm for civic efficiency and civic achievement Mr. Taylor awards to Germany. Very probably we should be right in saying that Berlin is the best governed city in the world, and, while possessing few natural scenic advantages, it is fast developing into one of the most beautiful cities in the world. And yet what Berlin was within the memory of men still comparatively young, Sydney is to-day, and a quarter of a century hence Sydney will be almost certainly as great a city as Berlin is now. Unless some international upheaval should give a new direction to the path of destiny, Sydney must be not merely the leading city of the Commonwealth, but the great white city of the South-western Pacific. In other words, it is destined, and that at no distant date, to be in point of population, as of commerce, in the first flight of the cities of the world. Whether it shall be worthy of such high place in the scale of importance will depend very largely upon the civic policy which is now and henceforth pursued. The street scheme, originally determined in large measure by the tracks of cattle, wants to give place to something more in keeping with modern requirements; the entire traffic system needs remodelling, building needs to be regulated, our notions regarding parks and gardens and other civic services call for large expansion; and, last, but by no means least, such of the harbour foreshores as have not yet passed into the hands of the allotment holder should be kept intact, even though such a course should involve the spending of some public money upon resumptions. It is due not merely to the city of Sydney, but to the State, that the harbour, which contributes so much to the holiday pleasures of the people as a whole, should be preserved from further encroachment and defacement by the house-builder along its wooded shoreline. From the labours of the City Improvement Commission, which is now collecting evidence, we may fairly expect both stimulus and guidance in future city improvement. The chances of having any comprehensive scheme of improvement fully appreciated and given effect to, would, however, be very greatly enhanced if more of the aldermen were able to share with the ex-Lord Mayor a personal knowledge of what has been done, and what more is doing in other great cities of the world.

THE PERSISTENCE OF RELIGION.

At first blush there may not seem to be much connection between the Congress at Oxford, which has been concerning itself most profoundly with religious origins, and with a speech of the British Chancellor of the Exchequer to his countrymen in Wales, on the subject of religion in relation to their lives. Yet there is the very close connection established by what we might call the universality of the religious necessity. It is perhaps a far cry from the scholarly deliberators at Oxford to the plain folk addressed by Mr. Lloyd George in Wales; but whereas we have in the one case the spirit of cold investigation, on the other we have the warm Christianity of the Nonconformist pulpit accepted in all its literalness by a people whose profound religious nature impels them as a matter of course to make their lives, to a very large extent, the expression of their beliefs. According to the Oxford Congress, quite a number of beliefs might, in their formal expression, rest upon very insecure foundations. But still they stand and exercise a potent influence on the conduct of everyday men and women. It is so not only in Wales, which is mentioned merely as an example, but the world over. That which is vital in religion transcends creeds, and is not dependent upon any scholarship or research whatsoever. The most that scholarship and research can do is to tabulate the various efforts of man to know himself, and to commune with the Power which, slightly to paraphrase the comprehensive formula of Arnold, is the "not himself which makes for righteousness."

We who are of Christian communities give this formula concrete life and definition in Christ and His Church. But small harm is done to Christianity by confessing the spirit, of which it is the supreme manifestation, extends far beyond its limitations, and animates the world, however primitive and savage or professedly pagan. In the past there have been not a few who would put science in the place of religion as sufficing for all the fundamental needs of human life. But the experience of earnest men has abundantly, even pathetically, shown that science as a substitute for religion is but ashes in the mouth. Science day by day extends, and beneficently extends, its domination over the field of material phenomena. It gives us good sanitation and flying machines, an infinitude of technical processes, and formulae for the care of our bodies; but on the deepest problems of human life it leaves us as bereft, as does the philosophy of the primitive magicians. The most remarkable trait of the young Science of thirty years or more ago was its pretentiousness and its self-sufficiency. The outstanding characteristic of the science of to-day is its humility, and its ready acquiescence in the limitation of its field. Within that field it has, by stimulating men to "prove all things," worked sad havoc with the dogmas imposed by creeds; but in doing so it has merely shown that those dogmas, considered in relation to the world to-day, no longer adequately express and crystallise the universal religious spirit behind them. To-day there is no real conflict between science and religion, but rather the recognition that religion and science really interpenetrate. But we cannot so readily say that there is no conflict, or estrangement, between the spirit of religion, which animates all men, and the churches, whose ministers complain that men no longer attend them as they used to do. A man may not go to church, and yet make a tabernacle of his own soul. But he will go to church when he finds that in the church he can give at once deeper reality and enlargement to the spiritual life within, and establish nearer contact with the universal source of it all.

To-day's "Herald."—The "Herald" to-day consists of 28 pages. Mr. Lucy still holds the belief that the House of Lords will summarily reject the Licensing Bill. He quotes from his own reminiscences in "Cornhill" as to the real reason why the Home Rule Bill was rejected. Mr. Bright held the key of the position, and having been insulted by Mr. Sexton, he refused to advise the party to vote for the bill. The writer of a "Woman's Letter" continues to describe the overpowering Directoire. Mr. Mackenzie writes the first of two papers on those great centres of the Eastern Archipelago, Penang and Singapore. Mr. Halse Rogers contributes an interesting paper on the Rhodes Scholars at Oxford. Incidentally, it seems Australia loses more of her Rhodes men than other countries, because more of our scholars remain in England, or at least do not return to Australia. In view of the expected arrival of the Port Jackson, an article on the two nautical training ships now nearing Sydney will be useful. We summarise the principal contributions in the October Reviews. In the Garden will be found full of notes on work in most sections of the amateur gardener's province.

Copper, Gold, and Silver-Lead Mining.—In another column appears the first of a series of articles dealing with the copper lodes in the volcanic region between Adaminaby and Kiandra, also in the deep ravine of Lobb's Hole, the auriferous deposits of the Harden group of mines on the remarkable granite fissure traversing that district, as well as the silver-lead, copper-gold lode of the Kangiara Syndicate, 21 miles from Yass. Recognised by geologists as one of the most ancient portions of the globe, the Mount Kosciusko region opens up an entirely new feature in the copper-ore mining industry of this State. A characteristic of the ore bodies is their richness but narrowness in width. The extremely rugged character of the country, together with the rigours of a region under the snow-line for fully five months in the year, make prospecting operations very difficult; but recent discoveries show that a wealth of mineral deposits awaits development. The articles also draw attention to the extraordinary neglect shown in the exploitation of the eastern and western extensions of the remarkably well-defined fissure lode from which the Harden Gold Mine has paid £27,500 in dividends in the course of a few years. Much interest also attaches to the work of developing the rich silver-lead ore of the Kangiara Syndicate. Should the work taken in hand by this syndicate prove that the lode goes down, the fact that it is lying between granite walls may be regarded as a guarantee of its longitudinal continuity, and thus lead to other mines being opened up.

Peel River Estate.—When the compulsory clauses were introduced into the Closer Settlement Act provision was made for the constitution of a special tribunal to determine the claims of owners of resumed estates who could not agree with the Government as to the price to be paid. The first case in which an appeal has been made against the Government valuation is that of the Peel River Estate at Tamworth. The tribunal constituted to take evidence and determine the value has just been appointed. It consists of Mr. Justice Sly as chairman, Mr. E. T. Sievers Government Valuator, as assessor for the Government, and Mr. Robey, manager of the Tamworth branch of the Commercial Bank, as assessor for the company. The inquiry will be commenced in a few days. In the meantime the task of designing and surveying the estate is proceeding, and seven surveyors are engaged on the work.

Murray Waters.—The Premier yesterday signed the Murray Waters agreement on behalf of New South Wales, and the representatives of Victoria and South Australia will attach their signatures without delay. The next step will be to pass legislation in each of the interested States ratifying the agreement, and it is intended that the bills shall be submitted this year and passed into law before the current sessions terminate. As soon afterwards as possible the works comprehended by the agreement will be put in hand.

King's Birthday Review.—The annual review of the metropolitan troops will be held to-day at Centennial Park, in honour of the anniversary of the birthday of King Edward VII. The troops and the Commonwealth Naval Forces will form up ready for inspection at 4 o'clock. The dress will be review order; all the regimental bands will be in attendance, and the feu de joie will be fired. Commanding officers of country units will hold ceremonial parades. The C.O., R.A.A., will arrange to fire a Royal Salute of 21 guns from South Head at noon on Monday.

Penalised for Kindness.—In the Industrial Court yesterday the secretary of the Shop Assistants' Union proceeded against William Dombkins, a Newcastle boot manufacturer, for a breach of an award. The plaintiff said that the defendant was employing a shop assistant at a wage less than 25s per week. The defendant explained that his employee was a factory hand and not a shop assistant. She took ill, and was unable to do her proper work, so for charity, defendant let her do lighter work in the shop when she tired of the factory work. Then the union prosecuted him for a breach of the award. The girl made no complaint, and was perfectly satisfied with the terms of her employment. His Honor remarked that it seemed that the weaker the employee the higher the wage. But a breach of the award had been actually committed, and a nominal fine was imposed. Defendant walked over to the secretary of the union, and drawing a bundle of notes from his pocket, put down the fine and costs on the table, exclaiming, "That's the easiest earned money you ever had in your life."

Zig-Zag Deviation.—The Parliamentary Standing Committee on Public Works concluded its inquiry respecting section B of the Lithgow Zig-Zag deviation, by passing the following resolution:—"That, in the opinion of this committee, it is expedient that the proposed deviation of the Great Western railway line to avoid that portion of the Lithgow Zig-Zag between the bottom points and the coal stage at Eskbank, section B, as referred to them by the Legislative Assembly, should be carried out."

Uncanny Exhibits.—Several queer exhibits were tabled at the meeting of the Naturalists' Club on Thursday evening, but two were describable as uncanny. One was the jumping bean of Mexico, which had been brought alive from the Franco-British Exhibition, and was shown by Mr. Sellors, B.A. The insect which gave the bean animation on the table was obscured from view, so that a seed- [illegible] appeared to be making erratic movements of its own volition. It came originally from a marshy part of Mexico. The larva of the insect falls inside the fruit of the plant, and gradually becomes enveloped in it. When the mature seed bursts the insect remains inside and causes its woody envelope to make queer movements. The other was a small tank containing two live snapping turtles, called "Suppon," from Japan. They were shown by Mr. David G. Stead, the president of the society, and came originally from a Japanese named Hattori, who breeds the creatures near Tokio. These turtles inhabit fresh water, and are popular articles of food. They are very savage, and have to be handled carefully. Hattori breeds them in immense numbers. The scientific name was given by Mr. Stead as Trionyx japonicus, and an interesting account of the breeding was narrated by the naturalist. The turtles appeared to be sluggish creatures, mud-coloured, and apparently quite content with the prison in which they reposed on some large gravel with a small quantity of water. Some years ago a Melbourne shopkeeper exhibited some jumping beans in his window, but within a few days they were seized and destroyed by the Department of Agriculture, as being likely to introduce another insect pest into the country.

Man-eating Sharks.—While standing on a high headland overlooking Middle Harbour a day or two ago Mr. James S. Bray, of Manly, noticed two large moving shadow-like forms, which came into view from out of the weeds. When in full sight they proved to be large male and female grey nurse sharks. The female was of immense girth. This should act as a warning to bathers in secluded spots of our harbour, Mr. Bray says, especially along the sandy beaches from now to about March next year.

Intense Heat Inland.—Another scorching day was experienced in the inland districts yesterday. At Cobar the temperature rapidly increased during the earlier part of the day until a reading of 108 degrees was recorded. Condobolin, Hay, and Tilpa reported registrations of 107 degrees, while at Deniliquin and Wilcannia the maximum temperature was 106. Other high readings in the interior included 105 degrees at Wentworth, 103 at Broken Hill and Walgett, and 102 at Dubbo. In the city the record in the middle of the day was only 76.9. A few heavy thunderstorms are reported from the northern districts.

Summer Schools.—A class of teachers is to be formed for the study of blackboard drawing, modelling, and brushwork, from January 4 to January 20. The class will be held under the trees in the grounds of Fort-street district school, from 9 a.m. till noon, daily, except Saturday. The number of students will be limited, and only teachers not at work in the metropolis should apply. The proposed summer school excursion in geology for teachers will be held at Tallong, on the southern line, from Monday, December 28, to Wednesday, January 6, 1909. Mr. E. C. Arnold, B.A., of Parramatta District School, will receive applications from teachers desirous of becoming members of the party.

Gold Yield.—The usual return furnished by the Under-Secretary for Mines shows that the gold yield recorded for this State for October is 24,788oz crude, equal to 21,958oz fine, valued at £93,272, as compared with 24,075oz crude, equal to 21,667oz fine, valued at £92,034, for the same month in 1907. The yield for the 10 months of this year is 220,380oz crude, equal to 189,822oz fine, valued at £806,313, as compared with 239,382oz crude, equal to 204,140oz fine, valued at £867,131 for the same period in 1907, thus showing a decrease of 14,318oz fine and £60,818 in value.

PERSONAL.

A dinner was tendered last evening to Dr. St. J. W. Dansey on his resignation from the staff of the Royal Prince Alfred Hospital, by the resident medical officers who have been associated with him during the term of his office. Dr. Dansey has been associated with the hospital for six years, for the last three of which he has filled the position of medical superintendent. He leaves in order to take up private practice in one of the suburbs.

The death occurred on Monday at Chiltern (Vic.) of Mr. John Strickland. In the fifties he was one of the woolshed "bosses," and the first to contribute his share of gold towards shoeing "Tinker," Brown's circus horse, with gold, to celebrate the election of a digger's representative to Parliament. It had often been contended that the horse was ridden around the streets of Beechworth by the successful candidate. Mr. Strickland always denied this, and his version was that the horse was nightly brought into the circus ring and led around. Its hoofs were lifted at intervals and the audience shown the golden shoes. Directly the horse was led outside, the shoes, which were lightly tacked on, were taken off, and put away carefully for the next performance.

It has been decided by the head agent of the Koninklijke Paketvaart Maatschappij, at Batavia, that after Mr. A. C. Koning (at present the representative in Australasia for the Royal Dutch Packet Company) returns to Holland on the 8th inst., Mr. L. E. Cocheret (Sydney agent) will be appointed managing agent for Australia for the Royal Dutch Packet Company.

Mr. F. J. Stephen, of the firm of A. Stephen and Sons, shipbuilders of Glasgow, who arrived in Sydney a few days ago by the new steamer Makura, intends to visit the Australian capitals and New Zealand. As the firm is building a large number of vessels for the Australian trade and consequently has many business friends in these States, it was a personal desire on his part to come into closer touch with his clients that prompted the visit.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Tristram Dunstan, of Sackville Reach, took place on Tuesday last, and was attended by a large number of people from all parts of the district. The chief mourners were the Ven. Archdeacon, Revs. C. C. and W. I. Dunstan (sons), Ven. Archdeacon Howell and F. Stubbs (sons-in-law), Messrs. B. and J. Dunstan (brothers-in-law), and Mesdames Stephenson, Howell, and Stubbs, and the Misses R. and I. Dunstan (daughters). The remains of the deceased lady were laid to rest by the side of two of her sons, one of whom was buried 68 years and the other 32 years ago.

We are requested to direct attention to the advertisement of Cooper and Fox, manufacturing saddlers, of Redfern, giving references from the English trade press to the firm's exhibit at the Franco-British Exhibition.

We have received a large collection of coloured cards, typical of Australian scenery, from Robert Jolley, 18 Camden-buildings, George-street.

On Monday (King's Birthday) the steamers Newcastle and Namoi will (weather permitting) leave the Newcastle and Hunter River S.S. Company's wharf, foot of King-street, at 10 a.m. sharp, for Cowan Bay.

WAR CLOUDS.

FRANCE REFUSES APOLOGY.

ALL PARTIES UNANIMOUS.

MENACING WORDS IN GERMANY.

INSISTENCE ON DEMANDS.

LONDON, Nov. 6.

Relations between France and Germany are strained, arising out of the Casablanca affray.

All parties in France support the refusal of M. Clemenceau, the Premier, either to apologise to Germany on account of the Casablanca affray before arbitration, or else repudiate the act of the French officers.

The report of the French Commissary of Police at Casablanca fully justifies the action of the French officers.

M. Pichon, French Minister for Foreign Affairs, states that pourparlers continue with a view of finding a formula acceptable to both Powers.

Reuter's correspondent at Paris states that while there is considerable tension, and while some anxiety exists, members of the Chamber of Deputies refuse to believe that so trifling an incident could be magnified into a casus belli unless by deliberate malevolence.

OVATION FOR M. DELCASSE.

M. Delcasse, formerly Minister for Foreign Affairs, on appearing in the lobby of the Chamber of Deputies, yesterday received an ovation, even his bitterest opponents joining in the demonstration.

[M. Delcasse, who had been Minister for Foreign Affairs for seven years, an unprecedented occupancy of office under the Republic, resigned in 1905 in consequence, it is understood, of veiled threats made by Germany, who considered that M. Delcasse was working to isolate that Power in Europe.]

HECTORING LANGUAGE.

FROM THE GERMAN PRESS.

INSULT MUST BE EXPIATED.

The "Cologne Gazette" asserts that Germany only offered to refer to arbitration the legal aspects of the affray, conditional on France having first expressed regret for infringing the prerogative of the German Consul in forcibly arresting persons under his protection; then Germany would be ready to express regret for the Consul's incorrect attitude in giving passes to persons who were not entitled to them.

Several German newspapers are menacing in their language.

The "Koenigsberger Allgemeine Zeitung" states that negotiations between France and Germany have become acute, and may soon lead to open conflict, if France refuses to accede to the German demands plainer speaking will be used.

A semi-official communique at Berlin states that Germany must unconditionally insist on its demand, for the physical attack on the representative of the German Consul cannot possibly remain unexpiated.

A WAY OUT.

EXPRESSION OF MUTUAL REGRETS.

Reuter's correspondent at Berlin reports that there is reason to believe that Germany is willing to arrange a settlement on the basis of the expression of mutual regrets for what occurred at Casablanca.

FORCES AGAINST WAR.

TOO MUCH RISK.

The "Temps," the organ of the French Foreign Office, writes that it would be the height of folly for Prince Bulow, the Imperial German Chancellor, to risk war in the present condition of European politics. The newspaper is convinced that he has too much sense to do so.

The "Debats" writes that it would turn arbitration into a meaningless farce to demand an apology as an indispensable preliminary to an inquiry.

ALARM IN RUSSIA.

GERMANY WANTS A DIVERSION.

There is considerable alarm in St. Petersburg at the demand of Germany for an apology from France before arbitration is entered upon.

IRRITATION IN FRANCE.

IMPUDENCE OF THE DEMAND.

LONDON, Nov. 6.

Mrs. Drummond, the suffragist agitator, released from gaol a few days ago on account of the state of her health, says that there was a mutiny in Holloway Gaol last Saturday because a woman warder rebuked Mrs. Pankhurst for trying to communicate with her daughter, Miss Christabel Pankhurst, while in the exercise yard.

Mrs. Drummond states that other suffragists in the gaol cheered and tried to rush the warder. Mrs. Pankhurst and Miss Christabel Pankhurst are now undergoing solitary confinement.

LAND MEASURE IN RUSSIA.

INDIVIDUAL TENURE.

LONDON, Nov. 6.

Charles W. Morse, known as the "Ice King," and later as the "Eliminated Banker," was arrested in February last, on his return to New York from a visit to Europe. He was charged with having, by means of a cheque, taken from the Mercantile National Bank the sum of 100,000 dollars (£20,000), and with having falsely represented himself to be the agent of one Morgan J. O'Brien, thus obtaining 100,000 dollars.

A SUCCESSFUL PORTRAIT.

CUP DAY COMEDY.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

On Cup Day, Charles Gray, photographer, of Bourke-street, was in his shop, when three young men entered. "Say, mate," said one of them, "This bloke wants 'is picture took."

The victim brushed his hair and smoothed the wrinkles of his coat. Having done so he sat in the chair, smiling timidly. The other two stood by the counter. One photograph was taken, and the sitter was changing his pose for the second, when a sound was heard from the counter, which Mr. Gray did not like. He rushed to the door, and saw one of the visitors disappearing round a corner with his till. This till contained 25s in silver. Pursuit was useless. But Mr. Gray remembered the camera. A photograph had been taken; he would develop it and take it to the detectives. He did so, and Claud Taylor was lodged in the watchhouse as a result. He admits that the photograph is his, and a faithful likeness, but denies that he knew anything about the till.

COLOURED RACES.

CONTROLLING MIGRATIONS.

LONDON, Nov. 6.

Colonel Seely, Parliamentary Under-Secretary for the Colonies, replying in the House of Commons last night to Sir Gilbert Parker, said that no advantage would result from summoning an Imperial Conference to discuss the migration of coloured races within the Empire, including the autonomous and the Crown colonies, or to consider the possibility of establishing communities of coloured fellow-subjects in those parts of the Empire where no objection is raised to them.

Colonel Seely added that the whole question was receiving the fullest attention of the Government. No representations on the matter had been received from the Premiers of the autonomous colonies.

MOUNT MORGAN DISASTER.

HEROIC MINER'S DEATH.

FORFEITS LIFE FOR FELLOWS.

TWO BODIES RECOVERED.

BRISBANE, Friday.

De Loffler, a timber man, was one of those miraculously saved from the awful disaster of Mount Morgan. He and L. A. Moore, an experienced miner, were among those working on the stope underneath the ore body that fell. They heard a slight report like a stick breaking, and at once went to the pigsties to see if the wedges on the top were loose. Small wedges are placed on top of the pigsties to give warning to miners. If the ground is settling from above it tightens the wedges, and then everyone knows a fall must occur. After the crack the wedges were all felt, and found to be still loose, showing there was no pressure from above. In about two minutes another crack was heard, and then Moore and De Loffler called out to the men to get away from underneath. There were two sets of stoping, Ryan's stope being at one end, and Arnold's at the other. Moore and De Loffler were nearest Ryan's stope, and when the alarm was given about 10 men went back from Ryan's end, and were saved. Moore went along Arnold's end, calling to the men to clear back. The men were not alarmed, and moved off rather leisurely, at all events certainly not hurriedly. Moore and De Loffler both expected that if the ore came down it would simply settle on the timber, but called the men away as an extra precaution. There is no doubt the men all thought likewise. Moore forfeited his life by going towards Arnold's end to give warning. De Loffler was near the edge of where the ore fell, and the air forced out by the fall actually blew him clear by about 12yds. De Loffler had a candle fixed on his finger, and was soon able to give light and lend all assistance in his power.

The Under-Secretary for Mines to-day received a telegram, stating that the bodies of Christensen and Bombarderie have been recovered.

The place where the accident at Mount Morgan occurred is reached by climbing up the stopes about 30 or 40 feet above the 750ft level. The fallen mass of ore is of startling dimensions. Its length is 90ft, breadth 60ft, and depth 30ft, and the weight is estimated at 20,000 tons. The fallen ore extended from No. 12 winze to No. 2 winze, and between 30 and 40 pigsties. The body of ore fell about 5ft, completely crushing the pigsties. In the face of the block of ore, where men in gangs are now working, massive lumps appear to be right on the floor, but at the other side there are cavities 2ft to 3ft wide, probably caused by the unevenness of the block, or else by timber underneath. Though these hollows exist, there is no hope of any of the entombed men being alive. The bodies are all completely covered, and unfortunately no one knows exactly where they lie.

The horizontal dyke from which the rock fell is about 3ft wide. It brought the rock down so suddenly as to cross the vertical dyke that crouched out from the main south dyke. This branch dyke unfortunately sloped out and gave no support to the ore body. Had it sloped in the opposite direction there would have been some support, and perhaps the mass of ore would have settled down on the numerous pigsties and have been held there. These dykes and flatheads, or interstices in the ore body, has been the cause of both accidents. The presence of the horizontal dyke was discovered in blocking out ore by drilling. Every precaution considered necessary appears to have been taken.

KURRI DISTRICT COLLIERIES.

DIFFICULTY AT ABERMAIN.

KURRI KURRI, Friday.

Some dissatisfaction exists amongst the employees of the Abermain colliery owing to what they allege to be an attempt by the management to introduce fresh working conditions. The lodge officials state that it has been customary for the miners to take up bottom coal left by the machines, and to be paid pick-won rates for it. Recently, it is alleged, the deputies instructed the miners not to lift bottoms, as the coal was of an inferior class, and probably injurious to the trade.

The men claim that if they are compelled to throw away bottoms they are entitled to increased remuneration. A conference between the lodge officials and the colliery management took place on Tuesday with regard to this matter, but no agreement was reached. A resolution was then carried by the men as follows:—"That we, the Abermain miners, cannot accept the proposed alteration of conditions submitted by the proprietors, and intend to continue working under existing conditions and customs, as agreed upon and acknowledged to exist at the Abermain colliery since the resumption of work after the cessation regarding the machine question."

The rate paid at the colliery for pick coal is 2s 9½d per ton, against 1s 5½d per ton for machine coal, and the men would lose the difference between the two prices by not being allowed to lift bottoms.

It is probable that there will be further developments.

UNIONISTS DIFFER.

INGRATITUDE ALLEGED.

WOLLONGONG, Friday.

The members of the Illawarra Colliery Employees' Association are very wrath at statements alleged to have been made by Mr. Mays, president of the Airlie Miners' Association, at a meeting of the Sydney Labour Council on October 22, to the effect that he did not think much of the organised miners. They boasted of a membership of 88,000; yet where would the Airlie miners have been if it were not for the council? Mr. Mays stated at the meeting that Mr. Dooley, the member for the district, had said that Mr. Cochrane and that gentleman being sent up there saved them, and they thus won the fight.

The real facts are that the members of the Illawarra Colliery Employees' Association contributed more towards the support of the Airlie miners than any other body of unionists in the State, and contributed more than twice the amount raised by the unionists affiliated with the Sydney Labour Council. The Illawarra Colliery Employees' Association has a membership of 2400, and they beat the Sydney Labour Council, which boasts of having 88,000 unionists affiliated with it.

Union officials state that it would be a bad time for the Airlie miners if they attempted to seek assistance in this district again, after the thankless manner in which the Illawarra miners were treated on the last occasion.

RAWSON MEMORIAL FUND.

Subscriptions to this fund (as shown by an advertisement appearing elsewhere) are steadily coming in, the total amount now received amounting to £2496 17s 6d. It is expected that when it is more fully realised Sir Harry Rawson's term of office will shortly expire, and his final departure from the State will be made within a few months from now, donations will greatly increase in number. Steps have been taken by the committee to bring the matter directly before the business people of Sydney.

RIFLE FACTORY FOR LITHGOW.

YASS-CANBERRA.

CAPITAL SELECTED.

FIRST BALLOT A TIE.

UNRULY SENATORS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Yass-Canberra district has now been selected by both Houses of the Federal Parliament as the site for the capital of the Commonwealth. The ballot in the Senate this afternoon resulted in a majority of two against Tumut.

The debate occupied nearly two weeks. A member of the Labour party, Senator Russell, of South Australia, was treated to no end of upbraiding for having the courage to stick to his individual opinion that Dalgety was entirely unsuitable. Yet to-day not one Dalgety adherent gave a vote for the place he had been upholding so warmly. All considerations were put aside to make way for a party manoeuvre rather than see a straight-out vote recorded. A trick was resorted to which it was hoped would nullify the whole thing, and result in the debate being wasted. When the last ballot was taken it was found that Dalgety and all the other sites had not one vote set down for them. Senator M'Coll, of Victoria, had announced that he preferred Tumut, but failing Tumut he would vote for Yass-Canberra. He was made aware of this before the time for the ballot. He fell into the trap, and the trick was accomplished. Senator Millen, of New South Wales, has been unsparing in his watchfulness throughout, and saw his efforts crowned with success. The rush of the Dalgetyites in support of their action to get a ruling declaring that the matter was at an end by reason of the tie was met with firmness on the part of the President, Senator Gould; and in the second ballot Senator M'Coll—having voted as he said he would for Tumut—put his cross for Yass-Canberra, thus giving the majority in its favour.

In the morning the debate on the method of ballotting concluded, and the various sites were nominated. In the afternoon no time was lost in getting down to business. A few minutes sufficed to complete the work of counting the votes, and the President read the result of the first ballot.

In slow, measured tones the President gave out the poll, "Armidale, no votes." Nobody was surprised at that. "Dalgety, no votes," came next, and looks of blank astonishment followed. "Dalgety-Tumut, no votes," continued the President, and the looks of astonishment became intensified. "Lyndhurst, no votes," was the next announcement, followed quickly by "Tumut, 18 votes; Yass-Canberra, 18 votes."

"Tricked," shouted a member of the Representatives in the gallery whose sympathies are strongly in favour of Dalgety. His interjection was repeated by several Senators sitting on the Opposition benches, while peals of laughter came from the Labour party.

The President announced that according to the procedure set down in the resolutions carried by the Senate the sites receiving the smallest number of votes would have to be struck out, and the ballot continued on the remaining sites. This announcement was met with a storm of interjections from the Government benches, on which the Dalgetyites had rallied. They did not want the second ballot, for they knew that Senator M'Coll had said he would give Tumut his first vote and Yass-Canberra his preferential vote.

Senator Stewart (S.A.), who has proved himself the bitterest opponent of Yass-Canberra, jumped to his feet and claimed that the matter must now be dropped, as there had been an equal vote, and that meant a negative.

Senator Trenwith (Vic.) also held the same opinion, and urged the President to close the matter.

Senator Sir Josiah Symon (S.A.) said he was amazed at the action taken by the opponents of Yass-Canberra. He was surprised to hear the Vice-President of the Executive Council cheer when the result of the trick was announced. The resolutions arrived at clearly showed that some site should be selected.

Senator Best, Vice-President of the Executive Council, agreed with what Senators Stewart and Trenwith had said, and urged that by its action in making a tie the Senate had clearly shown that it was desirous of keeping to the old site.

Cries of "Rubbish!" and "Bunkum!"

The President announced that he proposed to take upon himself the responsibility of giving a decision in the matter. It was true that in ordinary circumstances an equality in votes would mean the negativing of the motion. This was a special occasion, however, and he considered the resolutions arrived at by the House provided for finality in the selection of a site. He did not think that it was intended that all the discussion of the past three days should be wasted. The ballot rules provided that the sites getting smallest numbers of votes should be discarded. It was provided in the standing rules that he should set for the Senate what he considered to be a proper procedure in the matter.

After a further explanation of the Standing Orders, the President announced that he proposed to ask the Senate as to whether those places getting no votes should be left off the list. He said: "Is it the opinion of the House that Armidale be taken from the list?" Before any response could be given Senator Stewart (S.A.) rose. After a few seconds' consultation with Senator Givens (Q.), he objected to the President's ruling.

"You are too late," said the President. "There is other business before the House."

Senator Stewart: But I protest at not being heard. I want to move that the House disagree with your ruling. (Disorder.)

The President: "You cannot do so now. You should have objected before I put the question to the House as to whether a certain site should be omitted."

Senator Stewart: "I was not given time." (Disorder.)

The President: "You were given sufficient time to take any steps you desired to."

Senator Stewart: "I beg to move that your ruling be disagreed with on account of it being contrary to the standing orders."

The President: "Order! Order! The hon. member cannot move that motion at present."

Senator Stewart was not to be denied, and handed in a written motion to the effect that the President's ruling be disagreed with. This the President refused to accept, repeating that the hon. member was too late to take exception to the ruling.

Senator Givens: "I object to your ruling. You have prevented Senator Stewart from putting in his point of order." (Disorder.)

The President: "Order! I will not allow this matter to be debated any further."

Senator Givens: "I desire to take a motion under the Standing Orders." (Interruption and disorder.)

The President: "I direct the hon. member to discontinue his speech and resume his seat. The question is that Armidale be omitted from the list."

Senator Stewart: "I——"

The President: "Order! Order!" The matter must not be debated."

This closed the scene, and the work of deleting those sites which received no votes was proceeded with.

The result of the second ballot was awaited with interest, and when the President announced that Yass-Canberra had received 19 votes to Tumut's 17 there was an outburst of cheering from all parts of the House. The Senators who had fought valiantly for the selected site hurried over to the supporters of it in the House of Representatives and enthusiastically shook hands over the victory. A discordant note was sounded by one Labour man, who as he left the Chamber cried out: "It's all right; you've got to get it in the bill yet. We're not done yet."

JUBILATION AT YASS.

YASS, Friday.

Great excitement prevailed here to-day when the news arrived of the selection of the Yass-Canberra site by the Senate for the Federal capital. Bands played in the streets, and flags were hoisted on the principal buildings.

LATEST SNAKE STORIES.

PART GREATER THAN WHOLE.

PARKES, Friday.

A resident recently captured a ring snake, which was unusually sluggish in its movements (the species are generally particularly lively), and placed it in a jar of methylated spirits. The reptile thereupon disgorged a leaden-coloured snake slightly longer than itself, which had apparently been the cause of its slothfulness.

CAUGHT IN CANARY CAGE.

BATHURST, Friday.

Snakes are very plentiful in the district, the dry, hot weather being the cause. Within the past week two brown snakes 4ft long were killed in the town. One was killed on the footpath. Another was caught in a canary cage.

GUNDAGAI, Friday.

A number of snakes have been killed in the town in the last fortnight. A young girl, Millie Higgins, in the absence of her brother shot three which came to the homestead. A large snake was killed near the bar of the Royal Hotel, and another near the waterworks reservoir, to-day.

WILDS OF PAPUA.

MACKAY'S EXPLORING PARTY.

FIRED ON BY CANNIBALS.

NATIVE BEARER CAPTURED AND EATEN.

After a lapse of several weeks further news was received yesterday from Mr. Donald Mackay's exploring party, which is now penetrating the wilds of British Papua.

The despatches from which we quote were entrusted by Mr. Mackay to Mr. Bell, the Resident Magistrate at Orikolo, who accompanied the expedition up the Purari River, and who recently returned to his headquarters with the Government whaleboats. When Mr. Mackay wrote he was two miles beyond Barois village—140 miles up the Purari River, and one mile beyond Sir William M'Gregor's last camp.

OBSTACLES ENCOUNTERED.

The members of the expedition encountered many obstacles before they reached this spot, and to add to their troubles very great difficulty was experienced in securing supplies of sago, which forms the principal food of the black carriers. The intrepid explorers eventually succeeded in reaching the village, but only to find it deserted. The natives they found had abandoned it many months ago. This discovery came as a bitter disappointment, for it had been expected that ample food supplies would have been secured there, and much valuable information obtained respecting the character of the country beyond.

During the latter stage of the journey up the Purari River Mr. Donald Mackay writes: —"Heavy rain set in, and the river was in flood, the current running at the rate of seven miles an hour. Despite the fact that 12 oars and 14 paddles were kept going the boats at times were swept back like straws. Then it was a case of fastening ropes and dragging the boats by inches from the shore. In this way the distance covered was less than four miles a day, the party working nine hours."

Mr. Mackay says that even if reaching the Fly River is out of the question, the party hopes to do good work in a north-westerly direction, and may come down one of the many rivers that empty into the Gulf of Papua. If this course has to be taken it will be a great disappointment, for the explorers arrived at the village on the Purari after a big battle and many delays.

SHORTAGE OF FOOD SUPPLIES.

Owing to the scarcity of sago the members of the party were compelled to let the carriers eat 30 bags out of the 50 bags of rice which they had kept as a stand-by. No natives were met to help them with information, and the country ahead looked terribly mountainous and rough.

"It is a case of leaving the big lot here to make sago, and branching out to find a passable track, and also sago ahead," writes Mr. Mackay. If the expedition is unsuccessful in finding sago reaching the head of the Fly River will be out of the question. It was estimated that it would take 12cwt of sago to last the "boys" a week, and that, unless supplies could be found or natives met, within seven or 14 days from the time of writing, the party could not go on.

"If the worst comes to the worst we will inspect all the surrounding country as far as we can," Mr. Mackay says.

IN THE HANDS OF CANNIBALS.

Mr. Mackay reports that the general health of the party is good, and that they are having comparatively little trouble with the natives.

One "boy" received an arrow wound in the shoulder, and Mr. Mackay regrets very much the loss of one of the carriers.

Whilst out looking for bird specimens this "boy" got away from the other carriers, and although the party fired guns and lit fires that night, and spent all the next day looking for him, no trace was found.

It was concluded he had been eaten by the blacks who had fired at them on the previous day.

MARITAL COMPLICATIONS.

EXTRAORDINARY EVIDENCE.

A CHARGE OF BIGAMY.

Edwin William Parsons, 45, a tea-blender, was charged at the Water Police Court yesterday, before Mr. W. Clarke, D.S.M., with having committed bigamy by marrying Mary Jane Lahiff, at Newcastle, on February 24, 1902, while his wife, Matilda Ann Parsons, was still living. Evidence was given by a clerk in the Registrar-General's office, who produced a certificate of marriage between accused and Matilda Ann Sherwood, on June 8, 1887, and one between Parsons and Mary Jane Lahiff, dated February 24, 1902.

Matilda Jane Parsons deposed to having married accused 21 years ago at St. Barnabas' Church, York-street. Seven years ago accused sent her to England to look after his mother, after, as she alleged, having saturated her with poison. During the time she was in England she received no letters from accused, and returned to Australia in July last. During her absence she sent him about 30 letters. On arrival in Sydney she hunted for her husband, but could not find him, although she met a woman who passed as his wife. In cross-examination by Mr. J. W. Abigail, witness said that she was married to a Mr. Murrin at San Francisco, when she was 17 years of age, before she married the accused, but there was a divorce. She last saw Mr. Murrin a couple of months ago at the Queen's Hall, Sydney. While in London she accidentally met her first husband, who travelled to Australia by the same boat as she did—the Mariposa. She had never told anyone that she had married a man named De Sillebra at 'Frisco, nor had she ever lived with him. She left accused's mother because she threatened to poison witness.

A certificate of marriage with Murrin was produced, and what purported to be a decree of dissolution of the marriage was also handed to the presiding magistrate, and marked as an exhibit.

Accused, who said that he was not guilty, reserved his defence, and was committed for trial at the next Quarter Sessions.

ALL-RED CABLE.

SUGGESTED REDUCTION TO 1d A WORD.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

A deputation from the Australasian Press Conference waited upon the Prime Minister to-day to prefer a number of requests in connection with telegraph and cable services. The deputation asked that the Prime Minister would move in the direction of securing a cable rate to England of one penny per word and the establishment of an all-red cable route, instead of the 8000 miles of red cable now existing. A further request was that the charge for press telegrams should be reduced from 1s 6d to 6d per 100 words.

Mr. Deakin, in reply, said the Government would favourably consider the matter of reducing the cable rates; but it could hardly be expected that they would be cut down to 1d a word. Perhaps they might be brought down to 1s. Representations had been made to the representatives of the Cable Board, and he was hopeful for the future. With regard to the proposed reduction in press telegraph rates it had been shown that the service at present was not paying; and it would be a matter for careful consideration whether a reduction could be made in view of the statements made that the Australian services were amongst the cheapest in the world. At the same time he recognised that cheaper rates would be the means of more extensive dissemination of intelligence.

THE VICTORIAN MINISTRY.

MR. BOYD RESIGNS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Mr. J. A. Boyd, M.L.A., is relinquishing his position as honorary Minister in the State Cabinet because he does not approve of the policy of the new Government.

BROKEN HILL FIRES.

INSURANCE COMPANIES DECLINE RISKS.

BROKEN HILL, Friday.

A fire this afternoon destroyed a four-roomed house in Ryan-lane, owned and occupied by one Bowen. The building was insured in the Queensland Company for £400. Several insurance companies have decided to take no further risks in Broken Hill for the present.

BOY'S RECORD HIGH JUMP.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

At the Victorian schools championship sports meeting on the Melbourne Cricket Ground to-day, L. T. Woolley, of Brighton Grammar School, in the high jump cleared 4ft 11½in, which is the world's record for a boy under 14.

NEW ZEALAND'S TRUNK LINE.

WELLINGTON TO AUCKLAND.

AUCKLAND, Friday.

The formal opening of the main trunk line connecting Auckland with Wellington took place to-day, the event being celebrated to-night by a banquet at which speeches were delivered by Sir Joseph Ward, Mr. W. Hall Jones, and other representative New Zealanders.

FEDERAL SITUATION.

LABOUR-DEAKIN SPLIT.

ALL OVER BETWEEN THEM.

WAITING FOR THE NEXT MOVE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

In the House of Representatives this afternoon the alliance between the Labour party and the Deakin Government was declared at an end, and in the course of the next few days the Prime Minister will have to determine what course he will pursue.

Just as the House was about to adjourn Mr. Fisher (leader of the Labour party) rose and made the following statement:—I desire to intimate to the House and to the country what I have already intimated to the Prime Minister privately—that the Labour party can no longer support this Ministry. I can only say, in addition to what I have already stated, that our relationship has been personally most friendly; and although circumstances have been from time to time most embarrassing between the Government and ourselves, we have always endeavoured to co-operate in every possible way with it in matters which we thought concerned the welfare of the Commonwealth. There have been situations of embarrassment when, in my own case, I have taken every opportunity I could to safeguard the interests of the party and the welfare of the country to the best of my ability. And while I say at once that we have frequently felt the restraint that a large party like ours must feel in difficult situations, I personally have always held the view, occupying the position that we do, that we must treat any Government situated as this is in a perfectly straightforward manner. We take this course because it is the course of decency and order. (Labour applause.) The time must arrive when such actions might be taken by one of the other party which would create a crisis; and it would be right that the country should know exactly how the situation arose. For that reason I have endeavoured, to the best of my ability, to restrain any adverse criticism within certain reasonable bounds, and to safeguard the interests of the country particularly. Now that we can no longer do that I think I am performing a public duty and a party duty in telling the House the situation that has arisen. I have only to add that, during the previous crisis, I took certain action which was supported by the party. We felt that at least until the tariff was out of the way the public duty devolved upon this party to support in every reasonable position a Government and a party situated as this is. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Wilks (N.S.W.): Now it is somebody's show to move a vote of censure.

There was a long pause, and all eyes turned to Mr. Deakin. He presently came to the table, and said calmly:—"Does the hon. member propose to take any other step?"

Mr. Fisher hesitated a moment, and then leaning forward, said:—"No other."

Mr. Deakin, opening a volume of "Hansard," quoted extracts from his speeches in the censure motion debate, when he had said Mr. Fisher and his colleagues were absolutely free to take any course they thought fit in their relations with the Government. "They are free, and we are free," he said, and continued: —"There has never been any secret treaty article or agreement between us. I endorse the statement as to the relations which have existed between the two parties; and as to the attitude that is now adopted, it is perfectly within their rights, and so far beyond any challenge of mine."

The House then adjourned on Mr. Deakin's motion to the usual time on Tuesday.

AFTER THE DECLARATION.

MR. REID HASTILY DISAPPEARS.

The Prime Minister had probably expected that Mr. Fisher would move a direct motion of want of confidence. At least that was what he indicated when he rose to speak after Mr. Fisher. The latter, however, was compelled to alter his plans. His original intention was to prevent if possible a long debate by moving without notice by leave that the Ministry does not possess the confidence of this House. That could only have been done by the concurrence of every member, and Mr. Fisher consulted the leader of the Opposition, Mr. Reid, as to whether his party would raise any objection to the motion. Mr. Reid expressed the opinion that this course was somewhat dangerous, and Mr. Fisher thereupon decided to give notice of the withdrawal of the support of his party.

Mr. Deakin was disinclined to make any reply to the curious questioners who surrounded him, but passed a jest or two with Sir William Lyne, who didn't seem to have grasped the situation. "I've just been telling Fisher," said the Treasurer with a puzzled look, "that we expected him to finish up with a motion. That would have given us something to go on. I don't know yet what the Prime Minister will do." He then left for the garden party at Government House. Mr. Reid, the leader of the Opposition, disappeared almost as soon as the House rose.

The strain told upon Mr. Deakin last year when stung by a fierce attack from the Labour corner. He rose to throw off the yoke, and resign on the occasion of Mr. Webster's censure of the Postal Department, with a demand for a Royal Commission of Inquiry. Over-persuaded, however, he consented to withhold his intended resignation, and the appointment of the commission followed. The failure of the new protection scheme has rankled above anything else in the Labour mind. The Government's new scheme of new protection has met with prompt condemnation from the caucus. In addition, Sir William Lyne's assurances have not persuaded the caucus that his financing of the old-age pensions is satisfactory.

The floor of the House after the Speaker had departed presented an unusual sight. Members did not make for the doors, but crowded about the Ministers and the Labour leader to get some explanation. "What are you going to do next," was the question. But both Mr. Fisher and Mr. Deakin left the situation standing as it was. All Mr. Deakin would say was that a Cabinet meeting would be held to-morrow to consider matters.

WILL MR DEAKIN CONTINUE?

With this announcement of the withdrawal of support of the Labour party the Federal Government now stands a party of 15 in the House of Representatives, with an Opposition numbering 32, and a Labour party of 27. The Speaker makes the seventy-fifth member. In the Senate the Government strength is two Ministers and one supporter.

It is difficult to say what will be the outcome. It is hardly conceivable that Mr. Deakin will think of carrying on the Administration with his 14 men behind him. There are some bold enough to say that he will endeavour to do so by steering a course between the Labour party and the Opposition, relying upon their antagonism to keep him going.

Judging by what has gone by, the announcement may come after the Cabinet to-morrow that it has a policy to go on with. The general opinion, however is that Mr. Deakin will now look around him for prospects of an alliance of some sort. The divided state of the Opposition makes the proposition appear not too difficult. The barrier that separated Mr. Deakin from several anti-socialist members in the Opposition corner has now disappeared. Mr. Deakin's face may now be turned in that direction. He is unfortunate at the present moment in not having the services of Mr. Chapman—an excellent man in such negotiations. He is away recruiting his health. A union with some of the Victorians would possibly see Parliament over the five or six weeks that have to be covered to the recess.

Another possibility is a motion turning the Cabinet out. A caucus meeting is to be held on Tuesday.

MR. REID'S VIEWS.

Referring to the crisis to-night Mr. Reid said, "So far the situation is one between the Government and the Labour party, which has supported the Ministers so strongly, and upon whose will everyone knows the life of the Ministry has depended for the last three years and more. I believe that the first intention was to submit some motion to the House, but that intention, so far as we know, has been abandoned. Of course I am not in a position to make a statement absolutely about that. Only Mr. Fisher can say whether he is going to proceed or not. Probably it would have been more satisfactory for the House and the country if Mr. Fisher definitely stated what were the reasons which have led to these steps on the part of himself and his friends. Perhaps he will do that yet, but it is a most conspicuous feature of the present situation that the Labour party has given no reason whatever for its determination, which is. of course, a complete reversal of the relationship which has existed for three years, and enabled Mr. Deakin to administer public affairs for all that time."

SIR JOHN FORREST GLAD.

A CHANCE FOR GOOD GOVERNMENT.

Speaking at a meeting of the Women's National League at Euroa to-night, Sir John Forrest said that the decision of the Labour party would probably result in a change of Government in a few days, for big support was required from somewhere to keep Mr. Deakin in power. He had great sympathy with Mr. Deakin, but could not help regretting that he had placed himself in such a subservient position regarding Labour support, and was glad the end had come, not only for Mr. Deakin's reputation, but for the welfare of Australia, as good government could never be obtained under such unnatural conditions as had existed for some time. Those conditions were not even honest, and he rejoiced and thought everyone should rejoice that the end had come. A more healthy state of affairs would probably succeed it.

THE "ARGUS" ON THE SITUATION.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The "Argus," in the course of a leader to-morrow, will say:—

"In plain and unmistakable terms Mr. Deakin has been given 'notice to quit.' As Prime Minister he stands stripped and shivering without resource and without protection. The Labour party Opposition is against him; the Labour party is against him. For a 'party' he has a poor remnant of eight supporters, and of these Mr. Harper has been bound to the Ministry only by fiscal sympathies. With only these relics of a ragged regiment to give him aid, what position can Mr. Deakin occupy save one of utter helplessness and humiliation? If he does not voluntarily leave office, then the fate that awaits him is to be ejected. What feelings may be in his mind we do not know, but it is an unhappy situation for any man of proud spirit—to have eaten the food of contempt for years, and then, on the floor of the House, to find even this sustenance publicly refused to him. It was hardly candid for Mr. Deakin to say yesterday that there was no arrangement between the Ministry and the domineering party in the corner. If there were no arrangement, what was the meaning of Mr. Fisher's formal announcement that all was over between his party and the Ministry? Mr. Fisher was under no illusion in the matter, and neither was Mr. Deakin. We take leave to say, in spite of his disclaimer, there was a bond, and it has been snapped. The utmost casuistry could not conceal obvious facts.

"The front bench has been occupied by what has been previously described as a Ministry of caretakers. It was only by often contemptuous permission of the Labour party that the Ministry continued to live, and the humiliations which were heaped upon the Cabinet in this 'understanding' have lowered it hopelessly in public esteem. Now the Labour party says to its caretakers:—'We want you there no longer.' It has been a distressing history. No public man with anything like Mr. Deakin's gifts has ever drifted or been forced into such a position. The acquiescence of Mr. Deakin and his party in the conditions imposed upon them has had a deplorable effect upon the feeling of the people in relation to Commonwealth politics. Through the false relations that have been created the Federal Government has never had a fair trial. The electors who created the Commonwealth have not received the services they asked for. None of them are satisfied; many are disgusted.

"It is hard to realise that the scene of intrigue and shuffling is the great national Parliament of Australia. The national interests of the Commonwealth have been made the sport of political manoeuvring because the proper lines of party demarcation have been confused by Mr. Deakin's hopeless subservience to the Labour party; and while it may be too early to be certain of the consequences of Mr. Fisher's declaration in the House of Representatives yesterday afternoon, what is plain is that Mr. Deakin cannot remain in office with any honour. He has not been voted out, we are told, because it is desired to save the time of a debate of which the conclusion is certain. With this curt notice of dismissal handed to him he has no claim to hold the Prime Ministership another day."

A WHITE ATHERTON.

OUSTING THE CHINESE.

THEIR HOUSES BURNT.

ATHERTON (Q.), Friday.

The White Atherton Movement is beyond the control of the League Committee. The situation is grave. A secret committee is now organising a torchlight procession to Chinatown, and threatens to destroy it unless it is vacated within 24 hours.

Yesterday white men evicted Chinese from farms, and burnt 18 houses.

Feeling is intense. There is a growing desire to keep the cool, fertile highlands for white settlement.

Political barriers are broken, all people making common cause.

CYCLONE IN WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

DESTRUCTION AT PEAK HILL.

PERTH, Friday.

A heavy thunder and hail storm is reported as having occurred at Peak Hill. It was preceded by a duststorm of unprecedented violence. Trees were torn up by the roots, roofs were blown off and carried away, and a huge stack at the Peak Hill Co.'s battery, weighing several tons, was blown down. Jack Trigger, who was sitting on a bunk in his camp, was pinned down by a portion of the wall, and considerably bruised. Tanks were blown about like matchboxes. Hailstones as large as marbles pierced the roofs of the houses, and iron sheets were blown about and twisted like cardboard.

The cyclone swept over the town without warning. Quite a barricade of torn and twisted iron was lodged in front of the Warden's Court. The disturbance travelled in a north-westerly direction.

LOSS OF THE CENTENNIAL.

ROYAL COMMISSION ASKED FOR.

HOBART, Friday.

In the Assembly to-day Mr. Jensen moved for a Royal Commission of Inquiry into the loss of the Centennial in 1906, when on her way to New Zealand. He said the vessel was built of pine, had been several times seriously damaged, and was rotten. She was not properly examined as to the condition of her timbers, and she was fully insured. He said that in the cases of other vessels it had been proved that inspection at Launceston was not sufficient.

The debate was adjourned.

VICE-REGAL GARDEN PARTY.

ANOTHER BRILLIANT GATHERING.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Governor-General and Countess of Dudley entertained a large number of guests this afternoon at a garden party at Government House. Fine weather prevailed. Their Excellencies came on to the lawn shortly after half-past 3 o'clock, and as no official reception was held they chatted with their guests and made many new acquaintances. Later a move was made to the ballroom. Here afternoon tea was served at numbers of rose-decked tables, and a string band played in the balcony. Those who preferred to rest indoors found that the corridors and drawing-rooms were available, and in each case handsome decorations of ferns and palms were arranged together with quantities of roses. The general scheme of dressing was exceedingly good, and preference of the moment for soft and semi-transparent textures was evident. Another feature was the sudden popularity of white gowns, which in a few days have asserted themselves. The Countess of Dudley wore a gown of white handkerchief lawn, with inlettings of fine string-coloured lace on the skirt, together with small clusters of white embroidery. Her hat was a broad rimmed white chip, with a wreath of gardenias and foliage and a lace veil. She also wore three or four rows of splendid pearls, and an emerald and pearl ornament. The ladies Honour and Morvytu Ward, wore girlish frocks and white muslin and embroiderie lace, with pink sashes and lingeries hats. Lady Gibson Carmichael also wore a white lawn gown, with insertion of delicate embroidery and valenciennes lace. A touch of colour was given by her Chini silk sash. Her hat was of white straw, with long white plumes. Lady Chelmsford wore an ivory crepe gown made with a bolero coat, embroidered with a conventional pattern in glossy silk. Her skirt was ornamented with panels of the same needlework, and she wore a white hat covered with a mass of white flowers.

QUEENSLAND GOLD YIELD.

BRISBANE, Friday.

The gold yield for Queensland in October was 40,243 fine ounces, compared with 38,211 fine ounces for October of last year. The value of gold won was £17,942, an increase of £3207.

INDUSTRIAL UNREST.

A HOPEFUL OUTLOOK.

CONTRACTORS INTERVENE.

THE POLITICAL ASPECT.

MEETING AT THE PROTESTANT HALL.

The industrial outlook took on a more hopeful aspect yesterday. Members of the Public Works Contractors' Association placed a proposal before the Sydney Labour Council which it is hoped will lead to a settlement of the rockchoppers' strike. They propose to pay the fines of the men who have been imprisoned, provided the rockchoppers and sewer miners sign an agreement, to be registered in the Industrial Court, to maintain the working conditions which prevailed before the strike for a period of two years.

With a view to allowing matters to be adjusted on this basis, the strike prosecutions set down for yesterday were postponed. Matters are quiet at Broken Hill, where arrangements are proceeding for a conference on Tuesday between representatives of the Amalgamated Miners' Association and of the mine-owners.

Members of the Legislative Assembly ranged themselves into two well-defined parties yesterday regarding the dramatic incidents of Thursday night—those who supported the Government and those who supported the Opposition. Ministerialists without exception did not hesitate to express the opinion that the Premier had acted correctly in allowing the vote of censure, of which Mr. M'Gowen gave notice, to go on to the business paper in the ordinary way, or to accuse the Opposition of having deserted their duty simply to manufacture a little political capital. On the other hand Labourites and their sympathisers emphatically supported Mr. M'Gowen's view as to the ruthless manner in which the people's rights had been ignored, and the constitutional rights of members trampled under foot.

The action taken by the Opposition was discussed at a great meeting held last night at the Protestant Hall, and a resolution was unanimously carried,—"That, in the opinion of this meeting, the Premier's refusal to recognise the rights of the present Opposition is a deadly blow at Parliamentary government and an insult to the workers of this State."

STRIKE IN PARLIAMENT.

PUBLIC DEMONSTRATION.

ATTACK ON THE PREMIER.

PLACING THE RESPONSIBILITY.

SPEECH BY MR. M'GOWEN.

In point of numbers the meeting held at the Protestant Hall last night to endorse the action of Mr. M'Gowen and his colleagues in "refusing duty" at Thursday's sitting of the Legislative Assembly left nothing to be desired. Some 2000 persons were crowded into the building. Mr. M'Gowen and his colleagues went there in the role of plaintiff. They soon realised to a very large extent they were being tested by the meeting as defendants. They realised, too, that the Labour man who has the courage to give expression to opinions unpopular in Labour circles has the right of speech denied to him. In a speech of 50 minutes' duration, Mr. M'Gowen set himself to justify the withdrawal of his party from the Assembly. Explanatory references to the forms of Parliament and quotations of "Hansard" fell very flat, but there was a tremendous response when Mr. M'Gowen declared that rather than tolerate the indignities heaped upon them by Mr. Wade the Labour members would go back to their trade. The burden of his complaint was that there had never been an Opposition so unfortunately placed with regard to the newspaper press as the Labour opposition; that there had never been an Opposition so discourteously treated and ignored by a Premier; and that there had never been so unfair an interpretation of the standing orders as that which led to the resignation of Mr. Griffith, the member for Sturt. It was Mr. Wade who had caused all the trouble; it was Mr. Wade who stood with a bludgeon over men's heads to make them obey the law; and it was Mr. Wade who, in matters industrial, refused to show the moderation which in criminal matters was represented by the operation of the First Offenders Act. Mr. M'Gowen was nearing the end of his speech when Mr. Griffith entered the hall, and advanced amid a storm of enthusiasm to the platform. He was acclaimed a hero and martyr. But when Mr. Holman rose to move that the action of the Premier was a deadly blow at the rights of Parliamentary Government, and an insult to the workers of the State, there was a demonstration of a different kind. The hall rang with hoots and groans and abusive cries. Mr. Holman's friends—and they were in the majority—made a counter demonstration, and this was maintained more or less during the 15 minutes that Mr. Holman spoke. What he said could scarcely be heard beyond the front benches. Mr. Nielsen, Mr. Griffith, and Mr. Edden supported the resolution, which was carried unanimously amid great cheering. The meeting was presided over by Mr. F. Bryant, of the Sydney Labour Council.

THE SPEECHES.

Mr. McGowen, who was received with loud applause, stated that the Opposition (the Labour party) were suffering under an injustice at the hands of the Government and its majority in the House, an injustice, too, that was without precedent in the history of the British community, and self-governing people. They therefore felt it their bounden duty to come before the people, and state exactly the position that they had been placed in through no other fault than that they as an Opposition were Labour members. Whatever the verdict of the people might be, speaking for all his colleagues, he wished to say that, before they would tolerate the curtailment of free speech and unfair treatment in the Parliament of the country, they would go back to their trades. (Loud applause.) He did not wish to say anything of an inflammatory nature respecting things as they existed. The Opposition had been having an uphill fight. Many a time extremists had blamed them for not doing what they said they should do. He hoped to show how difficult it was for them to have done what they had.

A Voice: "You were forced to it," and other voices, "Chuck him out."

Mr. McGowen: Keep back your imputations, and give us credit for what we have done.

A voice: "You went to sleep."

Mr. McGowen: Every man can tame the wild horse except the man who has got it. Every man outside of Parliament feels he can do better than those in it, but, if he ever gets there, he finds he can do only the best he can under the circumstances that confront him. This was a grave constitutional question, with, he believed, only one precedent. The Opposition had decided, after trying other methods, to give notice of the vote of censure. The Opposition had been treated in a cavalier manner.

A Voice: Not so bad as you treated the tramway men.

Mr. M'Gowen: That is for the people to say. I wish to show how the Opposition is trampled under foot. Mr. Wade said he did not want to waste time, and that was his explanation for treating the motion in the way he did. That prejudice that was always over him against the Labour party blinded him as to the responsibilities of his position as Premier to the rights and privileges of the Opposition. The Opposition under the present state would rather go to the country than go back. (Loud applause.) "I am saying this," he added, "as a Labour man to the people of New South Wales who have made us an Opposition. I know the majority do not like us because we are Labour men. I know plenty of other powerful factors do not want us because we are Labour men. But, while we are there, we will maintain the rights and dignity of an Opposition. Mr. Wade was now trying to side-track the question. He wanted to make people believe that the Opposition left the Chamber because he would not adjourn." It had always been the usual custom for a Government to adjourn on receiving a notice of motion of censure from the leader of the Opposition. Instead of doing that, Mr. Wade showed that he was not going to let the matter be debated at all. The Premier did not recognise the constitutional right of a leader of the Opposition to special consideration; yet he made imputations against the Labour members.

Mr. M'Gowen explained that the Labour party still believed in the principle of arbitration as against strikes. (Cries of "Oh, ish.") The party entered Parliament with a view to having arbitration brought into existence for dealing with the question of wages and the employment of men. They had tried to make the law as it should be, but they were in a minority, and could not succeed. If the law was bad it would have to be amended by constitutional methods. Mr. Wade seemed determined that the industrial class would get no consolation from him. If Mr. Ashton were Premier or Sir Joseph Carruthers this trouble would never have occurred. It would never do in a British community to be continually holding a bludgeon over men's heads, and getting them, in that way, to obey the law. It required only the workers to be united to put an end to this state of affairs. Nothing stirred a man up so much as to threaten to bludgeon him into doing a certain thing. There was no consideration to the tramway men unless they went back.

A voice: Whose fault was it?

Mr. M'Gowen: Men guilty of a criminal offence could be treated as first offenders, but there was no re-employment for many of the tramway men. If the Premier only showed consideration or tact there would not be half the trouble there was. Mr. Griffith had refused to crawl to him. (Applause.)

"We have no hesitation in saying," concluded Mr. M'Gowen, "that this Government have trampled under foot the constitutional rights of the Opposition, and are doing it wholly and solely because we are Labour men." (Applause.)

MR. HOLMAN HOWLED DOWN.

Mr. Holman's contribution was less a speech in the surface meaning of the term than a disturbance. Several voices were going beside his. It soon became clear than an organised effort would be made by a strong section to suppress him altogether. Every time during the meeting reference was made to the deputy-leader of the Opposition or that gentleman identified himself with the Labour cause, a storm of hoots expressed the gratitude of the extremists. These were answered by cheers and counter cheers, so that at times brief pandemonium reigned, punctuated by the strenuous efforts of the chairman to secure a hearing. "Mr. Holman," said Mr. Bryant, "will move the resolution." Mr. Holman stepped to the front of the platform, pale but determined. Hoots and groans greeted him, which lasted for several minutes. During the uproar the chairman appealed for a fair hearing. At the same time a man in the audience came to the front.

The chairman: You cannot speak here; I'll have you put out.

The man leaned forward and applied an obscene epithet to the chairman before he withdrew.

The chairman (to the meeting): Hold hard; wait and listen. I said when I started the meeting that we would have fair play, and I mean to have it.

The noise then slackened, but Mr. Holman's first few sentences were inaudible to those any distance away from him, while an undercurrent of buzzing argument, freely sprinkled with interjections and rising at times into uproar, supplied an accompaniment to his speech. He said: "I've never been afraid to face a meeting of my fellow workers of New South Wales yet, and I am not afraid now. I take it as one of the highest compliments that can be paid a Labour man to be hooted down by those who attempt to split our ranks. I know there are men in the meeting who will not allow a speaker's voice to be drowned if he has the courage to tell certain gentlemen what he thinks of them. Hear my words, and disregard the malicious yapping of men who do not understand me or you. The resolution I have to move is,—'That, in the opinion of this meeting, the Premier's refusal to recognise the right of the Opposition is a deadly blow to Parliamentary government, and an insult to the workers of the State.' I desire to say a few words on the constitutional aspect of the present crisis. The Premier has brought forward the miserable plea of the urgency of public business. (Interruption.) The most important business Parliament has to deal with is to determine what men shall rule over the country. (Cries of 'What about the rockchoppers?' 'What about the tramway men?') No Premier has any right to remain in office unless he accepts any challenge put forward by the leader of the Opposition. No Premier has a right to assume that he has a majority. We make him Premier, and the Premier who refuses to test the matter forfeits his right to enjoy the position. We are here to consolidate the workers in protest against this interference with Parliamentary rights. I will ask my friends ('You haven't any') to bear with me while I put my own position as an individual apart from the party. I have tried to get our fellow-workers to respect the law—(hoots)—to trust their case to Parliament. I believe that through the law and Parliament is the way. If the power of Parliament is to be curtailed, and a Premier, drunken with the arrogance of office, and in four years' continuous success, thinks he can trample on the workers, he is by lawless acts driving them into lawless violence. If any man is doing his best to create lawlessness by tactless brutality, it is the Premier. A man who arouses the workers to irritation, and sends their leaders to gaol with every indignity, proves his unfitness to be leader of the Government. (Cheers.) The rules of Parliament prevented our leaders voicing the sentiments surging in their breast, and we walked into this hall, where a stupid minority would prevent us if they could. I am here as a champion of labour—(hoots and cheers)—to move this resolution. (Disturbance.) It asks you to endorse two statements. The first is that the action of the Premier is a deadly blow to Parliamentary government. Do you value Parliamentary government? (Cry of 'No.') In the next place the Premier's action is an insult to the workers of the State, the action of a man puffed up with the arrogance of class, and who treats the Opposition with contempt because it has sprung from the ranks. I ask you to repudiate his conduct, and declare it an attack on the rights of Parliamentary government and an insult to the workers of this State." (Prolonged hooting and cheering.)

SPEECHES IN SUPPORT.

Mr. Neilsen seconded the resolution. He wanted them to express the opinion whether they were to have in the Parliament of New South Wales free speech or coercion. (Cheers.) He asked the meeting to uphold free speech, not only in Parliament, but elsewhere. He was a unionist of 21 years' standing. He thought that that meeting had not treated Mr. Holman fairly. (Uproar.) Mr. Holman had been misunderstood by many men who should have been his friends. (Cheers and disorder). That meeting had not met to judge Mr. Holman, but to judge whether Mr. Wade should rule the Parliament of the country. They could never do anything while they were divided among themselves. (Cheers.) That great meeting brought together in so short a time proved that a very large number of them did not do their duty at the polls. If the workers put their shoulders to the wheel ever would go the whole show. (Cheers.) But the workers did not put their shoulders to the wheel. They were 80 per cent. of the population of the State. They had elected 32 Labour members to Parliament, but they had also elected 20 others, who told them that they were just as good as Labour members. Yet they did nothing but sit behind Mr. Wade, who had nothing but police for Broken Hill and gaol for the rockchoppers. (Great cheering.) The Labour party represented 250,000 people—over a quarter of a million electors of New South Wales—and surely these electors had some rights and privileges in Parliament. If he could not speak on the floor of the House, he would leave the job to find another. (Cheers.)

A voice: "Wipe out Parliament altogether."

Mr. Nielsen: Sooner than submit to the present action of the Government, which tried to close the mouths of the people; he would leave Parliament to-morrow. (Cheers.) He did not think there were many supporters of Wade here. (Voices: None.) They were not game to show their heads if they were. (Cheers.) The action of the Premier prevented the industrial troubles from being ventilated on the floor of the House. This great public protest showed that the people were not in favour of the coercing of one section of the workers and the gaoling of another. (Cheers.)

Mr. Griffith was received with great cheering. He said that the present industrial disturbance was not due to the action of the Government, but to the want of intelligence of the working men of this State, who would not vote. That was the reason for the present condition of things. Mr. Wade trampled on them in the House in the same way as the employers trampled on the workers outside. Mr. Wade was sure of the influence of the press, and with a certain sectarian organisation he was able to get sufficient working men to vote for him. The attitude of a large number of the working class was indicated by the attempt to howl down some of the speakers to-night. (Disorder and cheers.) [After the chairman had vainly shouted "Order" for some time] Mr. Griffith said that it had been stated that Mr. Wade had not many friends there, but every man who howled down a Labour man was a friend of Mr. Wade. (Cheers.) All that Mr. Wade prayed for, hoped for, and would pray for, was to get sufficient working men to vote for him so as to keep Mr. Wade in power for ever. (Cheers.) In Broken Hill Town Hall the workers would never try to howl down a Labour man—(hear, hear),—and the socialists of the Barrier were just as strong, just as true and courageous as here. (Cheers and disorder.) The only party that could redeem the country from the tyranny of the Employers' Federation and Mr. Wade was the Labour party. (Applause.) He urged the workers not to play the game on the other side. They had in days past been divided on the fiscal question, then on the sectarian question, and now he appealed to them not to be divided on an economic cry. The course they were adopting was the very course Mr. Wade would ask them to adopt. He was not even a member of Parliament now. (Laughter.) But he urged them to give a solid support to the Labour party, which was the only party able to throw Mr. Wade from his position, and put in his place a Government which would give justice to the workers. (Cheers.)

Mr. Edden also spoke in support of the resolution, which was carried unanimously amid great cheering.

THE BARRIER DISPUTE.

SITUATION MORE HOPEFUL.

CONFERENCE ON WEDNESDAY.

PROSPECTS OF SETTLEMENT.

BROKEN HILL, Friday.

The industrial position to-day is much more hopeful. Last night's effigy-burning acted as a vent for the discontent of a number, and to-day everything is quiet. The combined unions' delegates met last night and virtually made final the draft agreement to be presented to the managers next Wednesday. As the delegates are to have another meeting on Monday they decided at the last moment that details of the draft agreement should not be made public until after next Wednesday.

The agreement, however, is on the lines previously outlined. The men's claims as regards wages are not far away from those specified in the 1906 agreement, but a 44 hours' week is claimed. Messrs. Gamboni and Barnett, president and secretary of the A.M.A., had a long conference with Mr. Delprat, president of the Mining Managers' Association, this morning, on a side issue connected with the position. Subsequently they said that the position was very hopeful. The conference would be held as arranged, and they were looking forward to an amicable settlement of all differences. Of course the first meeting would do nothing. What might be roughly agreed to would have to be referred to the unions and to the mines' directors. Still, the outlook was as cheerful as could be expected.

A mass meeting of unionists will be held on Sunday, but it will be an organising meeting only. The matters of extra police and wages will not be discussed. A strong rumour was current last night and to-day that the Proprietary mine intended to close down to-morrow night as a sort of lock-out, but the manager, Mr. Delprat, says there is not an atom of truth in the rumour. It was freely stated to-day that the police endeavoured to stop last night's effigy-burning, but this is false. Superintendent Johnson simply advised the Mayor that he should stop the demonstration, as it was a most undignified proceeding. The Mayor, however, would not act, and the police simply played the part of spectators. Superintendent Johnson says "the crowd was certainly most orderly; we heard no bad language or threats of any kind. The men conducted themselves very good humouredly."

No official telegrams have passed to-day between Broken Hill and the Government in Sydney. The political aspect of the position has not yet been seriously approached. The action of the State and Federal Parliaments are merely watched and noted.

The combined unions want the Port Pirie branch of the A.M.A. represented at the coming conference. If this be allowed the men at Cockle Creek, Bellambi, Iron Knob, etc., should also be represented. Delegates from Port Pirie have been appointed and will probably be allowed to attend the conference.

"NO REDUCTION OF WAGES."

MANAGERS CONCILIATORY.

Mr. Delprat, general manager of the Proprietary mine, and the president of the Mining Managers' Association, told the deputation from the A.M.A. to-day (Messrs. Gamboni and Barnett) that though the managers could not meet the representatives of the Port Pirie workers in a general conference, the Proprietary Company (which was almost wholly concerned with Port Pirie) would hold a subsequent conference with the Port Pirie delegates.

He also stated that at the general conference the managers would make no proposal. All the proposals would come from the union delegates, and those would be considered fully.

This is freely accepted as proof that the managers and the companies will make no proposals for any reduction of wages.

THE ROCKCHOPPERS.

A BID FOR PEACE.

EMPLOYERS OFFER TO PAY FINES.

A meeting of the employers of rockchoppers was held last evening at the rooms of the Master Builders' Association, Castlereagh-street. The president of the Employers' Association (Mr. W. Gilliver) occupied the chair. The meeting, which was held with closed doors, lasted for two hours, and the situation was fully discussed in all its bearings. During the day the president and other members had been in communication with the Premier, and the result of their deliberations was stated to the meeting. Finally, the meeting decided to write the following letter to the Trades and Labour Council, with a view to bringing about a settlement:—

To the Secretary of the Trades and Labour Council.

Sir,—I have the honour to inform you that at a meeting held to-night it was resolved by the Public Works Contractors' Association of New South Wales, that its members are prepared to resume work on all their contracts employing rockchoppers and sewer miners, provided that the rockchoppers and sewer miners are prepared to sign an agreement to be registered with the Industrial Court to maintain the working conditions which prevailed before the strike for a period of two years.

To facilitate a settlement the Public Works Contractors' Association is prepared to pay the fines already imposed on the four men by the Industrial Court, and also to endeavour to have the pending prosecutions withdrawn. An early answer will be deemed a favour. On behalf of the association, William Gilliver, president.

THE PROSECUTIONS.

CASES POSTPONED.

HOPES OF A SETTLEMENT.

The Industrial Court was again crowded yesterday, when additional members of the Rockchoppers' Union were to be proceeded against under section 42a of the Industrial Disputes Act. All the seating accommodation of the court was taxed to its fullest extent, while in the precincts of the court were a large number of friends and sympathisers of the strikers. Several police officers were in attendance, but there was no attempt at a hostile demonstration. The crowd was quite good-humoured, several ladies in the gallery evidently enjoying the proceedings. Mr. Mant, of the Crown Law Office, appeared to prosecute, and Mr. Piddington, instructed by Messrs. Beeby and Moffitt, for the defence.

The case against John Morris was first called, but Mr. Mant made an application for an adjournment until 2.15, which was granted.

MINUTE BY THE PREMIER.

When the Court met Mr. Mant stated that he had received a minute from the Premier and Attorney-General, Mr. Wade, stating that the President and members of the executive of the Public Works Contractors' Association had waited upon him, and stated that they had strong hopes of a settlement of the rockchoppers' strike being effected in the course of the next few days, and that they feared that if the prosecutions set down for hearing to-day were proceeded with, the prospects of the men returning to work would be weakened. They, therefore, asked whether it would be practicable to adjourn the hearing of any further prosecutions until Tuesday or Wednesday next.

Under the circumstances it was very desirable that every opportunity should be given for a peaceful settlement of this question, and the Crown Prosecutor was instructed to ask for a postponement of these cases until Wednesday next.

Mr. Mant said he wished to afford every opportunity for a peaceful settlement of the trouble, and asked for an adjournment. He trusted the efforts of the Contractors' Association would succeed in putting an end to the present unhappy strike.

Mr. Piddington stated that he was ready and anxious for the case to go on, but he left the matter in his Honor's hands.

His Honor, in adjourning the further hearing of the case, said that as the application had been made, and not opposed, he would postpone the cases until Wednesday. He thought it desirable in cases of this kind to, if possible, have them settled peacefully. It was a very great relief for him to be relieved of the disagreeable duty of passing sentences, should the offences be proved.

The Court then adjourned.

PREMIER DEFENDS POSITION.

MR. M'GOWEN'S CHANCE ON TUESDAY.

Referring yesterday to the demonstration arranged by the Labour party for last night the Premier said the condemnation of the Government for infringing the Constitution and violating the rights of Parliament and the people formed a very attractive text, and he had no doubt many wild statements would be made about the rights of the people.

"It is a common practice," he said, "for every party in opposition to complain that the Government of the day exercises its powers of majority in a brutal manner, and tramples on the privileges of Parliament. But beyond this vague, general, petulant complaint by the Opposition, which cannot have its own way, what has occurred recently to justify the dramatic action of the Opposition during the last 24 hours? It has all arisen from the threatened motion of censure upon the Government for alleged inaction in amending the Industrial Disputes Act."

CENSURE MOTION ON TUESDAY.

Mr. Wade admitted that when a motion of this character was indicated it was in accordance with constitutional usage that the Government should not make use of its majority to prevent discussion; and he pointed out that no attempt has so far been made by the Government to prevent discussion. "Indeed," he added, "when Tuesday arrives Mr. M'Gowen will have every facility afforded him."

The Premier saw three possible points on which complaint might be alleged against the Government. The first was that the House was not given an opportunity of discussing the motion of censure on Thursday night. "There is nothing in that," he said, "because Mr. M'Gowen himself deliberately fixed Tuesday as the date." The Premier thought it might be gathered from published interviews with Mr. M'Gowen, Mr. Beeby, and other members of the Labour party, that there was a complaint because the Government declined to stop business and adjourn the House till Tuesday, and had therefore "trampled on the rights of the people." "One would think that the rights of the people demanded that whenever possible public business should be continued," the Premier commented, "and only under most grave circumstances could a cessation of work be justified. It is obvious that the Government must have a discretion in saying that it will not submit to a discontinuance of business for such a period as the Opposition may fix by giving notice of a vote of censure. There is abundant precedent, and it stands to reason, if the fixing of a censure motion for one day ahead necessitates the rising of Parliament, that the same delay would be secured by fixing the motion ten days ahead. Because I insisted on the time not being wasted I am accused of 'trampling on the rights of the Constitution.' If I have done wrong I have erred in excellent company, including Sir Henry Parkes, Mr. Reid, Mr. Barton, and Sir John See."

THE "VIOLATED" RIGHTS.

After all, the Premier said, the question of whether or not the House should adjourn is a very minor one. The importance constitutionally is that the motion should be discussed. "We now come to the third alternative"—he added—"whether any rights have been violated with regard to Tuesday. I may say that Tuesday has not yet been reached, and it is rather premature to say that a constitutional right has been refused. I certainly stated at the time that this would be regarded as an ordinary motion; it did not commend itself to me as being of sufficient importance to justify the House in adjourning. Mr. M'Gowen must have known that the actual control of business rests with the Government, and on other occasions when there has been the least doubt the question has always been put specifically to the Ministers whether they intended to block discussion or not. Mr. M'Gowen could have adopted that course on Thursday. Instead he ignored me as head of the Government, and put a question to the Speaker with regard to Tuesday's business, which he must have known the Speaker was not in a position to satisfactorily answer. When he failed to obtain the information he required he seems to have lost his head, and after an unworthy exhibition of anger left the Chamber.

"If he had put the question to me," Mr. Wade continued, "asking, in definite terms, if I was prepared to adjourn the House, I should have said 'No.' If he had further asked, 'Will you take this motion on Tuesday if I ask you?' he would have got the answer, 'Yes.'"

In the circumstances Mr. Wade did not hesitate to say that Mr. M'Gowen's "fustian and stage thunder" were decidedly premature.

MR. M'GOWEN AS HISTORY MAKER.

"When we come to deal with unconstitutional acts, perhaps Mr. M'Gowen will explain how it was that he and his party deserted their posts and left their constituents without representation," Mr. Wade suggested. "Such a thing has never been heard of in the history of Parliament. Over and over again the Government has refused to adjourn upon intimation of a motion of censure. The members of the Opposition protested, but they always stood to their posts. Mr. M'Gowen has established a precedent in allowing hot-headedness to override sense and duty to the Constitution. Assuming that the Government did wrong, the duty of the Opposition was to stay there and criticise it, and defend and uphold the rights of the Constitution, instead of bouncing out like a crowd of petulant schoolboys. Indeed, if his contention was correct, it was open for him then and there to have proved a direct censure on the Government for trampling on the Constitution. Why didn't he do it? I ask the public on a fair consideration of the facts to point out in what respect the rights of the people or Parliament or the Constitution have been invaded. To put the position in plain language, Mr. M'Gowen made a tactical blunder, and is now trying to cover his mistake by raising an entirely false issue."

THE GRIFFITH EPISODE.

HUMOUR MISTAKEN FOR DISCOURTESY.

Some remarks that have been dropped in connection with the resignation of Mr. A. Griffith indicated a feeling that the Government had been riding roughshod over the Opposition. The Premier held that the position was very simple. Mr. Griffith had imputed unfairness to the Speaker, and not a member who spoke attempted to justify the imputation. Mr. Griffith admitted he used the words, and therefore became liable to be judged guilty of contempt and punished accordingly. "The fact that I moved the motion dealing with Mr. Griffith was simply the result of my being leader of the Government," the Premier said, "and being the agent established by long usage for bringing the facts before the House. It was not a party action, but an obligation imposed upon the whole House and upon me as leader of the House to place the matter in concrete form for discussion. Had I not taken action I would have been liable to censure, and could not have complained if I had been removed from office. In other words, I would have committed an outrage on the Constitution if I had declined to take action by moving this motion." Mr. Wade repudiated the idea that the punishment imposed—suspension till Mr. Griffith apologised—was an attempt to ride roughshod over an individual member. Mr. Griffith could have apologised at once, and so have prevented the disfranchisement of his electorate. "Instead of doing that," Mr. Wade said, "he declined to retract in any way, and evidently hoped to make some capital against the Government by inducing the House to vote for his expulsion. This course I avoided taking, because thereby his constituents would inevitably have been disfranchised, at all events till election day; and when the minor form of punishment was chosen he, rather than take the course that must appeal to his better sense, and would have secured representation for his constituents, deliberately resigned and left them disfranchised for a considerable period. Well, who is to blame for that? Certainly it is not the Government, and certainly it is not myself individually.

MR. WADE'S UNAPPRECIATED JOKE.

"The only other occasion on which I have been accused of being discourteous was during the financial debate, when Mr. M'Gowen asked for some further time to enable him to prepare his speech in reply to Mr. Waddell. I consented, and in the innocence of my heart added by way of a joke that it was a fair request because it must be difficult to secure material. This remark seems to have stung Mr. M'Gowen to the quick, and he retorted that I was the most discourteous Premier he had ever known. I am afraid I am not a born humorist, and it is also clear that Mr. M'Gowen takes life too seriously. However, that is the type of incident Mr. M'Gowen makes use of to charge me with trampling on the rights of Parliament. Since then I have never presumed to attempt pleasantry with the leader of the Opposition, and I am afraid that my serious manner has filled him with a suspicion that I have ulterior designs on the Constitution. Perhaps the proximity of Guy Fawkes' Day and a revival of old associations may have filled him with an unusual desire to protect the Constitution."

MELBOURNE TRADES HALL ANGRY.

"BRUTAL CAPITALISTIC POWER."

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The executive of the Trades Hall Council recommended to the members at its meeting to-night the adoption of the following resolution:—"That this council expresses its indignation at the action of the Premier of New South Wales in despatching 50 police to Broken Hill at this juncture, and expresses the opinion that it is a wanton exhibition of brutal capitalistic power, and calculated to provoke and not to preserve the public peace; and that this council offers its sympathy to the miners of Broken Hill at the gross insult offered, which seeks to brand them as a lawless band of marauders, and trusts that they will take proper steps to adequately resent the insult."

The motion was unanimously agreed to without discussion.

THE FEDERAL ESTIMATES.

PASSED BY THE SENATE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Works Estimates were passed through the Senate to-day. The proposals of the Government for new works and buildings, as provided for in the Estimates, were submitted to the Senate in the form of a bill, which was passed through all stages in record time.

IRON BONUS BILL.

THE NEW SCHEDULE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Iron Bonus Bill passed through the House of Representatives to-day, the third reading being agreed to after recommittal in committee. The original schedule provided for payments with respect to the classes of products totalling £394,000 for various amounts each year up to 1913. The schedule was carried as follows:—

Class 1, pigiron made from Australian ore, puddled bar iron made from Australian pig, 12 per cent. per ton; total authorisation, £150,000.

Class 2, galvanised iron made from Australian ore, wire-netting and wire not being prison-made and being made from Australian ore from wire manufactured in the United Kingdom, iron and steel tubes or pipes (except riveted or cast) not more than 4 inches internal diameter, 10 per cent. on the value; total authorisation, £300,000. The first extends to 1904, and the other to 1912.

Class 3, providing for a bonus amounting to £4000 at the rate of £8 each for the manufacture of the first 500 reapers and binders, was withdrawn.

On the motion of the Treasurer a new clause was agreed to providing that the maximum amount payable in any one year under class 1 should be £30,000, provided that where the maximum amount was not payable in any one year the balance could be paid in the succeeding year, in addition to the amount payable in respect to the later year. Included in the amendment was a sub-clause providing that no bounty shall be paid to any State or to any authority constituted under the State. Sir William Lyne said that he did not propose to proceed with this. The bill included a provision that no bounty should be paid in respect to goods manufactured under contract which provided for the payment of bounty to persons other than manufacturers. That was all he required, as he had no objection to a State Government receiving a bounty.

Mr. T. Brown (N.S.W.): What will be the position of a State that embarks upon the development of iron ore deposits?

Sir William Lyne: A State will be in precisely the same position as an individual.

Sir John Forrest said that the Commonwealth might as well start to manufacture itself.

Sir William Lyne: I would have no objection to doing so.

Considerable debate took place on a Labour member's amendment under which persons who claim the bounty were bound to enter into a bond to hand over to the Government of the State in which the enterprise was conducted the land and property connected therewith upon demand by the Governor of the State within twelve months after the expiration of the bonus.

Mr. Groom said that legislation could not confer any power upon the Commonwealth which it did not now possess under the Constitution. As for the State, it had its rights under its general powers for acquisition to secure any property.

The amendment was negatived by 18 votes to 12, the minority consisting of Labour members.

QUEENSLAND.

PROPOSED NEW RAILWAYS.

BRISBANE, Friday.

Mr. Blackman has been appointed to continue the survey of the Tolga-Johnstone River route. A surveyor has been sent to make a trial survey of the proposed line from Roma to Yingerbay, about 40 miles.

IMPORTATION OF SWINE PROHIBITION.

An Order in Council is to be issued prohibiting the importation or introduction of any swine or carcase of swine, except in the form of bacon, hams, or dressed pork, from New South Wales, Victoria, South Australia, Tasmania, Western Australia, and the Dominion of New Zealand.

TASMANIA.

THE FINANCIAL PROBLEM.

HOBART, Friday.

The Treasurer introduced the Land and Income Taxes Bill in the Assembly yesterday. He said the general financial outlook of the State was not altogether promising, in view of the attitude of the Commonwealth Parliament, and he feared it would become imperative to raise more money in the State by direct taxation. In 1910 the Braddon clause would expire and leave the State at the mercy of the Commonwealth Parliament as regards return of Customs revenue. The last suggestion was to pay over to the States a lump sum, and after 25 years the Commonwealth Government to take the whole Customs revenue and shake hands with the States, wishing them "Good-bye; do the best you can for yourselves."

CYCLE RECORD BREAKING.

ALBURY, Friday.

J. Salvana, who desires to break the cycle record from Melbourne to Sydney, left Melbourne yesterday, and passed through early this morning. He hopes to reach Sydney at noon to-morrow.

SALVANA COLLAPSES.

GUNDAGAI, Friday.

Salvana, the cyclist who is attempting to break the record from Melbourne to Sydney, did not reach Gundagai. He was scheduled to arrive before noon. A couple of hours later the pacer who accompanied him rode into town with the news that Salvana had collapsed, owing to the intense heat, and was lying in the shade of a tree 20 miles out. He will be brought to town to-night.

ASSISTED IMMIGRATION.

GOVERNMENT POLICY CONDEMNED.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

The officers of the Colliery Employees' Federation committee of management have for a considerable time expressed themselves as opposed to the immigration policy of the Government, holding that there were enough unemployed already in the State. To-day a discussion took place in regard to the matter, and on the motion of the Ellermore Vale delegate the following resolution was agreed to:—"That we call the attention of the federation to the question of assisted immigration, and that a petition be prepared by the general secretary, to be signed by members of the federation, against the immigration policy of the Government."

A TASMANIAN MYSTERY.

FOUL PLAY SUSPECTED.

ZEEHAN, Friday.

The Heemskirk Mountain mystery has thickened with the discovery of the remains of the miner Edward Phillips yesterday in the scrub near the track from his camp to the old Cliff camp. The body, which was in a very decomposed state, death having probably taken place on the 24th ult., was brought into Zeehan, where Dr. Butler made a post-mortem examination. Deceased's skull was very badly fractured, and death was doubtless due to this. Phillips could not possibly have fallen and smashed his head on the spot where he was found, hence foul play is suspected.

CASUALTIES.

A WOMAN'S DEATH.

The death has been reported of Gertrude Moses, 30, a married woman, lately living apart from her husband, which occurred at the Coast Hospital, Little Bay, on Thursday evening last, from blood poisoning. From the police report it appears that deceased was taken ill at her residence in Ada-street, Ultimo, on October 15, and was attended by a neighbour. She did not improve, and was removed to the Women's Hospital, Paddington, where she was operated on. After this she improved and returned home. On October 28 she again became ill, and was removed to the Coast Hospital, where Dr. Wallace attended her until her death on Thursday last. An inquest will be held.

DEATH FROM SCALDS.

John Shaw Garrett, aged 2 years, died at his parents' residence, 154 Evans-street, Rozelle, on Thursday, from the effects of scalds, received on Sunday last. It appears that the child's father was sitting in the kitchen at his residence with an infant in his arms. His other son was playing on the floor. The baby caught hold of a gas ring, and upset a kettle of boiling water over his brother on the floor. The little boy was severely scalded, and Dr. Shirlow, who was called in, attended him until the child died. An inquest will be held.

WHARF-LABOURER BADLY INJURED.

Charles Fossberg, wharf-labourer, living in Pyrmont-street, Pyrmont, was brought yesterday by the Civil Ambulance to Sydney Hospital, where Dr. Collier admitted him, suffering from a fractured leg and skull. While he was working on board the steamer Suffolk, moored at Birt's wharf, Darling Island, some cargo which was being hoisted by means of a sling, caught in a hatch, which fell on him.

VICTORIAN RACING FESTIVAL.

(BY OUR SPECIAL REPORTER.)

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The spring reunion of the Victoria Racing Club will be brought to a conclusion at Flemington to-morrow, and the weather indications this evening foreshadow a very sultry day. The tracks are in splendid condition, and an interesting programme should furnish high-class sport.

Racing opens with the Spring Handicap, a race restricted to three-year-olds, and at the weights Vavasor, Demolition, Pendil, and Nushka seem to have the settlement of the question; while the numbers may be hoisted for Vavasor, Pendil, and Demolition.

A good race is promised for the Flemington Stakes among Apple Pie, Boniface, Imprint, and Teacosy; and the places may be occupied by Imprint, Boniface, and Apple Pie.

Post Town, King's Cross, Jack Smith, and Lady Diffidence, read as well as anything in the V.R.C. Handicap, and Post Town, Lady Diffidence, and King's Cross may pass the judge as named.

Pink 'Un, Iolaire, Peru, and Alawa should fight out the battle for the C. B. Fisher Plate, and the situations may go to Peru, Pink 'Un, and Iolaire.

Player, Pilot, and No Trouble may catch the judge's eye as written at the close of the Victoria Steeplechase.

The meeting winds up with the Final Handicap, in which the chances of Enchanteur, Verenice, Jack Smith, and Fiery Star seem most attractive, and honours may be divided among Enchanteur, Jack Smith, and Fiery Star.

Appended is the programme:—

NOTES.

The V.R.C. Committee met to-day to inquire, at the request of Mr. Nettlefold, one of the owners of Pink 'Un, into the running of the horse in the Melbourne Stakes last Saturday. After hearing the explanation of the jockey (F. Williams), who rode Pink 'Un in the race, and the statement of Mr. Nettlefold, the committee decided that sufficient facts had not been placed before them on which to take action.

The New Zealand gelding Soultline, who has performed so well at Randwick and Caulfield, will be offered for sale on Tuesday.

SHEARERS FINED.

NOTICE OF APPEAL GIVEN.

MOLONG, Friday.

The police magistrate, Mr. E. Marriott, gave his reserved decision to-day in the case of Jas. Lee and Co., Ltd., of Larras Lake station, again 27 shearers for having entered into a contract for shearing and leaving off work without reasonable cause.

In fining each defendant 10s, and costs of court, 6s, and 5s professional costs, the magistrate said in his opinion the sheep were not wet; nor did he consider the defendants had reasonable grounds to cease shearing.

Defendants' solicitor asked that the fines be not imposed for one month, as he intended to state a case for the Supreme Court on points raised previous to the hearing, the chief one being that the master in this case was a corporation, and proceedings could not be taken by a corporation under section 4 of the Masters and Servants Act since the passing of section 82 of the Justices Act.

The magistrate ordered that the fines must be paid by December 5, in default seven days' imprisonment.

FIRE ON A TUG STEAMER.

The M.F.B. received a call last evening to the railway wharf, Darling Harbour, to the steam tug Secret, on board which a lifeboat had caught fire, it is thought through a spark from the funnel. The flames were put out with a chemical extinguisher and buckets of water, but not before the lifeboat and its contents had been badly burned. The Secret is a wooden steamer of 42 tons, and belongs to Messrs. Joseph Stafford and James Neild. Mr. T. Stafford is the master.

FINANCIAL.

THROUGH MANUFACTURERS' SPECTACLES.

Mr. Ben H. Morgan, it will be remembered, recently visited Australia as a representative of the Manufacturers' Association of Great Britain for the purpose of spying out the land and discovering, if possible, some crack in the tariff wall that now surrounds the Commonwealth through which British goods might be conveniently squeezed. At a meeting of the Manufacturers' Association, held recently, Mr. Morgan gave an account of his stewardship. He stated that he had been cordially received by the State, Commonwealth, and Dominion Governments, who had furnished him with information of very great value to British manufacturers concerning local conditions, and particularly regarding Government contracts and purchases which would be made within the next two or three years. He was also supplied with much information by Chambers of Commerce and the leading importing houses with regard to the state of trade and foreign competition. He emphasised the value of the Australian market, which was one of increasing importance to Great Britain. In investigating the cause of the growth of foreign trade in these markets he discovered that the operations of the shipping ring or conference controlling all steamer freight from Great Britain was to a substantial extent responsible for the diversion of British trade. He found numerous cases where this ring was carrying German and American goods at much lower rates than British goods, the difference in some cases being as wide as £3 per ton. Mr. Morgan reported that he had also arranged with the Australian Government for the establishment in London of a showroom where samples and patterns of goods will be kept for which tenders will be invited from time to time from British firms.

COLONIAL EXCHANGE FOR LONDON.

A scheme is now being actively promoted in London for the opening of a Colonial Chamber of Commerce and Exchange, the primary object of which is to bring the commercial community of the British Empire closer together. The design is to acquire a large site in one of the best thoroughfares of the metropolis, and erect there a suitable building in which all the colonies would have offices and showrooms and a central meeting place for the transaction of business. The Chamber of Commerce would supplement the work of existing organisations and would be the medium for the discussion of questions affecting the Empire generally and for taking joint action on any matter affecting the welfare of important colonial trading and other interests. The "Financial Times" regards the scheme as certainly a good one, and, "provided it has behind it well-known representative men capable of making the Exchange a real centre of colonial opinion, would doubtless do much to bring the colonies in closer touch with each other and with the mother country."

STATE'S INCREASED EXPENDITURE.

By way of comment on the statement published in the financial columns of the "Herald" on Wednesday, the Treasurer, Mr. Waddell, says that as a matter of fact the expenditure of the State has during the first four months of the financial year exceeded the revenue by only £534,000. Moreover, a sum of £73,000 had during the period mentioned been set aside to establish a sinking fund under the Harbour Trust Act, and it has also to be borne in mind that during the early part of a financial year the expenditure was exceptionally heavy. It is true that the mere fact of expenditure having exceeded revenue during any particular portion of the financial year, especially the earlier portion, is not a matter of very much importance. This is of importance, however, that whereas expenditure on the departments has increased by £62,358, on business undertakings by £234,610 interest on the public debt by £40,289, out of public works account by £66,273, and on loan account by £219,667, there was at the same time a decrease in revenue of £219,765. Of course, later on there may be a little redressing of the position.

DALGETY'S DIVIDEND AND BONUS MAINTAINED.

The Sydney house of Dalgety and Co., Ltd., are advised by cable from their London office that the annual meeting of shareholders of the company is to be held on the 19th inst, when the directors purpose declaring a dividend of 3/ per share (at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum), making, with interim dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. already paid, 6 per cent. per annum for the 12 months to June 30 last. They also purpose declaring a bonus of 1 per cent. for the year ended June 30 last, absorbing £10,000. £35,000 has been added to the reserve fund, which now stands at £270,000, £30,000 has been written off premises, and £5000 has been added to the benevolent fund, which now stands at £15,000. The directors also propose carrying forward a balance of £70,311. Last year the dividend and bonus were the same, as also were the amounts added to reserve, written off premises account, and allotted to the benevolent fund, but the amount carried forward has been increased from £63,124 to £70,311.

LONDON FINANCIAL CABLE NEWS.

The resources of the Bank of England have undergone some little diminution during the week, and the proportion of reserves to liabilities has been reduced from 53.62 to 52.00 per cent. The bank's gold reserve is rather over half a million lower. Short call money has gone up ¼ of 1 per cent., while best three months' bills in the open market have hardened by 1-16 of 1 per cent. Money in Berlin is a shade firmer, while it is without alteration in Paris. Bradford tops are unchanged as to price, but the tone of the market is advised as being better. Damage to the Argentine wheat crops, which are usually harvested at about the same time as our own, has had the effect of hardening the wheat market at Mark Lane. This should be good news for our growers, for in the grain markets, as in other affairs of life, the losses of one are usually the gains of another. Metals have improved a shade, copper being 5/, tin £3, and spelter 2/6 per ton higher on the week.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

It is to be noted that legislation dealing with patents similar to that recently placed on the Statute Book in England is being introduced into New Zealand by the Dominion Government.

There is also a proposal that something of this kind in a modified form should become law in India.

A company was recently registered in London with a large capital to erect factories for foreign companies forced through the new law to establish themselves in the United Kingdom.

If each country insists upon the greater part of patented articles protected by them being manufactured within their own boundaries, the list of these articles must either materially increase or the value of patents diminish.

As a matter of fact, both these drawbacks are certain to ensue.

The counterbalancing advantage will be increased employment of labour in certain countries at the expense of employment in others.

The chairman of the Bank of Australasia recently directed attention to the fact of that institution having nearly £1,300,000 less invested at short call in London than was the case 12 months earlier. That, he said, need cause shareholders no anxiety. It merely meant that they had less money to lend in London and more to employ in Australia, where money was in good demand.

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

The features of the markets yesterday were the strength of woolpacks and the firmer tone of wheat. Buying orders, chiefly from another State, were sufficient to have lifted every bale off the market. The spot stocks are now very light, and those on the water are chiefly for two strong firms. Buyers were keen after wheat, and are offering an additional halfpenny on late rates. Holders, however, continued to hold off. Oils and metals were slow, although there seemed to be a little more movement in fencing wires. In the general produce markets weakness was apparent at the Redfern yards, although in Sussex-street some forage lines showed firmness. In the dairy and fruit sections quality was generally commanding satisfactory prices.

PLUMAGED BIRDS.

A proclamation has been issued under the Commerce Act, prohibiting the importation of the plumage and skins of non-edible birds. The prohibition against imports applies in cases where the exportation of such plumage or skins is prohibited in the countries in which the particular birds are indigenous, or have been acclimatised. The only exceptions consist in importations which have been contracted for before the proclamation was issued, or for bona-fide educational purposes. Nothing is as yet said about the export of skins and plumage, which in Northern Queensland and Papua particularly, amounts to something of a trade.

BUTTER AND CHEESE ANALYSIS.

The Minister directs that, in lieu of a formal copy of analyst's certificate, the State supervising officer may inform a manufacturer by letter of the result of analysis, drawing attention to the point that is desired to be emphasised. No fee need be charged. It is understood that this approval will be availed of only in cases where, in the opinion of the State supervising officer, the information is likely to be of educational value to the managers of butter or cheese factories. If any person desires a formal copy of the certificate of analysis, the fee prescribed by Reg. 38 (Commerce Regulations) is to be paid.

BREADSTUFFS.

The wheat market was more in sellers' favour, although very little selling was done. Buyers raised their limits in some cases to 4/3¾ for old wheat, and to 3/9 for early delivery new wheat. The offerings, however, continued very small.

Flour was nominally unchanged at £9/5/ and £9.

At Darling Harbour yesterday 204 tons of wheat and 83 tons of flour were manifested to arrive.

Teas.—The market was quieter. Exclusive of business pending private sales covered 150 Indians at /10½ and 100 Indians at /6 to /8.

Good sales were made of evaporated apricots, G grade at /10, peaches /11, pears /10½. Mildura muscatels sold at /11½ in 5lb, and in 2lb and /11½ in 1lb trays. Malaya muscatels sold at 1/1 in trays, and 1/0½ in boxes. Soft shelled almonds were worth /3¾ to /9, according to parcel. Jordan almonds were firm at 2/6. Barcelona nuts were worth /6¾, walnuts /6½. Brazil nuts sold at /11. Figs were in request, and business in 10doz. boxes were reported at 5/6 per dozen for same descriptions. Twenty-five gross of Chivers jelly crystals sold at 3/3. 50 cases Chiver's custard powder at 4/9. 500 cases gold medal milk sold during the week at unaltered rates. Australian-canned milk was in full supply, both from Mildura and Northern factories. Salmon was in request, and large deliveries were made from stocks just landed. Scroll went out at the unaltered rate of 9/9 talls, 10/ flats, 6/6 halves. Germa sold at 9/ talls, 9/6 flats, 6/ halves, and Monarch at 7/6 talls and 8/ flats. The market was almost bare of Kirink new supplies of which will be here next month. 100 cases of Tref. sardines sold at the new price of 6/3, but the convention price of 4/3 for halves was not obtainable, and one firm made sales at 3/9.

Oils.—The market was quiet, and without any substantial change. Thistle oil was quoted from Glasgow at 1/8¾ for raw, which is the same as last week. On spot B/S distributed at 3/2 and 3/4, /1 less being accepted for parcels; other brands /1 less in distributing lots and parcels respectively. Fish, whale, and vegetable oils were only in moderate request at late rates. Champion's whitelead was quoted at £30 and £30/10/ for cwt. and quarters respectively, Johnson's £29 in cwts. Private advices from London note the belief in certain trade quarters there that piglead was likely to rise. The belief was based on the fact that some of the wealthier firms were buying largely and storing. Three tons Lysaght's red seal zinc sold at £28.

The British Imperial Oil Co., Ltd., quote Silverlight kerosene, f.o.b. Sydney or Newcastle, /9½ per gallon. Also landed ex steamer Elax:—Shell benzine, packed in two 4-gallon tins to a case, 1/2¼; Shell naphtha, packed in two 4-gallon tins to a case, 1/5¼; Shell motor car spirit, packed in two 4-gallon tins to a case, 1/5¼; Shell motor car spirit, packed in four 2-gallon tins to a case, 1/6½. Oval Gorwon wire had considerable sales in the various sizes at list prices. Demand for netting was reported somewhat better from the districts in which the shearing had been concluded. Business was done in Federation A.W.U. and Whitecross A 42 x 1¼ x 17, at £28/10/, and 36 x 1¼ x 18 B.W.U., at £16. Sales of locally-manufactured wire showed a further falling off during the week. The distribution for that period was reported as follow:—18 miles 42 x 1¼ x 17, A, £32; 25 miles 42 x 1¼ x 17, B, £29/10/; 15 miles 42 x 1¼ x 18, £23/15/; 8 miles 36 x 1¼ x 18, £20/10/; 7 miles 36 x 1¼ x 17, B, £22/5/; 10 miles 36 x 1¼ x 18, £16/15/. Iowa barbed wire was quoted at £14/15/ and £15/15/, according to gauge. Lysaght's local barbed Iowa pattern sold at £14 and £15/5/, 40 tons being placed during the week at those prices, together with 10 tons 12 and 14 gauge; special barbed at £14 and £18/10/.

Jute.—Woolpacks sold at the improved price of 2/9. There are understood to be very few now on spot, and of 250 bales for Sydney on the boats now on the water a considerable proportion have been sold to arrive. Sacks attracted very little attention. Old standards were from 7/3; new standards were quoted 4/11 spot, and 4/10½ to arrive. Bran bags sold at 4/2. Another jute firm has to be added to the list of business failures. At a meeting of creditors of Scarlett and Co., indentors, etc., of Market-street, Melbourne, which was held this week, Mr. A. Harvey, presiding, it was decided that the estate should be assigned, and Mr. W. H. Tuckett was appointed trustee. The total liabilities were stated to be, approximately, £21,769, and the deficiency was estimated at about £4152. The firm's embarrassment is understood to have been occasioned partly by losses in the shape of bad debts and depreciation of stocks in transit. General regret is expressed in trade circles at the firm's position.

At Darling Harbour yesterday 8958 bales of wool were manifested to arrive.

The revenue collected at the Customs-house yesterday totalled £23,758.

LONDON MARKET CABLES.

WHEAT.

LONDON, Nov. 6.

Further reports of damage to the Argentine crops have had the effect of stiffening the wheat markets. Speculators are maintaining prices. Cargoes on passage are firmly held, 38/5 being bid for steamer loading. Australian on spot is unchanged.

The flour market is quiet, Australian patents being quoted at 25/6 to 26/6 per sack in London, while 28/ is asked in Glasgow for October-November shipment.

BUTTER.

The butter market is dull. Danish is quoted at 127/ to 128/—a fall of 3/ during the week. There is less demand for colonial, owing to retailers raising the price to /13 per lb, which is causing consumers to buy shilling mixtures. Quotations are nominally unchanged, but the tendency is easier.

INTERSTATE MARKETS.

ADELAIDE, Friday.

Wheat was unaltered to-day; fair business done on the basis of 3/9½ for old, and 3/9 for new. Flour was unaltered. There is inquiry for pollard for Queensland, but owing to the new steamship rates local millers are unable to do business. Prices are unaltered at 1/. Bran is quoted at /11½.

Eggs came back to /8 to-day. Butter was unaltered at /11 to /11½.

New potatoes were worth 9/ to 10/ cwt.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Old wheat continues irregular. There were sales for early delivery for shipment at 4/0½ ex store and 4/0¼ alongside the ship, but for sales to millers it is necessary to accept lower prices. New crop wheat was steady for direct country purchasers on the basis of 3/8¾; large sized parcels were quoted up to 3/9. L. and Co.'s linseed oil were sold.

PRODUCE MARKETS.

TRADE IN SUSSEX-STREET.

The scarcity of chaff was the main topic among agents in Sussex-street. The light importations which have been coming to hand lately have now been snapped up, owing to the improvement in the demand since the beginning of the month. Even the stocks of medium and inferior cuts which had been dragging were now showing lightness in supply. The inquiry was still for good qualities, and agents were confident that at present if choice green samples were offering up to £8 could be received for them. The Winfield arrived late on Thursday night from Adelaide with 10,000 bags of Adelaide cuts, but she was not expected to unload until time for Tuesday's market. The Westralia was due last night with a small cargo of only 600 bags from New Zealand. Agents anticipated a very firm price for oaten chaff on account of this second small shipment. The operations on the maize market were quiet. For prime well-formed yellow grain retailers were still forced to pay 4/9, while anything a little inferior sold at /1 less. The millers were inquiring more after white grain, and for the best offering 4/10 was received, while the other quality sold firm at 4/9. Tasmanian potatoes were hard to sell, and holders were anxious to get rid of their stocks. The values were weak at Thursday's reduced prices. The 500 bags of Clarence River potatoes were marketed, and the best of the consignment moved off satisfactorily at £7. Some of the very small sorts were hard to quit. At the Hunter River wharf about 200 bales of lucerne were unloaded. Although the market was still weak prices were not materially altered. Oats were slow of sale. Oaten hay was quiet, and could be had at £7/10/. All the Melbourne onions were now off the market.

DAIRY PRODUCE.

Owing to Monday next being a public holiday the grocers operated with freedom in dairy produce. There was an improvement in the egg market. Retailers bought more readily than during the earlier part of the week. Close on 400 cases of Northern river eggs were marketed, and sales were fairly satisfactory at /9½, while for a few of the choice Clarence River lines an extra /0¼ was paid. Southerns and railways mainly brought /10, although an occasional long-distance case of railways sold at a trifle less. New-laid quitted on a level with yesterday's price. Agents were anxious to get clear of stocks, and did not hold out very strongly for prices. Bacon was a little more plentiful, and moved off well at firm prices. Well-set cheese had a good demand, but soft and inferior makes were hanging. The local demand for butter showed an improvement. Supplies were still heavy, but the market was steady at current values. Lard was quiet.

FIREWOOD.

At auction 30 truckloads of firewood were offered. As the supply was a slight larger than that of the last few days a slight reduction was noted.

The following prices were realised:—

AUCTION SALES.

All commodities were sold at weaker prices at the produce sale held in the railway goods shed on Friday morning. A large number of buyers were in attendance, but competition was particularly slack. Forty-seven truckloads of mixed produce were submitted to buyers' approval, and 24 sales were effected. The offerings were made up in the following manner:—Chaff 11, lucerne hay 15, derrick straw 2, wheaten hay 1, maize 13, oats 1, wheat 2, potatoes 1, Swede turnips 1. A large supply of chaff was forward, and agents were compelled to accept weaker prices for their supplies. Choice new season's cuts realised 7/6, and good old from 6/ to 6/5 per cwt. Lucerne hay was particularly hard to dispose of, despite the fact that auctioneers were willing to meet the market, and sell at cheaper rates. Prime large bales moved off at from 2/11 to 3/1, choice small bales at 4/9, and medium quality hay at 3/ per cwt. Two truckloads of derrick straw were also put under the hammer, but as bidding failed to reach the reserves, both were passed in for private dealings. A small consignment of prime wheaten sheaves was sold at 4/7 per cwt. Thirteen truckloads of maize were forward in time for yesterday's sales, and six sales were effected, at prices ranging which showed a slight decline on Thursday's rates. Prime dry yellow Queensland grain changed hand at 4/7¾ and 4/8, medium at 4/6, inferior 2/11 per cwt. A small consignment of oats was also offered, but failed to meet with buyers' approval. Small consignments of new season's Circular Head potatoes are being placed on the market, and are meeting with a fair amount of attention. Apples were meeting a strong demand at current prices. Pineapples were plentiful, a fair amount coming to hand from Fiji. Prices still showed weakness. North Queensland tomatoes arrived in bad condition, and were difficult of sale. Supplies from Brisbane sold satisfactorily at late rates. Bananas moved off readily at firm prices.

Lemons were scarce, and meeting with a particularly keen demand, despite the fact that agents were demanding advanced prices for their supplies. Loquats are now practically finished, although a few boxes are coming down at long intervals. Choice coloured passionfruit are hard to procure, and are moving off steadily at advanced rates. Bananas were selling steadily at firm prices. A small consignment of choice North Queensland watermelons were placed on the market, and were eagerly snapped up at the high price of 15/ per dozen. STOCK TRUCKINGS.

For the sale of November 9 445 sheep vans and 80 cattle waggons, and for that of November 12 580 sheep vans and 155 cattle waggons have been ordered. Order books are closed for cattle waggons up to and including the market of January 4, no dates being available for sheep vans.

CITY YARDS.

There were 276 pigs yarded at the week-end auction sale. Porkers formed the bulk of the offerings, while baconers were in rather light supply. Buyers were in their usual attendance, and their competition in the porker section was keen, causing values for this class to improve slightly on last day's rates. The demand for bacon pigs was dull, and prices showed no material alteration.

The following prices were realised:—

Backfatters, to £5/15/, good and heavy £3 to £5/10/, medium £4 to £5, inferior and light from £3; baconers, 65/ to 72/, good 60/ to 65/, medium 50/ to 60/, inferior and light from 42/; porkers, 32/ to 37/, good 27/ to 32/, prime light 22/ to 27/, inferior and light from 14/.

MINING.

THE SHARE MARKET.

The fact that private cables showed a further advance of 2/ in the price of lead, and a substantial increase in copper of 15/, making it £62/17/6 per ton, was all in favour of the depression of the last few weeks lifting from the market, but the strike spectre stalking behind the unrest at Broken Hill, as well as the announcement of the imminence of war on the Continent, tended to counteract the improved tone expected to be imparted to the English and American stock exchanges consequent on the result of the American Presidential election. Were it not for the Broken Hill trouble and the war cloud, there was every prospect of the London and Australian stock exchanges becoming active once more; but it was checked by the cable received during the day.

It was clearly seen from private cables that English speculation in Broken Hill silver shares is also being hampered by the prospect of labour troubles on the Barrier. It was also apparent that speculators are turning their attention from silver to gold shares, whilst even the advance in the price of copper does not seem to have strengthened copper stocks so far.

The principal feature in the market during the morning was the amount and character of the business recorded in copper shares. The demand for scrip improved, with the result that sales were booked at advanced rates in Mount Molloys, O.K. Copper, Mungana, Queen Bee, Chillagoe (contg), MacGregors, and Kyloe Copper, whilst Wallaroo and Moonta and Mount Lyells held firm. The only weakness was shown by Mount Morgans, possibly on account of the unfortunate accident at the mine.

In the case of silver shares business was restricted to Broken Hill Junction North at 21/3 and 21/, a drop of 1/ on the previously recorded sale, and B.H. Souths, contg, at 63/, a similar decline. Other stocks were quoted wide. Both gold and tin shares were exceedingly quiet.

Business "tailed off" considerably during the afternoon, especially in copper stocks, whilst both silver and gold shares were again quiet.

MINING NOTES.

The ore returns of the North Mount Farrell Company (Tasmania) for the week ended Oct. 31 was 18 tons of firsts and 44 tons of seconds. The mill treated 448 tons, for a return of 49 tons of concentrates. The marketable ore produced was 67 tons.

Charters Towers Crushings.—Brilliant Extended, 4416 tons, value £10,781; Kelly's, 271 tons, value £697. The East Oriental has declared a dividend of 3d per share, payable on the 10th inst.

The No. 4 level (530ft below the collar of the new main shaft of the B. H. South Blocks Company) has intersected the lode 72ft from the shaft. The first assays gave 18.4 per cent. of lead, 3.4oz silver, and 11.6 per cent. zinc.

London quotations, dated November 5, received by the Broken Hill Proprietary, gave the following buying quotations:—Silver, 1/10 15-16; lead, £13/12/6; company's shares, 38/; and spelter, £20/2/6.

At the Ivanhoe mine, Western Australia, the new main shaft has been sunk to 375ft. Water is coming into the shaft from the south-west corner. No 6 level stope, the north end winze, has been sunk to a depth of 61½ft, and ore is showing on all sides, one sample from the face carrying 2.2 per cent.

A cable from the manager of the Tongkah Harbour tin mine, at Pukel, dated November 3, states:—"Dredging operations for October: Assembled a crew on October 8 and started on October 9; worked 14 days 10 hours. Lost four days doing repairs, and three Sundays. Output, 275 piculs, equal to 16 tons 5cwt of tin oxide."

The following notifications have been filed with the Registrar-General:—At a general meeting of the Argentine Mining Company, No Liability, held on October 29, it was resolved that the company be wound up, and that John Norman Hay be appointed liquidator. At a general meeting of the shareholders of the Bredbo Copper, Silver, and Lead Mining Company, No Liability, it was resolved that the company be wound up, and that John Norman Hay be appointed liquidator.

Private cables state that amongst the shares quoted on the London Stock Exchange on Thursday were the following:—B.H. Block 10, b 57/6; B.H. Proprietary, s 38/9; B.H. South, paid, s 73/6; B.H. South Blocks, b 21/9; B.H. North, b 53/3; Mount Lyell, b 35/6; Briseis, b 8/3; Boulder Main Reef, b 7/6; Chaffers, 7/9 (m); Boulder Perseverance, b 7/3; Great Fingalls, b 15/6; Oroya, b 14/; Associateds, 26/3. Lead was quoted at £13/13/6, a rise of 2/; whilst copper rose 12/6, to £62/17/6. The market opened weak, but improved considerably at the close.

Last month the mill of the Harden Gold Mine crushed 1024 tons, yielding bullion to the value of £2925 18s 8d. There were cyanided 740 tons of sands, yielding bullion to the value of £362 11s 10d. Also 502 tons slimes, for bullion valued at £172 13s 9d. There were sold 26.2 tons of concentrates, realising net £830 11s 5d. The total revenue was £4292 1s 8d, and the expenditure (including a dividend of £1250) £3541 16s 6d. The general manager (Mr. A. W. Freeman), writes:—"The increased revenue of the last three months is chiefly due to the consistently high value of the ore won from the stopes in the eastern section of the mine. It is also gratifying to be able to report that both in width and value, these stopes show a decided improvement, so that although they have been drawn on extensively during the past four months, it is estimated that they still contain a tonnage greater than was indicated at the end of June last."

The flow of water and gas previously reported in the Lobbs Hole Copper Mine, eased off early last month, and have since given no trouble. The crosscut for the main vein, at a depth of 200ft in the shaft, is in 20ft. At 15ft in a small vein, carrying copper pyrites and quartz, about 5 inches, was passed through, but otherwise the rock is hard and dry. The underlay of the main lode is so irregular that it is difficult to estimate how far the crosscut will extend before meeting it, but the distance should not exceed 40ft. Owing to the water cut in the main shaft draining the No. 1 level, it was considered that the main vein had altered its underlay, and entered the shaft, but later work has proved this not to be the case, and the connection, if any, must be below the present depth. A few men have again been employed in the stopes above No. 1 level, and 55 tons of ore, assaying 17 per cent., have been sent to the roast heaps.

The operations of the Kyloe Copper for the week ended Oct. 31 show that the mine continues to develop satisfactorily. The east vein shows 27in wide in the shaft, and in cutting hitches for the timber another 9in were exposed, without reaching the western wall. This may mean that the east vein has junctioned with the main lode, but it will be impossible to prove it until opening out at the 300ft level. Samples taken from the hitches gave:—North hitch, 7.1 per cent.; south hitch, 20.6 per cent. The ore raised for the week was 16 tons, assaying 11.6 per cent. At No. 2 level the south drive on the main lode was extended 11ft, a total of 290ft from the main shaft. The lode in the face is 6in wide, assaying 5 per cent. Some 19 tons of 4 per cent. ore were raised. The No. 1 south winze is 48ft. The first-grade ore is 12in wide, the balance of the winze being second grade, without touching the west wall. The ore raised was 12 tons, assaying 22.3 per cent. and 15 tons 7.9 per cent. In the No. 3 south winze, at 36ft, the first-grade ore is 30in wide. The second grade is not opened the full width. The ore raised was 18 tons; assay, 24.1 per cent., and 8 tons, assay 11.1 per cent. The furnace smelted 58 tons of ore, producing 22 tons 6cwt of matte, containing 12 tons 4cwt 2qrs of copper.

YERRANDERIE SILVER FIELD.

YERRANDERIE, Friday.

The application for further suspension of labour conditions on the Burragorang Silver Mine, Yerranderie, was refused by the warden of the district. The secretary of the local branch of the A.M.A. opposed the application.

The rush to the Kowmong has practically subsided. The fossickers who went there by the dozen do not report even paying working expenses. The Prince of Wales Company has taken over the land from which the specimens were drawn which caused the rush. The prospector, Braithwaite, having sold his interest, the legal proceedings in regard to the land ended in favour of the Prince of Wales Company.

PENSHURST TRAIN SERVICE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I notice in the "Sydney Morning Herald" of the 30th ult. a complaint of Alderman Johns to the Kogarah Council about boys and their conduct in the smoking car of the 5.42 train; also the overcrowding of this particular train. Then, again, in your issue of the 31st, appears the result of a request made by the Rockdale Council to the Railway Commissioners for increased first-class accommodation on the 5.28 train. In reference to these complaints, I may say that I travel on these trains, and also the later trains on the same line, and I fail to see why these two trains should be picked out as special grievances. The alderman in question has evidently studied this particular train and overlooked the others, especially the 5.58 train, on which he will find circumstances and conditions to equal the 5.42. As regards the request of the Rockdale Council for extra first-class accommodation, I think the request would have met with greater public approval had it been made for increased train service, especially beyond Hurstville. It is not in the first-class carriages where seating accommodation will not be found, but it is on the platforms and in the second-class cars, where working men and women have to stand, at the risk of their lives, after doing their hard day's work. Surely a word can be spared for the second-class when a request is made for extra accommodation, especially when it is the workman's ticket and the second-class passengers that make the passenger service pay as well as it does. In conclusion, I hope that if the Railway Commissioners think the suburbs beyond Hurstville do not require a better train service, they will at least give the public a chance to leave Sydney with the comfort of a seat, which we (as well as first-class) pay for.

I am, etc.,

WORKMAN.

SPORTING.

THE TURF.

The Nyngan Amalgamated Jockey Club's meeting, to be held on December 26, and the Coraki Jockey Club's meeting, to be held on January 1 and 2, have been registered by the A.J.C.

The following scratchings were yesterday recorded in connection with the Rosehill Club's King's Birthday meeting:—Dundas Handicap: Lady Russalf and Empirical; Flying Welter: Empirical and Paddy Whack; Rosehill Handicap: Epola.

Entries for the Maitland races, on the Rutherford course, on Nov. 18, close on Wednesday. The prize money totals £175, spread over five events.

A programme of pony and galloway racing will be the attraction at Victoria Park on Monday. The track is in first-class going, and as large entries have been received interesting sport should result. The chief event will be the Victoria Park Purse and Plate of £160, run in two divisions. A special feature of the afternoon's amusement will be the performance by the Kilties' Band, which will be stationed on the lawn.

Entries close on Tuesday for the five events to be run at the Wollongong Jockey Club's summer meeting on the 17th inst.

Entries for the Moorefield races on November 28 must be lodged with Mr. John Jolly before 4 p.m. on Nov. 16. The sum of £450 is available in prize money, of which the Moorefield Handicap takes £100.

Mr. S. G. Scott's ch c by Gossoon (imp.),—Moonray—which has been entered for the Moorefield meeting—has been named Herr Mond.

At the last meeting of the Lithgow Jockey Club a letter was received from the A.J.C. granting permission for the registration of race meetings if a proprietary club was established. The meeting, acting on this information, decided to form a proprietary club, with a capital of £1000, 200 shares at £5 each. The object of the club will be to establish an up-to-date racecourse, with all conveniences for the public.

It has been decided to hold a race meeting at Gilgandra on Boxing Day, when £67 will be distributed in prizes.

ROSEHILL RACING CLUB.

KING'S BIRTHDAY MEETING.

The Rosehill Racing Club will open its King's Birthday Meeting to-day, when a well varied programme of six events will be disposed of. The scratchings have been few, and good racing should be witnessed. The track is reported to be in excellent going. Special attention has been paid to the lawns and flower beds, and there are at present an abundance of blooms. The course is therefore looking at its best. The management has made due provision in the catering and other departments for the requirements of a large assemblage, while the Clyde Works' Brass Band will be stationed on the lawn. The transit arrangements include special trains leaving the Central railway station at 11.50 a.m. (horses and attendants), 12.18, 12.49, 12.52, 12.57, 1.2, 1.8, 1.21, and 1.42 p.m., and the first race is timed to start at 2 p.m. Proceedings open with the Dundas Handicap, in which the prospects of Malteur, Black Mark, and Simora seem the brightest, and they may pass the judge as named. A large field is sure to face the starter for the Granville Stakes, and Mariee, Carl Zena, Bushgrove, Marcotini, and Ulmus should have the settlement of the question, and the judge may declare for Marcotini, Bushgrove, and Carl Zena. Dowlingstown, Sunday, and Mordialloc may get home in that order in the Jumpers' Flat Race. Gold Pan, Reflect, War Bee, and Smart should fight out the finish of the Flying Welter Handicap; while the situations may be filled by the firstnamed three. Contango, Abandoned, Trajectory, and Miss Noble should have most to say at the finish of the Rosehill Handicap, and the places may be occupied by Contango, Abandoned, and Miss Noble. The afternoon's racing winds up with the Club Handicap, which promises to attract a large field, and the chances of Florance, Exnul, Malteur, and Ulmus seem the most attractive; while Florance, Exnul, and Malteur may get home in that order. SAILING.

ROYAL SYDNEY YACHT SQUADRON.

BEAUCHAMP CUP.

The first "outside" race will take place this afternoon under the auspices of the Royal Sydney Yacht Squadron. The contest is for the Beauchamp Cup, presented by Earl Beauchamp. The trophy has to be won three times to become a member's property absolutely. Of the present entrants only Mr. Brockhoff and Mr. Saxton have already a win to their credit. The race is to be sailed under the new international scale of time allowance, which takes into account the strength of the wind. It is worthy of note that 15 knots is called a strong breeze by the Y.R.A. tables. This is only about the strength of an ordinary north-easter.

The entries, rating, and time allowance for light, medium, and heavy weather are given:—Thelma, 12 metres, C. Lloyd Jones, scratch, scratch, scratch; Rawhiti, 11 metres, C. T. Brockhoff, 3m 56s, 4m 30s, 6m 3s; Awanui, 10 metres, 8m 6s, 10m 30s, 14m 24s; Petrel, 8.8 metres, C. Trebeck, 13m 45s, 1am 36s, 25m 49s; Meteor, 8.6 metres, C. Kirrett, 15m, 20m 6s, 27m 5s. The points gained in this event count towards the championship. The course is from the club house, in Neutral Bay, down to and round a mark about one mile off Coogee, thence back round Shark Island to starting point. The club prizes are £7, £5, and £1. The race starts at 2 p.m.

SYDNEY AMATEUR CLUB.

Eight boats have been nominated for the Sydney Amateur Club's race this afternoon, under "sealed handicap" conditions. This event will form the first item on the programme in connection with the week-end camp, which has been arranged at the instance of the commodore (Mr. H. Walters). A start is to be made from the Orient buoy, Neutral Bay, at about 3.30 p.m., and the boats will race down to North Harbour, where the camping ground has been selected. The entries are as follows:—Brothers (T. R. Dibbel), Olive (H. Walters), Winifred (E. H. Dodds), Gilleena (L. Patrick), Doreen (J. Walters), Marguerita (W. Witten), Merlin (J. Wilson), and Dawn (O. Backhouse). Arrangements have been made to hold a smoke concert at the "Pirates" Camp this evening, when the prizes, which have been presented by the commodore, will be handed over.

SYDNEY FLYING SQUADRON.

With a general handicap and an entry of 10 boats, the Flying Squadron will fill the bill this afternoon as far as the "best and best" open boats are concerned. The club steamer Keroe is advertised to follow the racing as usual, and in view of the splendid contests which the popular 18-footers have been providing of late there will doubtless be another big attendance of patrons.

Entries, etc., are: First heat: Eileen (W. Dunn), scr; Zena (W. J. Hobson), ½m; Crescent VII. (C. Dunn), ½m; Scot (P. Cowie), 1m; Lilian (G. Dennis), 1m; Donnelly (G. Holmes), 1¼m; Zanita (T. The usual three-mile triangular course, starting and finishing at Clark Island, will be sailed for prizes of £2 and £1, in the heats, and £6, £2, and £1 in the final.

INTERSTATE CRICKET.

VICTORIA v SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

ADELAIDE, Friday.

The match South Australia v Victoria begins at noon to-morrow, and the general interest aroused by the growing strength of the local eleven indicates that the attendance will be an improvement on those of recent years. The weather forecast is a showery change with fresh southerly winds. The final selection of the Victorian team will be made to-morrow. Following are the teams:—

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

Hill	Pellew	Chamberlain
Claxton	Hewer	Woodforde
Gehrs	O'Connor	Whitty
Mayne	Hill	Emerg., Jenkins.

VICTORIA.

Armstrong	Saunders	Collins
Laver	O. Warne	M'Kenzie
M'Alister	Carroll	Horan.
Ransford	Hastings	Emerg., Vernon.

A good deal of attention is being paid to diving. Since Lieutenant Damant was placed at the head of the diving department and a proper system instituted in place of the rather haphazard arrangements that used to exist, more official interest than ever has been shown in this subject. Only the other week the authorities decreed who should and who should not be allowed to join the diving branch. Fat men were tabooed, and although this restriction provoked some hilarity, it was a sensible enough one. Now it is announced from Whitehall that improvements are to be made in all diving gear. These alterations are too numerous to specify, but they are all made with the object of lessening the risks which divers must necessarily run.

AMUSEMENTS.

MR. HARRY RICKARDS' RETURN.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Rickards, Mr. Edward Mass (manager) and Mrs. Mass, and Miss Madge Rickards have returned from half-a-year's stay in England, during which the actor-manager made important engagements for his circuit of Australian theatres, extending up to 1910. When seen in his own room at the Tivoli last night, looking all the better for the long sea-voyage, Mr. Rickards remarked that he had had a busy time, and had secured a long list of attractions, of which he would only name the more important. Taking those artists who would arrive here first, he would mention that he had left the Two Belles (artists who were with the Eight Primroses four years ago) at Perth, where also Mr. Charles Fanning (the comedian) and Mr. J. W. Winton had also disembarked. That popular ventriloquist had lately terminated a long engagement in London at the Alhambra. November bookings would also include Guest and Nolan, leading comedians from the London halls, and one of the most expensive turns, running into £120 a week, would be "Amelia, Leonora, and Christofolo," Continental lady-dancers and pantomimists, famed for their talents and good looks. In December Ambersusta and Fred. Haynes would arrive. They were star coon impersonators, and the lady carried out her act without paying the least attention to her partner, who was supposed to be an aged negro trying to sell oysters. It was as funny as anything he had seen for years. Then the Scotch Meisters were coming back—or rather, the comedian of the party, M'Kinnon, would return, but the others would all be new.

"As often as possible," continued Mr. Rickards, "I get down to Westwood, my pretty farm in the Isle of Thanet, between Margate and Ramsgate, where my wife and self entertained a number of people, one of whom was Mr. Paul Cinquevalli. This enabled me to close protracted negotiations with this greatest of living jugglers, and he will arrive here in January. Since his first visit to Australia five years ago Mr. Cinquevalli has starred continuously in London, New York, and the capitals of Europe. Another engagement of magnitude is Ching Ling Soo, the Chinese magician. I saw him at the London Hippodrome, boiling dead ducks and rabbits in a cauldron of water, and bringing them out alive, and despaired of getting him. However, my old friends, Sir Edward Moss and Mr. Oswald Stoll, rearranged some dates for me, and the great man will open here in February. These two engagements are the most costly I have undertaken. At the Oxford Music Hall Little Tich saw us in a box, and joined our party, but his enormous terms for another flying visit this way will require more thinking over, and nothing was settled. I saw Marie Lloyd and Alec. Hurley drawing all the town, and both eager for a trip. All these big artists like Australia, but they like a big salary as well, so in this case also I left the final settlement for next May, when I shall once more visit the Big Smoke. You will be interested to learn that I have engaged the brilliant Australian contralto, Alice Hollander. I went down to hear her at Manchester, and found her very popular and in great voice, and, just now she is in London at the Tivoli. She has had a classic concert career in London, and in musical comedy at the Strand and Hicks' Theatres. Mr. Kurkampf, musical conductor and singer, will also be back again next year. Another favourite returning here will be Tom Wootwell, whom you will remember as one of the comedians in my pantomime at the Sydney Theatre Royal with Addie Conyers as Jack the Giant-Killer, and Geo. Lanri, the Haytors, and others, in a strong cast. Fred. Graham and Dent will return next January, as well as Lawson and Manlow (comedians), and a curious and exciting turn will be provided by Yeotha and Captain Grade. Yeotha is a Red Indian Squaw, and the latter is a Scout, and they contribute a marvellous shooting act with bows and arrows and other native weapons. Yes, I have a long list of artists to whom I need not now refer, but in spite of that I shall keep to my new plan of spending half the year at Canonbury, Darling Point, and half at Westwood, Kent. Indeed, I leave for the latter in April, as in no other way can I keep perfectly in touch with the ever-changing developments of the variety world in London, Paris, Berlin, and New York."

Mr. Rickards arrived back just in time to observe the effect of an important structural improvement to the Tivoli, carried out by Mr. J. C. Leete at his request during his absence. This consists of a second sliding roof (in addition to the one in the dome) over the back of the family circle, whereby the patrons of that part of the house will now enjoy one of the coolest portions of it. The entire work was successfully executed by the stage staff, under the superintendence of Mr. T. Reed.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

"The Merry Widow" is still drawing great audiences at Her Majesty's Theatre. Many people are now paying a second and third visit to this beautifully staged opera, in order to see Miss Betty Ohl's vivacious, yet refined, impersonation of the name-part, whilst Miss Florence Young, Messrs. Andrew Higginson, Reginald Roberts, W. S. Percy, and Victor Gouriet are all well placed. There will be a holiday matinee on Monday instead of on Wednesday. On the holiday the plan will be at the theatre, as notified.

THEATRE ROYAL.

This evening Mr. J. C. Williamson will produce David Belasco's popular play "The Girl from the Golden West" at the Theatre Royal, for the last 12 nights of the present dramatic season. Miss Tittell Brune will be seen in the name-part, with Mr. Thomas Kingston as the mysterious Dick Johnson, the stranger who turns out to be "Ramerrez, the road agent." A long list of characters will show the citizens and boys of the Ridge at a Californian mining camp, in 1849-50, with glimpses of wild doings in the "Polka Saloon," and beautiful views of Cloudy Mountain, and dawn on the boundless prairies of the West. The new play, which is by David Belasco, enjoyed a run of about two years in New York, and has attracted favourable attention throughout the States. There will be a special holiday matinee on Monday.

CRITERION THEATRE.

The National Opera Company will open its new season of favourite English operas at the Criterion Theatre to-night, with "Maritana," which has not been elaborately staged with a first-rate cast for some years past. Mr. John Wren's new combination was formed by Mr. George Musgrove, in England, and was joined on this side by Miss Rosina Buckmann, who will sing the name-part to-night, whilst Mr. Wilson Pembroke (whose career is described in our "Music and Drama" column) will be principal tenor, and a long list of artists will include Miss Tessa Byrne, Mr. MacNaughton Duncan, Mr. G. H. Snazelle, and Mr. Alf. Stevens. Mr. Clement Locknane will direct the music, and Mr. John Wallace the stage.

PALACE THEATRE.

The last six nights of Messrs. Meynell and Gunn's dramatic season are announced at the Palace Theatre, with "A Miner's Trust," a new Australian play, which has been staged with unusual care and success by Mr. John Gunn. The prologue to Mr. Jo. Smith's stirring story, with the murderous climax, followed by picturesque scenes that include an exciting shipwreck, will doubtless ensure large audiences. There is to be a final holiday matinee on Monday.

THE "PRINCE CHAP" SEASON.

"The Prince Chap," a new comedy drama, by E. H. Peple, in which Mr. H. R. Roberts appeared at the London Criterion Theatre after an American tour, will reintroduce that favourite actor at the Palace Theatre next Saturday, after an absence of nine years. The difficulties met with by Mr. Allen Hamilton in securing a theatre in Sydney have delayed this production, so that Mr. Roberts' season here completes half a year's successful tour with "The Prince Chap" throughout Australasia. Mr. Roberts brings with him three artists from American, who were in the cast there, namely, Mr. Frank Lamb and Misses Mary Keogh and Justina Wayne, while Mr. A. E. Greenaway will also be in the cast. The plan will open at Elvy's on Tuesday, at popular prices.

THE MARGARET ANGLIN SEASON.

Miss Margaret Anglin successfully opened her season in Adelaide last Saturday with "The Thief," and is now appearing in "The Taming of the Shrew," with which her Sydney season is to open, at the Theatre Royal, on November 21. Mr. Louis Nethersole, who represents the American star during her tour under the J. C. Williamson management, writes that as Katherine and Viola Miss Anglin made her triumphs in Melbourne, and these Shakespearian comedies will accordingly both be staged in Sydney before she sails on December 18, for a holiday in Egypt, prior to her final to New York.

THE COMING OF OSCAR ASCHE.

The coming of Oscar Asche, the Australian actor, who has for several years past directed [illegible] in London, which was announced in our Music and Drama column last week, as probable next year, has now been confirmed by cables to Messrs. At 2.30 this afternoon, and at their evening concert at the Town Hall, the Cherniavskis will make their farewell appearances in this city prior to their final departure for Queensland and Brisbane, and thence to continue their tour of the world under Mr. Edward Branscombe's direction. CHURCH BAZAAR AT CREMORNE.

There has been of late a growing settlement at Cremorne, which occupies a rather isolated position, having no means of communication other than by the Mosman ferry. Although Cremorne is within the electorate of Middle Harbour, and forms the entrance to the popular suburb of Mosman, it is included within the Borough of North Sydney. Its nearest Anglican Church is St. Augustine's, Neutral Bay, of which the Rev. G. North-Ash is rector. The residents find it very inconvenient to have their parish church so far removed from their centre, and as a result a movement has been initiated to erect a place of worship. Already many subscriptions have been made and promised, and a suitable area of land selected upon which it is proposed to erect a church hall.

To augment the funds of a bazaar was opened yesterday in the grounds of Mr. J. B. Clamp's residence, Cremorne, by Mrs. Arthur. The committee of ladies controlling the function consisted of Mrs. North-Ash (president), Mesdames Meade, Clamp, C. P. Smith, Pinnock, M'Causland, and Yeomans, with Mrs. C. H. Bertie as hon. secretary. A capital band added to the enjoyment of visitors, and a concert in the evening was much appreciated. The bazaar remains open to-day and this evening.

THE MOREE FIRE.

OPENING THE SAFES.

MOREE, Friday.

A bank inspector and extra clerk arrived to-day from Sydney to assist the Commercial Bank's staff. An extra hand also arrived to help the Bank of New South Wales. A locksmith also came. It will be necessary to force open two of the Commercial Bank's safes from the back, the locks refusing to act.

Messages of condolence have reached the manager and staff of both banks from all parts of the State. Leading business-houses offered the use of counters and other furniture.

The second safe of the Commercial Bank has just been forced open. All the contents are seriously damaged, the deeds being half-scorched and shrivelled. Paper documents are black, illegible, and burned through in many cases.

The manager of the Commercial Bank is a severe loser. All his wedding presents, clothing, and furniture were lost. The Commercial Bank opened to-day temporarily in the council-chambers.

Following the Commercial Bank fire the third safe was forced open. The notes were found to be slightly discoloured, also the gold and silver. Only the edges of the documents were scorched and discoloured. The papers and documents of the second safe were not nearly so badly damaged as at first reported. The wrappers and edges were only more or less blackened or scorched.

BILLIARDS.

CHAMPIONSHIP OF AUSTRALIA.

LINDRUM v MEMMOTT.

The match of 14,000 for the Australian championship and £100 a side was continued at Messrs. Heiron and Smith's rooms, Castlereagh-street, yesterday afternoon and evening, when there were again excellent houses. Lindrum has so widened the gap between the scores that if ever there were a certainty for one man in a billiard match it is in this contest.

When the afternoon session began Lindrum was in play with 81, and the score stood at 5089 to Memmott's 2613. The coming champion at once struck form, and went on with his unfinished break until he had reached 217. Memmott was a little less inconsistent than he has hitherto been, for he six times got beyond the twenties—not much for him, but something, in view of the very poor form he has been showing during the present contest. Lindrum's best after his 217 was 96. His other efforts were 25, 30, 29, 35, 33, 50, 58, 45, and 42 unfinished. Memmott, 62, 31, 30, 29, 25, and 39. The scores were:—Lindrum, 5725 to 2905.

EVENING SESSION.

In the evening each man made a break of 135 before retirement was necessary. Lindrum was consistent. Twice only did he fail to score. His first effort worth talking about was 54, which he followed up with 97, and his third big innings was the 135. At this stage Lindrum was double his opponent's score, but Memmott saved that indignity by also getting 135. Both breaks were delightfully executed. Memmott thereafter could do no better than 28. Lindrum's rest were 25, 57, 67, 56, 34, 60, and 29 unfinished. The scores were:—Lindrum, 6360; Memmott, 3218.

The game will be resumed this evening at 8 o'clock. There will be no play this afternoon.

The match is being played on a standard table specially erected by Messrs. Heiron and Smith.

AIKEN'S GREAT FINISH.

As most people anticipated, the professional billiard season has opened in lively fashion (remarks a London contemporary of September 26). All records have been broken for the time of the year in the way of attendances at Thurston's Grand Hall, Leicester-square, where those very excellent players, Diggle and Harverson, are playing a match of 16,000 points up. In the provinces, and mainly with a northerly tendency, most of the other leading lights of the cue are busily engaged. The supplementary provincial competition promoted by Messrs. Burroughes and Watts is well under way, and creating an added feeling of interest in that hardy annual, the London tournament. If the breaks already made are any token of what is to come, there is a distinct probability of some very exceptional efforts occurring between now and next May. Beyond question, there is a general levelling-up in the respective standards of ability possessed by the leading players. The very best are not so far ahead of the second-raters as they were.

No more extraordinary game has been known in strictly-competitive billiards than that decided last week at Southampton, in which Stevenson, at scratch, attempted to concede the Scottish champion, Aiken, a start of 2500 in 10,000 up. This was the opening heat in the Burroughes and Watts provincial tournament. As is characteristic with him, Stevenson made a splendid beginning, and he drew very close to his man when matters had only reached the half-way stage. Here, however, Aiken found his form, and to the finish the Scot played exceedingly well. Yet his case appeared a hopeless one on the last day, when Stevenson, playing better than at any time before, drew nearly 700 points ahead with an unfinished break of 551. The scratch man seemed bound to win, as he only required some 800 points, while Aiken was 1515 away from the winning total. In a memorable struggle Stevenson, losing the run of the balls, was caught and beaten by 280 points, Aiken playing the game of his life, and reeling out break after break with the precision of a machine.

SHORTAGE OF TRUCKS.

COOTAMUNDRA, Friday.

The annual meeting of the Agricultural Association was held on Thursday night. The following resolution was carried unanimously.—"That this meeting expresses its disapproval and want of confidence in the Government and Railway Commissioners for continual delay in supplying sufficient stock trucks on the railways, with the result that severe losses are being sustained by primary producers of the State." Members spoke in strong terms of the shortage of trucks, and it was resolved to forward the above motion to the Premier and to kindred associations in the south.

I.W.W.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—As your journal has given circulation to a statement concernin the above club emanating from Mr. W. A. Holman, M.L.A., we respectfully ask you to publish the following unqualified repudiation of every charge contained therein as false and malicious.

Says Mr. Holman: "The whole trouble (the rockchoppers' strike) is due to two or three men belonging to the I.W.W. who are pursuing the regular policy of the I.W.W. regardless of consequences, and upborne by the belief that ultimately that policy will be justified." Which in plain English means that the I.W.W. is a Jesuitical body, who believe that the end justifies the means used to attain it, and who believe in doing evil that good may come. The statement quoted may stand as a good epitome of his whole speech, the meaning of which is clearly this—that the two or three men alluded to, acting under instructions from the said club, originated the present strike, and are now engaged in fomenting it still under instructions, and that this is the club's "regular policy." We are instructed by the club to give a complete denial to every word of this, and to inform your readers that no member of the club has had either first or last anything to do with this strike, and that none of those who have mixed themselves up in this rockchoppers' strike are members of the Industrial Workers of the World Club.

The I.W.W. is not an industrial union; it is only a club of advocates of revolutionary unionism, engaged in planting and propagating its principles and methods in Australia, with the view to its establishment in the near future. The club is doing so in a lawful and proper manner; and whether we have derived our ideas from "a few Continental books," or whether we brought those ideas into the world with us, as Mr. Holman—who claims to be original—seems to have done, is beside the point. But are they true? We say they are. The club has a policy; it is neither Jesuitical nor anarchistic, but order in its most up-to-date form. That policy can be seen in its preamble which we are openly scattering throughout every part of Australasia, and in which it is clearly to be seen that our policy is not to promote strikes, but to abolish them by abolishing the system of production for profit and setting up an organised co-operative system of production for use by calling on the working class, which is the only power capable of inaugurating such a system to form itself into one union, with the motto, "An injury to one is an injury to all," to be divided into a number of industrial departments, according to closely related industries, with the view of carrying on production when the political might of labour, assisted by all other decent persons, shall have decreed the present system illegal. In the meantime the Industrial Union will conduct the struggle which the present system creates, and which we know "must" go on while the system lasts in a way that will yield the best results to labour possible under the system, and maintain what is already won. Therefore we are totally opposed to craft unionism, which divides the working class against itself, and our policy is to discourage all action on craft-union lines. Therefore for the I.W.W. Club to create a craft-union strike and foment such would be to act in direct opposition to our declared principles. Nevertheless, recognising that every struggle for justice on the part of the workers is right, even if their methods be like that of blind men, we declare that every time any section of them is fighting the common foe all our sympathy is with them, and all the help we can give, consistent with our principles, is theirs. In conclusion, we repeat that the I.W.W. has nothing whatever to do with the rockchoppers' strike.

We are, etc.,
THE I.W.W. EXECUTIVE,
J. F. NEILL, Secretary.

Nov. 5.

Mr. Paul Taylor, the magistrate at Marylebone, dismissed a charge of assault against a railway passenger who had pushed a man out of a full carriage at Bishop's-road Station. "If the conductors of trains fail in their duty of preventing the overcrowding of carriages," he said, "passengers are entitled to act for themselves."

MELBOURNE EXPRESS.

ALTERED CONDITIONS FROM TO-MORROW.

From to-morrow the improved arrangements in connection with the running of the Sydney-Melbourne express train service are to be brought into operation. The public will have the advantage of two trains, with enlarged accommodation. The first train will leave at 7.25 p.m. and convey sleeping and sitting passengers for stations where timed to stop, and also pick up intermediate passengers travelling to the southern capital. The through train will leave at 8 p.m., and will provide for first-class passengers going right through to Melbourne, making no intermediate stops for traffic on the New South Wales side. The latest type of sleeping carriages will be utilised, for which naturally berths require to be booked, but in addition, as the train is a "limited" one, and only provides a certain amount of accommodation, other passengers will also require to book in advance, a nominal charge of 1s being made, and the seat will be reserved to Albury. The practice is one that is usually adopted by railway companies in regard to fast limited expresses. On the return from Melbourne the "limited" express will leave at 5 p.m., arriving in Sydney at 10.5 a.m. next day. It will only stop for locomotive purposes, and at Moss Vale for breakfast. The ordinary train will leave the southern city at 4.10, passengers landing in Sydney at 10.55 a.m., the extra time being allowed for the intermediate stoppages, etc.

MARINE COOKS AND OTHERS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The claim of the Marine Cooks, Bakers, and Butchers' Union of Australasia for the fixing of rates of wages payable to the galley staffs of vessels controlled by the Commonwealth Steamship Owners' Association was further heard in the Court of Conciliation and Arbitration to-day.

Mr. Mitchell said that if the men's claim were granted, it would mean a total increase of £2315 per annum for the higher wages claimed. As to the men's statements in regard to accommodation, respondents submitted that they were very much exaggerated. On the Australian coast every class of seafaring men worked under better conditions and wages than in other parts of the world.

Mr. Justice Higgins said he was going to give the respondents the benefit of the fact that they were not called upon to disprove the statements made by the men as to the conditions and accommodation.

Mr. Mitchell: I am satisfied as long as it is made clear to the public that the statements made by the men are not established to your Honor's satisfaction.

The hearing of claim will be resumed on Tuesday.

THE COAL-MINING COMMISSION.

MR. BOWLING'S POSITION.

NEWCASTLE, Friday.

At the meeting of the committee of management of the Miners' Federation to-day, a letter received by the president, Mr. Peter Bowling, from the Premier respecting the former's position on the Coal-mining Commission, was discussed. The letter referred to Mr. Bowling having taken part in the business of the federation when resolutions were passed in connection with the recent trouble at Lymington. The Premier desired the president of the federation to understand that any action or words of his directly or indirectly encouraging the colliery employees of the district to strike, in violation of the law, was incompatible with his continuing to hold his position on the Royal Commission.

The committee expressed resentment at the tone of the letter, and a motion was carried—"That, seeing that our president is only at intervals a Commissioner at the Court, we are of opinion that he has not acted outside his jurisdiction in tendering advice to this federation, or in occupying his position as president, and we fully endorse his action; and that the same be conveyed to the Premier by the secretary."

ENGINEERS' CONFERENCE.

The conference of the Australasian Society of Engineers commenced its sitting at the Trades Hall yesterday. The following delegates were present:—Sydney branch: Messrs. J. R. Swift, H. Henstock, W. The conference will consider the question of forming a federal council, and adopting rules and regulations, with a view to registering under the Federal Arbitration Act.

NATURALISTS' CLUB.

Mr. David G. Stead (president) occupied the chair at the last meeting of the Naturalists' Club, which was particularly interesting on account of the large number of exhibits brought by members. Mr. H. E. Finckh read a paper on the breeding of newts, and Mr. W. B. Gurney showed a parasite of the codlin moth pupa, bred at the Gosford entomological station. Mr. C. Thackeray showed a morbid growth from the inside of a flathead, and Mr. Stead exhibited two snapping turtles (Suppon) from Japan, also the perch-like rifle-fish (Toxotes jaculator), which brings down its prey by means of a well-aimed jet of water, and is often kept by Malayans, under the name of Ikan sumpit, in bowls; a surf-fish (Iso rhothophilus), from Terrigal; photographs of the huge "Fiona" sunfish, and a fungus of the species polyphorus, from Terrigal. Mr. L. Harrison (hon. secretary) exhibited specimens of the wedge-tailed eagle and smaller members of the family, Mr. Sellors some jumping beans from Mexico, and an aquatic insect carrying its eggs on its back. Mr. W. W. Froggatt (the Government Entomologist) sent a fine lot of hawk-moths. The president furnished some information respecting his naturalist rambles between Tuggerah and Terrigal. On Tuggerah Lakes he saw immense flocks of black swans and pelicans, and noted a grove of white mangroves at the base of a cliff. This was the only occurrence of such growth for 300 miles along the coast.

ANGLING.

TROUT AND PERCH.

During the week reports have been received from all the most important trout centres respecting the fish caught at the opening of the season, and published in the "Herald." On the whole, anglers should be well satisfied with the prospects for the rest of the season. The opening is generally slack, but in some places it was what most trout anglers here would call bad. On the other hand, one of our correspondents described as unsatisfactory a catch of twenty trout near Tumut. Twenty trout should satisfy any ordinary party not out for professional purposes, for they should weigh at least 15lb of good fish, even if only of the bare legal weight. There is something wrong somewhere.

The question of what lure should be permitted on our trout rivers must seriously engage the attention of the angling clubs, and the State authorities, unless the old policy of fish how, when, and where you please is to be perpetuated. Trout were placed in our rivers to attract anglers from various parts of the world with money to spend on sport, as well as for other important reasons. To allow people to fish all day and drag out of shallow, clear, fast-running rivers, the trout that have cost so much, without some limit, is absurd. It is no use blinking this matter or handling it in any kid-gloved manner, because people living on the rivers catch trout for food. All the best fly-fishermen of the State are agreed that methods are employed on the trout rivers here, which would not be tolerated for one minute in the older angling countries. The use of the spoon-flash, the devon, the minnow, the halcyon, and other artificial lures should be prohibited or restricted on all the rivers, except those where there are known to be large fish that will not take the fly. The number of fish catchable by any one person should also be limited. There are men who will simply kill fish for the lust of killing, and throw all but the largest away when they finish. Sportsmen generally will not need to be reminded of these things. The true sportsman does not kill and keep on killing beyond reasonable requirements.

When one reads of the Murrumbidgee as a trout river, he has to remember that he is dealing with a magnificent stream, over 400 miles of which are stocked with fish. City people find it hard to realise what this means, but one has only to travel about the southern highlands to hear perpetually of the "Murrum" or the "Bidgee" here, there, and everywhere. Before a novice at trout fishing, therefore, goes on a trout expedition, he should spend a few minutes studying a map, such as he will find in the "Trout Fishing Guide," published by the Intelligence and Tourists' departments. He will then understand that he can make a very wide selection of localities to fish. He will realise later on when he begins to travel about the country, from trout centre to trout centre, what an expense item travel is to him. These remarks are merely preliminary to a suggestion that the Railway Commissioners might find it advantageous to run a special train for anglers, occasionally, at cheap rates to the far-off trout streams.

As the question of advertising the State's resources is one that constantly engages attention, it may not be out of place to suggest that cinematograph pictures of trout work on some of the rivers would be very effective in inducing people belonging to other countries to come here for sport. The idea may be carried further, and a series of pictures secured, dealing with the commercial side of our ocean fisheries. Net fishermen at work, the despatch of the fish to market from places like Tuggerah and Port Stephens, the handling of the baskets on the trains, their receipt in the markets, and scenes in the markets and the city shops, would show the world what an important matter the fisheries are in this part of the world. Our Intelligence Department folk are quick to seize an idea, and perhaps this suggestion may bear good fruit. The idea was mooted for the first time in the State at the Amateur Fishermen's Association meeting last week by Mr. C. Thackeray, and that body is to further consider it.

It is not in the power of everybody to fish for trout, but nearly everyone in the country on a perch river can fish for perch. The sport is a skilful one, and it is one in which the spoon-flash, the halcyon, the devons, and minnows may be used with advantage. Our indigenous perch are very plentiful; so there is not much fear of fishing them out for many years to come, and in the interim the Fisheries Department, which has not yet succeeded in doing much propagation work with perch, will have developed its activities in the desired direction. Mr. H. K. Anderson, an able perch and trout angler, finds much sport and health on coastal rivers fishing for perch. He has just been catching perch for the Fisheries Department, probably for the purpose of stocking the streams near Parramatta. Fishing at Wyong last week-end, he, with a friend, caught 23 perch, most of which he placed in a fish cage for the department. Mr. Anderson never uses the natural bait, but employs exclusively a halcyon of his own make. He finds that the fish are getting shyer at Wyong, necessitating longer casting under obstacles.

A country angler, writing to a city friend, who has been known for years as one of the most skilful trout and perch anglers of the Commonwealth, says, with regard to the perch about Casino on the Richmond:—"We never catch the estuary perch above the rapids about a mile below the town. The river is slightly tidal up to them, and a few miles further down there is a tide of about 2½ to 3 feet. The estuary perch are comparatively scarce, and rather small, being seldom more than a pound weight, although I caught one about a month ago, slightly over three pounds. It was the largest I have ever heard of being caught in this way. They do not give nearly the sport the river perch do. I consider the river perch a better fish to catch and to eat. One was caught about nine miles down the river a week or so ago, weighing 5lb 2oz. I have caught a couple weighing four pounds, but the average lately has been 1½lb. The fish go off late in June, and I have not caught any in July at all, although I had a good haul early in August this year. We always use live bait-shrimp or crickets (sand or black), and occasionally a grasshopper. Nobody in these parts tries artificial flies, but I intend to have a try some time. We have very good sport sometimes at night, trolling with frogs, but it is very hard work, and rather dangerous, on account of the numerous snakes which infest the banks. We sometimes use a spinner at this, but find the frogs better. Perch will not bite at frogs in the day-time. Trout were put in the river some three years ago, and some are being caught up Kyogle way up to about 7lb. They will not do any good about Casino. The river is too slow, and there are no rocky places. A lot of the farmers about are in the habit of using fish-traps, and these spoil the fishing. I have an idea also that a lot of them net. In the lagoons we get another kind of perch, something like the river perch, but blacker. They weigh up to 7lb, and are often caught weighing four pounds. They do not bite often, but when they start they make no mistake."

In the A.F.A. competition at the Hawkesbury last week-end, the winner was Mr. F. Gardner, who, on a 10 per cent. handicap, compiled 20 points. The next in order were W. Griffin 19 points, F. Evans 12 points, and H. Ackland 1 point. The trophy was the gift of Mr. H. Ackland. Poor sport was generally experienced.

Messrs. C. Artis and G. Hollingdale at Port Hacking this week caught a nice lot of red and black bream, and found the trevally plentiful.

A navvy at the Hawkesbury has been doing great execution amongst the large jewfish. Men who fish the place for "jewies" should be prepared for fish that take a large bait, and run out 100 yards of line before being turned.

PROFESSIONS, TRADES, ETC.

C.—THIS YEAR THE SUCCESSES OF THE METROPOLITAN BUSINESS COLLEGE HAVE BEEN OF METEORIC BRILLIANCY.

Our Students were NOT ONLY highly successful in the HIGHEST SPEED RATES in the April I.P.S. SHORTHAND EXAMS., but secured AS MANY THEORY "DISTINCTION" passes as all the other Sydney Colleges combined.

Even this great success has now been eclipsed by a further DECISIVE VICTORY, the acknowledged "Blue Ribbon" of the year, the GOLD MEDAL awarded to the BEST WORK at the HIGHEST RATE (160 words per minute) in the GOLD-MEDAL SHORTHAND COMPETITIONS, held on Saturday, 24th October, 1908, having been won by WM. O. C. DAY, a student of SUMMERHAYES and TURNER'S METROPOLITAN BUSINESS COLLEGE.

Mr. Day was SPECIALLY COACHED for this Examination by T. STANLEY SUMMERHAYES, Sir Isaac Pitman Medallist at 200 words per minute.

We have all the more satisfaction in recording the above RECENT SUCCESSES because we realise that a BUSINESS TRAINING INSTITUTION, if it is to ensure a continuance of public support, must CONTINUE to accomplish successful results. Our LATEST SUCCESSES are our GREATEST.

HABERFIELD.

This Suburb, which is attracting so much attention of late on account of its unusual growth and superior type of buildings, is undoubtedly a district that should be inspected before you come to a conclusion as to the suburb which SHOULD BE YOUR FUTURE RESIDENCE.

That is, if you require a permanent home, and if you are intent upon purchasing such a home. HABERFIELD and the immediately surrounding district comprises an area equal to about one-fourth of the whole area of the borough of Ashfield. HABERFIELD is now known as the North-east Ward of this borough, and is represented by three Aldermen. A few years ago this now famous district was vacant paddocks entirely without municipal representation, and quite unknown to the public on account of its being held by the well-known Ramsay family for grazing purposes. Now in a very short space of time these conditions have changed. We have, by introducing the latest methods, transformed this very fine area into a

DISTRICT OF MOST ARTISTIC AND UP-TO-DATE HOMES.

We have now a very fine Electric Tram Service (10 minutes) running right through the property. We have also an excellent train service to Summer Hill, many trains running through in eight minutes. HABERFIELD, as is well known, is within 5 to 15 minutes of the railway station. The Abbotsford Swimming Baths are within the penny section of HABERFIELD. Ashfield Park, which is upon a small scale, with its wonderful bowling-green, which is just now flying the Champion Pennant, is also in the HABERFIELD District. Many of the HABERFIELD cottages have one, two, to four acres surrounding them, all beautifully laid out in shrubberies, gardens, etc. We have some very attractive cottages now ready for occupation, and we would like very much that you should visit HABERFIELD before going elsewhere, or after going elsewhere, in order to give us an opportunity of showing what we have to sell and giving you a thorough idea of the district.

Nothing is allowed at HABERFIELD other than cottage residences. No Shops,

NO TWO-STORIED HOUSES OR WEATHERBOARDS,

no iron roofs. At the tram section there is a portion set aside for BUSINESS SITES, and business is set apart for this area. The Haberfield Post-office and Stores are all up-to-date. The HABERFIELD Tennis Club grounds are well known. Before long a fine Cricket and Football ground is to be laid out. These and many other attractions are some of the reasons that we would ask you to consider before deciding to purchase elsewhere.

Plans, Pamphlets, and Literature can be obtained on application, and we shall be glad to show you over the Estate at any time suitable to yourself.

We have an office on the Estate at the corner of Kingston-street, at Summer Hill, opp. Railway Station, and our Sydney Office is 109 Pitt-street, near Hunter-street.

BICYCLES AND MOTOR CARS.

DAIMLER. DAIMLER.

FACTS RE DAIMLER CARS.

His Majesty King Edward has recently purchased his eleventh Daimler, whilst other notable Daimler patrons are as follows:—H.I.M. the Emperor of Germany, H.M. the King of Spain, H.M. the King of Siam, H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, H.R.H. the Princess of Wales, H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, and in addition to these Messrs. Dalgety and Co., Ltd., have recently had the honour of supplying his Excellency the Governor-General with a 42-h.p. Daimler Landaulette.

DAIMLER CARS ARE THE CHEAPEST PER HORSE-POWER OF ANY HIGH-CLASS CAR.

For three seasons in succession in Great Britain Daimlers won more reliability and hill-climbing trials than any other make of car.

The Agents have in stock at present some of the latest models, which include, amongst their many improvements—live axle transmission in place of usual chain drive, and a considerable reduction in weight as compared with previous types. Intending purchasers are recommended to inspect these magnificent Cars, which combine strength, grace, efficiency, speed, and comfort.

FORD MOTOR CARS.

THE "FORD" 2 AND 3 SEATED 4-CYLINDER 15-18 H.P. MOTOR CAR, for Professional and Commercial Men, as well as for Pleasure purposes, is equal to the best, and can be seen at the FORD GARAGE, 253-255 ELIZABETH-STREET, CITY.

Do not be prejudiced against these High-class American Cars by dealers interested in other makes; the only enemies of the "FORD" are the handlers of other machines, who ask extravagant prices for Cars that for hill-climbing, rough country work, general utility, reliability, and economy in running, are not in the same class with the "FORD."

The Ford Company are making and selling about 2000 Cars per month. With this enormous output, they can and do insist upon "FORD" Agents selling at a reasonable price. It is this fact that frightens the opposition dealers, whose interest lies in pushing makes on which they still try to obtain big profits.

A household expression in America is:—"Watch the Fords go by." It will seen be the same here.

DO YOU SAY—MR. MOTORIST, when you get a puncture. You do? Well, we want to break you of the habit. It's a bad habit, you know. So we sell a jack—the Quicklift. It affords much greater relief than mere swear words. You simply place it in position and kick it. It power kicks back, and you work off the irritation you feel about the puncture usefully. Place the jack quickly under the axle, then stand up and kick. Every kick you give the jack helps to raise the car and relieve your feelings. In about three kicks the wheel will be off the ground, and you will be so pleased that you will tackle the puncture with a light heart. It is advisable, however, to see that your kick is well directed, because if you miss the jack you'll probably strike the axle and stub your toe. We have known cases of this kind to occur, and have been surprised at the flow of language that followed. The price of the Quicklift is 18/6 for large car size, and 12/6 for small size. YOU CANNOT AFFORD to throw away good money on such cheap flashy Bicycles as are now being offered to the unwary as "B.S.A. Pattern" or as being "interchangeable with B.S.A.'s."

Such descriptions mean nothing, and are purposely misleading. Many of the Bicycles so described by unscrupulous dealers of no standing are built of the most veritable rubbish, with cast-iron lugs, soft bearings, etc., and have about as much resemblance to the GENUINE B.S.A. FITTINGS as iron has to fine steel.

DO NOT BE MISLED.

You cannot go wrong if you insist upon seeing the world-renowned B.S.A. TRADE MARK OF THE "3 PILED RIFLES," which is stamped upon EVERY PART of a genuine B.S.A. Bicycle. No firm has yet approached B.S.A. quality, and it is now possible to obtain genuine B.S.A. Bicycles at such reasonable prices that they are within the reach of every cyclist in Australia.

If you are still in doubt, ask your dealer for a B.S.A. HANDBOOK, which tells you all about B.S.A. Fittings, Free Wheels, Coaster Hubs, Two-speed Hubs, etc.; or write to VICTORIA PARK RACES, MONDAY NEXT (King's Birthday).—The world-famed "Kilties" will play.

IF YOU HAVE A COUPLE OF POUNDS TO SPARE, READ THIS.

There never has been in the history of Sydney such an opportunity for the man of small capital, provided he acts promptly, to invest that capital so profitably as at MAROUBRA BAY. Each succeeding year finds the land round our ocean beaches being bought up. Each buyer fills a gap and drives the next comer farther from the water front. Each succeeding year sees the land growing more expensive in price. The is your particular opportunity. What MAROUBRA BAY is likely to be in a few years' time we need not tell you. What we do wish to impress upon you is that £10 now will go further than £20 will in a couple of years' time. The terms are 10 per cent. down, the balance in 4 years, with 5 per cent. interest added. The Title is Torrens, and the opportunity is the last you will get of securing a block at the prices this land will bring. The roads are not yet made, but as they will be made in about 3 months, the land will then be worth considerably more than it is to-day. Get off the tram at Alexander-street, Coogee, and walk up Arden-street, from which point, from 11.30, A FREE SEVEN-MINUTE SERVICE OF WAGGONETTES will leave for Maroubra Bay. Hot water will be supplied free to picnickers at the Red Flag Tent.

AUCTION ANNOUNCEMENT.

LILIANFELS PARK, KATOOMBA.

We desire to draw attention to this BEAUTIFUL AND UNIQUE PARK, which for many years has been owned by and in the occupation of the Chief Justice, Sir Frederick M. Darley, and which, by his courtesy, has been used by the Public as a favourite recreation and picnic park.

Acting under instructions, we are subdividing this Estate into Villa Sites, the Surveyors and Contractors being now at work on the land, and we will submit it for sale by public auction early in January next.

The Building Sites are to be of liberal dimensions, and, in order to protect the buyers, a BUILDING COVENANT will be placed on each block.

Our ambition is to have LILIANFELS PARK converted into the best and most favoured quarter of Katoomba.

It will be sold on liberal terms, but we do not contemplate giving the very easy terms (nominal deposit and small monthly payments) so much in vogue just now, as our desire is to attract HIGH-GRADE PURCHASERS, this Estate being one worthy of stately residences; and it should become a residential quarter that will be the pride of the beautiful township of Katoomba.

Lithographs will be prepared in due course.

All those in any way interested in this matter will oblige by favouring us with a call, or if they make an appointment one of our Principals will see them and give an outline of our scheme of subdivision.

CLOSER SETTLEMENT.

IDEAL WHEAT-GROWING, STOCK-FATTENING, WOOL-GROWING, AND DAIRY LANDS.

SUBDIVISION OF THE WELL-KNOWN

WAGGA WAGGA, N.S.W.,

ONE MILE FROM URANQUINTY RAILWAY STATION.

TO BE SOLD BY AUCTION AT THE ODDFELLOWS' HALL, WAGGA WAGGA, AT 2 P.M.,

ON TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 10th, 1908,

19,240 ACRES FREEHOLD LAND.

TORRENS TITLE.

SUBDIVIDED INTO 22 FARMS. AREAS FROM 400 TO 1300 ACRES.

AVERAGE RAINFALL: 24 INCHES. VIRGIN SOIL.

NOTE THE IDEAL SITUATION.

SITUATION.—"Sandy Creek" is situated on the main Southern line (Wagga Wagga to Albury). One mile from URANQUINTY RAILWAY STATION and Township, three-quarters of a mile from BON ACCORD RAILWAY STATION, and nine miles from the WAGGA WAGGA RAILWAY STATION, TOWNSHIP, BUTTER FACTORY, and FLOUR MILL, and only 70 miles from ALBURY and the VICTORIAN Border.

SOIL.—A large proportion of the Estate is DEEP RED SOIL and RICH CREEK FLATS, all especially suited for WHEAT-GROWING. The whole is VIRGIN SOIL, except a small area.

WHEAT.—There is NO FINER WHEAT-GROWING LAND IN THE STATE. Lands immediately joining have been cropped from 25 to 30 years, and are still under cultivation and growing good crops.

STOCK AND WOOL.—The property has also been known for years for its excellent STOCK CARRYING and FATTENING and WOOL-GROWING QUALITIES. During the recent drought it carried over a sheep to the acre without loss, and marked nearly 60 per cent. of lambs.

FAT LAMBS.—The raising of FAT LAMBS promises to be one of the most profitable industries in the State, and the PROXIMITY to the RAILWAY STATION and the character of the soil make the property particularly well adapted for this industry.

GENERAL SUITABILITY OF THE LANDS.—To those in search of farms where WHEAT-GROWING, LAMB and SHEEP FATTENING, WOOL-GROWING, and DAIRYING can be carried on under the easiest, pleasantest, and most profitable conditions, inspection is confidently recommended.

Both Sydney and Melbourne Markets are available for Stock and Produce.

TIMBER.—The Property is VERY LIGHTLY TIMBERED, and the timber being dead for 30 years, the lands can be cleared ready for the plough at very small cost in plenty of time for next season's ploughing.

WATER.—The Property is ABUNDANTLY and PERMANENTLY WATERED by numerous SPRINGS and TANKS, besides double frontage to Sandy Creek, which runs through nearly the whole Estate, and is fed by never-failing Springs.

EACH BLOCK TO BE OFFERED WILL BE SPLENDIDLY WATERED.

SCHOOLS, Etc.—There are GOOD SCHOOLS, with large attendances, at both URANQUINTY and WAGGA WAGGA, the latter a most progressive township, having a population of 6000, which is rapidly increasing and providing an excellent LOCAL MARKET for stock, farm, garden, orchard, and dairy produce.

RAILWAY.—THE RAILWAY TRAIN stops and passes Uranquinty from Sydney twice daily, except Sunday, and also from Melbourne, via Albury, twice daily, except Sunday, bringing the property into direct touch with both Metropolitan markets. It will thus be seen that the railway facilities are quite exceptional, and enhance materially the profit-earning capabilities of the lands. The wonderful prosperity of farmers in the neighbourhood is evidence of the richness of the lands.

POSSESSION OF THE FARMS SOLD WILL BE GIVEN ON 15th JANUARY, 1909.

Buyers will be driven to inspect from Uranquinty or Wagga Wagga by arrangement with the Auctioneers.

TERMS.—The Lands will be sold on the most liberal terms, viz.:—10 per cent. deposit, 10 per cent. 1st March, 1909, balance in ten equal annual instalments commencing 1st March, 1910. Interest at 5 per cent., which will only be charged from the date of taking possession, viz.: 15th January, 1909.

REDUCED RAILWAY FARES.—Arrangements have been completed with the Intelligence Department by which those desirous of inspecting Sandy Creek may do so at REDUCED RAILWAY FARES WITHIN NEW SOUTH WALES. All particulars may be obtained on application to the Intelligence Department, Martin-place, Sydney.
